

LEGAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

CITATION.

In the County Court, for the County of Marion, State of Oregon.—
In the Matter of the Estate of Helen Mize, a minor:—

To Mrs. Stella Mize and all other persons interested in said Estate:—
Whereas, application having been made in due form to the above-named Court on the eighteenth day of April, 1900, by John H. Scott, guardian of said minor, for an order and license directing, authorizing and empowering him to sell the Real Estate belonging to the said minor, and described as follows, to-wit: East 1/2 of lots 5 and 6 in Block 3 in Southwest Addition to the City of Salem, Marion County, Oregon.

And, whereas, said Court fixed on the twenty-third day of May, 1900, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court Room of this County in the Court House in Marion County and State of Oregon, as the time and place for hearing any and all objections to said Petition and the granting of said order and license of sale.

Therefore, in the Name of the State of Oregon, You and each of you are hereby cited, directed and required to be and appear at said time and place then and there to show cause, if any you have or if any exist, why an order of sale should not be made, as in the Petition prayed for, and why said Petition should not be granted and said order and license should not issue.

Witness, the Hon. G. P. Terrell, Judge of said Court, with the seal of said Court affixed this eighteenth day of April, A. D. 1900.

W. W. HALL, Clerk.
By A. McCulloch, Deputy, w-4t.

SUMMONS.

In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Marion County.—Department No. 1.

A. S. Cone, plaintiff, vs. B. F. Cone, defendant.

To B. F. Cone, the above named defendant:

In the name of the State of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled court and cause within six weeks from the date of the first publication of this summons, to-wit: the sixth day of April, 1900, and if you fail so to appear and answer said complaint, or otherwise plead, plaintiff will take judgment against you for the sum of $703 with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from the nineteenth day of December, 1893, less the sum of $300 paid on account thereon on July 24, 1894; for the sum of $75 special attorneys fee in said action, and for his costs and disbursements incurred therein.

Notice is hereby further given you, that this summons is served upon you by publication thereof in the Oregon Statesman, a weekly newspaper of general circulation in Marion County, State of Oregon, printed and published at the city of Salem in said county and state, by order of the Honorable Geo. H. Burnett, judge of the above entitled court, made on the thirty-first day of March, 1900, and the date of the first publication of this summons in this newspaper is April 6, 1900.

H. J. BIGGER,
Attorney for Plaintiff.

BRYAN AT HOME.

He Will Soon Stop Campaigning and Take a Rest.

Lincoln, Neb., April 26.—Wm. J. Bryan returned to his Lincoln home today, and with the exception of a week's campaigning in Michigan and Northern Ohio, beginning next Monday, he will remain here almost uninterruptedly until after the National Democratic Convention. Bryan said, his health was excellent. He said he would not attend the National Democratic Convention.

FOR HEBREW ORPHANS.

Brooklyn, April 26.—The Booth Dramatic Society presented David Belasco's "Charity Ball" at the Academy of Music for the benefit of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum tonight. The advance sale of seats was large.

THE "NEW BOY."

The "new boy" is of later origin than the "new woman," said Mrs. Joseph V. Witherbee, who lectured recently in Brooklyn. He can make his own bed, sew buttons on his own clothing, cook his own breakfast and wash the dishes if necessary, and he is no longer considered a "sissy" for so doing. He can carry on successfully a bachelor establishment for his father and himself, make out the menus, hire the domestics and even do his part socially, without losing his place among the first six in school.

The "new boy" is the result of a growing belief among mothers and educators that domestic training is just as good for boys as girls. They argue that a domestic trained boy makes the best kind of husband, and that the brother who is obliged occasionally to make his own bed or boil an egg will not look down on his sister for doing these same things. Also, that the girl who can use her brother's kit of tools will no longer consider him a superior being because the tools are his property rather than hers. Again, the advocates of domestic training for boys say that, while there will always be a division of occupations in the family, as in society, there is this difference in the family—that in those occupations which relate to the common life there ought to be a common performance, else the division of labor will result in a division of feeling and of thought.

MIRAGE.

Treasure the shadow. Somewhere, firmly based,
Arise those turrets that in cloud-land shine;
Somewhere, to thirsty toilers of the waste,
Yon phantom well-spring is a living sign.

Treasure the shadow. Somewhere, past thy sight,
Past all men's sight, waits the true heaven at last;
Tell them whose fear would put thy hope to flight,
There are no shadows save from substance cast.
—Edith M. Thomas, in November Lippincott's.

