Our statistical friend, John P. Robertson, has a communication in this issue, in which he seeks to explain a recent publication issued from the Treasury Department. The burden, as we take it, is that silver money is better than gold money, be- Is boundless. Yet it is utterly helpless cause it stays in this country (though mostly in the Treasury vaults), while the gold money goes to foreign countries or is melted and used in the arts. The reason why silver coins are not exported or used in the arts is obvious. It is taken money, and more valuable as such than as metal. Gold has the same value in any of its forms, incoins or melted in bars, because its weight, and so passes, excepting on the Pacific coast, where it is used in business transactions, going from hand to hand. Admitting all of Mr. Robertson's statements to be true, nothing is proved in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver. In fact, that contection is relegated to the past. It has no force any longer. It is practs cally abandoned, even in the house of its friends. This is on account of the past. It has no account of the course for the free and unlimited coinage. TO PREVENT DECAY.

Recognized by National, State and Municipal Governments. The fame of Avenarius Carbolineum has steadily extended, as the only bona fide preserver of wood, since its discovery in Germany thirty years ago. It This is illustrated by the article in has stood all tests of climate, soil and water and steadily lived down all pretended rivals. Today it is not only employed in all countries for the preservation of wood used for household artieles such as houses, barns, fences, etc., but the national government, both of Europe and America, have recogstructions from decay. Following their example cities and counties have also adopted avenarius carbolicum for graph poles and ties with the same never failing preventative against climatie decay and repacious wood boring vermin both of land and water, Great bodies move slowly, and only act after mature deliberation. It may therefore be safely stated that governments and corporations did not employ avenarius carbolineum until fully convinced of its money saving as well as wood preserving qualities. Private individuals desirous of lengthening the life of wood work and at the same time curtailing expenses, need not fear to follow the precedents established.

Recent local examples proving the truth of the above statements are not wanting. The reconstructed Madison street bridge in Portland has been treated with avenarius carbolineum, as has also the pavement at the intersection of four streets in that city where the heaviest street car and wagon traffic converge. The latter use of the compound was made at the earnest solicitation of street car managers who confidently look for gratifying results.

The gentlemen in charge of the United States engineer department for Oregon are now applying avenarius carbolincum to the dams and lock work on 2. He says: "The total gold coinage the Yambill river, a flattering tribute satisfied the authorities that it was a measure of practical economy.
