Perils of Our Presidents.

All of our Presidents have been in the habit of mingling freely with the people, usually without any particular precaution being made for their safety. The danger of this has been so em phatically pointed out in the last, few months, that wise statesmen suggest is also cause for great danger in many of the sp-called remedies advertised for storiach, liver and bowel complaints. The safest medicine to take is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It has been before the public for fifty years, and has always been found safe and reliable in cases of nervousness, in-somnia, indig- on, dyspepsia and malaria, fever and ague. It therefore occupies the feremost position in the list of household remedies, and no family should be without it.

WHERE RILEY'S "HOME FOLKS" LIVE."

Greenfield, where James Whiteomb Riley's "home folks", live, is a thriving Indiana town some twenty miles east of the state capital, on the old National Road, "the main highway from East to West-historic in its day." running between Washington and St. Louis. In the melodious verses of Greenfield's beloved poet, the place figures as a modest little village, nestling cozily amid its native woods and fields and teeming with hearts that throb in neighborly love and good fellowship-a place where everyone is content with the quiet village life and interests, and where "Howdy, Jim?" is uttered with heartfelt sincerity. Such was the Greenfield of other years. The Greenfield of today, trim in its modern dress and up-to-date culture and metropolitan airs, is as different as is its popular poet from the barefoot country lad of former times. Even the Riley homestead bears traces of modern handlwork. But "Old Brandywine" is still "the same old stream;" and "the Pine mantles and grates, grill work, old swimming-hole" and the gnarled show cases and office fixtures, a sp old trees under which Almon Keefer cialty.