Dodson—Do you think that a woman is mentally equal to a man?
Hilary—Equal? She is always above him. There is my wife, for instance. When we get home from church she can always tell me what the text was, and more than that, she can tell what every woman in the meeting house had on, and give a pretty close estimate of what it cost and how long it had been worn.—Boston Transcript.

OREGON SCHOOL LAWS

AND CONSTITUTION OF OREGON

NEATLY BOUND IN BOOK FORM...

We have printed an edition of the School Laws of Oregon and the Constitution.

So far as the School Laws are concerned, it is an exact copy of the pamphlet issued by the State, which is now exhausted, and of which no more will be printed until after the meeting of the next legislature.

School districts are authorized to expend public funds to supply each member of the board with a copy of the School Laws, because this is essential to the proper discharge of the duties of any school officer.

Every teacher should have a copy of the School Laws and Constitution, because each one is required to pass on these for every grade of certificate, both county and state.

We will mail single copies at 25 cents each. Orders of 10 for $2; 50 for $7.50; 100 for $12.50.

HUNDREDS OF EMPLOYEES BEYOND THREE-SCORE.

Reports by the Various Government Offices in Response to a Request From the Senate.

A special to the Times from Washington says: The Senate recently adopted a resolution calling upon the heads of departments to inform the Senate as to the number of employees in the departments, together with their ages, and a statement as to the number incapacitated for any reason. The answers have been coming in from day to day, and they contain some suggestive facts.

The report from the Treasury shows that there were 331 employees between 60 and 64 years old; 100 between 65 and 69 years; 56 between 70 and 74 years; 24 between 75 and 79 years, and to who are over 80 years old.

Fourteen persons in the office of the Auditor of the War Department are partially lacking in the physical or mental capacity necessary for the full discharge of their official duties. About fifty persons in different bureaus are physically disqualified for manual but not for clerical service. Seven persons in the office of the chief clerk of the Treasury are physically or mentally incapacitated in part for manual labor.

In the Interior Department there are 162 employees between the ages of 65 and 69 years, inclusive; 58 between 70 and 74 years, inclusive; 28 between 75 and 79 years inclusive, and 4 who are over 80 years of age. The total number of employees in the department is 2,255. Presidential appointees and laborers are not included in these figures. From the estimates furnished by the different bureaus and offices of the department, it may be stated that something over 250 persons now on the rolls must be considered as permanently incapacitated, either physically or mentally, for the performance of manual labor in whole or in part. This condition, in many cases, results from the loss of limbs, old wounds or health impaired in the government service.

ARTIFICIAL SPONGES.

Artificial sponges are being made in Germany by Dr. Gustav Pum, of Graz. His experiments are based upon the action of zinc chloride solution upon pure cellulose, says the Trade Journal's Review. The resultant product swells enormously with water, but turns to a horn-like substance on drying. In order to retain for the product the property for also absorbing water after drying, alkali-haloids are employed in treating the cellulose with the zinc chloride. The mass after manipulation and molding is said to take the place of sponge in all its uses. It is claimed that a real rubber substitute may come from this field.

The girl with laughing eyes and honest little heart is a veritable sunbeam wherever she goes. Her naturalness is so charming. You who are tired of the shame and disappointments of life are so glad to meet her. She may be plain of features and wear gowns that are by no means "creations," but how much more lovely and lovable is she than the girl who gowns herself in the most beautiful of raiment and practices before her glass her little society part.

The University of Edinburgh has decided to confer the LL. D. degree on Miss Eleanor Ormond, who will be the first woman to receive the honor from this university.

IN BUENOS AYRES

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM MRS. W. P. LORD.

Description of the Family's Voyage to South America—Their Beautiful Home and Surroundings.

Mrs. B. F. Bonham is in receipt of a long letter from Mrs. W. P. Lord, of this city, now temporarily a resident of Buenos Ayres, Argentine Republic, where her husband, ex-Gov. W. P. Lord, is the diplomatic representative of the United States Government. The letter is extremely interesting, treating at length of the trip to South America, and the beautiful quarters of the American mission in that far-famed city. By the courtesy of Mrs. Bonham, the Statesman is permitted to give its readers, this morning, a few excerpts from Mrs. Lord's letter:

"You will see by the heading that we are in our station, where we have been fixed for a month.

