SAMPSON'S SON IS TO GO TO ANNAPOLIS. President Has Appointed the Lad a Candidate, and He Will Enter the Famous School.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 27.—The hero that Ralph Sampson worships most is his father. It is the ambition of the boy to sail the seas and follow in his illustrious father's footsteps.

Admiral Sampson has two sons, sturdy lads, intelligent, ambitious and patriotic in a high degree. They are favorites at the navy yard and in naval circles wherever they go.

Ralph cannot enter until 1902. This means two years of hard study, which the youngster says he is not in the least afraid of, and a look at his best earnest face would convince one that this is true.

The first time he attended school after these impressions had taken root from his seat and stood up at his desk at the first strains of "America." At this all the children in the room began to laugh and matters were made very uncomfortable for the little boy, but he stood his ground, determined to salute the national air if no one else did.