"We had a most delightful trip across the ocean, both to England and the balance of the trip, and was very enjoyable. The sea was like a lake and we only had a guard at the table a few times. We had but two days in England—one of those was spent in London, which seemed a very little time to see so very much. We spent the greater part of that in Westminster Abbey, and we found one very peculiar coincidence. I have two ancestors there; one of them was in the same enclosure with an ancestor of my husband's—side by side.

"We had a very agreeable set of passengers on the steamer Mark, to South America, some wealthy Argentines returning from a year or two of travel abroad, and some English and Germans, who did not get on well at the start on account of the unpleasantness in South Africa, but managed to smooth up things to make the voyage agreeable. The English were very forbearing. We had quite a jolly day crossing the line, which was celebrated with games and fun, and potatoes, ending with a big banquet and a dance at night. Emperor William's birthday was another gala occasion, when all the decks were swathed in flags, the American in the post of honor, and next—the emperor's own; banquet, toasts and a great dance at night—on deck—where two German officers in costume executed a 'crazy walk' of all things. All the music was American, and much of it ragtime. The voyage was, beyond question, a most delightful one, and the novel experiences for such provincials as ourselves, were quite worth coming for. I found, for the first time in twenty years, that the knowledge of the French language was a most desirable thing. I was able to hold up my end of talk with the Argentines. As they can usually talk three languages—French, Spanish and German, and sometimes English, too—they don't think much of people that have but one.

"One of the Argentines is quite a distinguished lawyer; he had been collecting books in England, in the most costly binding. He brought me Brice's Commonwealth, and told me he had read it all through three times. He was such an ardent admirer of the United States, and actually knew more of the constitution, politics and history of our country than Americans themselves knew. There was also a doctor, who had been traveling with his family, wife and daughter, a year or so. He was buying for the hospitals here, and was studying Weir Mitchell, and, as he understood our language but little, made slow work of it. I read and explained English with him every day, and he started me in Spanish, talking French between whiles. His wife could only talk French, so you see we were a very cosmopolitan crowd. One of the German officers told me he spoke seven languages. I found him haranguing some Basques over the rail; they fastened a boat to the guards and were cheating the steerage passengers in their fruit purchases.

"We arrived here the hottest day I ever knew, but fortunately, it was about 6 p. m. before we were at last landed, and 7 when we finally got to the hotel. It seems the citizens were in a state of panic from the unusual heat, which was not alone responsible for the great mortality, but for want of ozone in the air. There had been seventy-nine deaths that day, and some 500 cases of cholera. That was the third day of such severe affliction. Several had died who were not in the sun, but remained quietly at home. Havemeyer lost his son—he dropped dead after drinking a glass of cold water. His funeral was the next day after we came, and there was no one of his friends to attend it, only a few Spanish. Fortunately a hard thunder shower that night restored to some extent the usual order of things. Everyone says, of course, that such a thing was never before known in Buenos Ayres. The weather, however, remained hot and so very enervating to us—so unaccustomed to such heat—that we were all but prostrated, and could not sleep at night.

"We had, notwithstanding, a great many calls, and a very hearty welcome which, of course, pleasantly occupied us."

"As soon as the weather permitted, I began a search for a home, and was so fortunate as to find one admirably adapted to the Mission. There is an unusual exodus among the very wealthy who will make the Paris exposition the occasion for a year abroad, so that a class of houses can be obtained, for a year, not often to be had at any price, as the owners prefer to have them occupied. Rents, however, under any circumstances, here are beyond any city in the world, and living is in proportion. Our house, as we are now settled, is in the swell part of town, near the other diplomatic corps, and quite as fine as any of them, so far as outfitting goes, though not as large.

"The entrance is very beautiful, of solid marble, with staircase and pillars highly polished, with most exquisite mosaic flooring and beautiful electric light. There are two doors—the street door, massive and the inner door at the top of the flight of marble, of beautiful stained glass, all specially designed in Paris. All the floors are polished and of inlaid woods or handsome tiling. The salon is in exquisite taste, with a magnificently draped windows of embroidered velvet and real lace, and the walls adorned with rare water colors by artists of renown. Two exquisite cabinets of Vignon, two beautiful marbles and four grand vases of Sevres, with piano. The wood is dull white, elaborately carved and furniture embroidered to match, and beautiful fresco.

"The dining room has a mahogany table for eighteen, with sideboard built into the room, and fire place to match, both backed by superb mirrors—all in mahogany, hand carved. On the sideboard, which nearly covers one end of the room, are three magnificent bronzes, two being a support to the globe for the electric light, and the center piece a superb work of art—David and Goliath from Bardiennes, in Paris. The windows open in French fashion and are of exquisite stained glass, and the walls are paneled in mahogany, with interstices filled with Lincrusta Walton. The mantle has also a rare clock and candelabra of rare design and great value.

"Opening from this is a butler's pantry with exquisite china and glass, for twenty-four persons, and silver—all at our disposal. So we will be able to give a diplomatic dinner at home, which has not been done before.

"Between the salon and stairway is a fine reception room and across the dining room hallway a small, but exquisitely appointed library. Upstairs we have just the right number of bedrooms, with two bath rooms, in tiles and marble, and the sleeping apartments are as beautifully appointed as the lower part of the house, the furniture being, much of it, built into the rooms, and in charming proportions.

"The inventory of belongings covered eight sheets of foolscap, and required four hours to identify, and we are to enjoy the house for just what it would rent for ordinarily without furnishing. "The maid, who specially attended the mistress, and has lived here some years, remains with me, and there again I find French desirable, as she can only speak Spanish and French, which latter is her language. As all of the people with whom we have to deal speak only Spanish, it would be very awkward for me. I tell her in French what I want, and she buys in Spanish, submitting accounts and explaining. She has been a French governess.

"I have been quite busy making my calls on the diplomatic corps, and was received in the most friendly manner, the most of them being returned in 48 hours. The Marchioness de Malaspina I found at the house of the French Minister, and she at once attacked me in French. I told her, in that language that I was going to give her an opportunity to air her English which, I had heard, was exceptionally fine. She laughed and at once went on talking as good English as I do—or, rather, American—and she is very bright and witty. "I think I shall enjoy very much, for a time, the unusual surroundings and acquaintances who are evidently people of great culture. The schools, though, are very disappointing. Willie is at school and will make most of the great opportunity for languages. Bessie is at home and may have to procure private teachers. There is nothing better than American schools for Americans, so that it is possible I shall take the children home in a year."

THE MEN BEHIND DEWEY.

The figures behind Dewey have now become distinctly visible. At the head stands John McLean, who was defeated in Ohio last November. Mr. McLean is a shifty politician whose ambitions in the way of political preferment have not been realized. He was thought at one stage of the Ohio campaign to have had some chance to be elected Governor, but the chance, remote as it was, caused a good many Democrats to vote one of the opposing tickets. If McLean had been elected Governor he would probably have come out openly as a Presidential aspirant, but defeat checked that ambition. Admiral Dewey returned home while the Ohio campaign was in progress, and before McLean had made up his mind not to be a Presidential candidate himself. The fatal delay in starting the Dewey campaign may be attributed to Mr. McLean's doubt as to his own candidacy. Possibly some time elapsed after Dewey's return home before he reached the conclusion that the office of President was an easy one to fill.

Among other figures in the small Dewey procession are Perry Belmont and Brook Adams. The former inherited several millions, and considerable ability. He first gained political notoriety through an altercation with Secretary Blaine in a committee room, who made Belmont temporarily famous by asking after the altercation was over: "Who is this young man?" Brook Adams is a younger brother of Charles Francis Adams, who is restive under the shadow of his brother's historical name. Both Belmont and Adams are identified with the gold wing of the Democratic party and are mainly anxious to secure the defeat of Mr. Bryan. Their influence in the coming campaign will depend largely upon the attitude Richard Croker may assume. Mr. Croker's friendliness for Bryan is not supposed to be of a character that would stand much pressure. He fully realizes the unpleasantness of his position if Bryan should be elected without his aid and co-operation. A Democratic national administration that did not recognize Tammany in the distribution of Federal patronage would menace Mr. Croker's leadership of Tammany.

At the present time the small smooth-bore gun Dewey is playing with is not directed toward McKinley. Republicans who are not in accord with the President's expansion policy turned from Dewey when he signed the preliminary report of the Schurman Philippine Island Commission. Should Dewey run as an independent candidate he would hardly draw a vote from McKinley. If he should run as a gold Democrat against Bryan he would almost certainly poll a smaller vote than if he should declare himself independent of any party—except the Dewey party.—S. F. Bulletin.
