WEATHER AND CROP BULLETIN

Issued by Oregon Section of the Agricultural Department

SHOWING THE CONDITIONS OF FALL-SOWN WHEAT TO BE IN EXCELLENT CONDITION — HOP YARDS ARE REPORTED AS LOOKING FINE IN VALLEY.

The United States Department of Agriculture has resumed the publication of its climate and crop bulletin, issued by the Oregon Section of the Weather Bureau, annually, during the spring and summer. This report is of great interest to the farmers throughout the State, and its publication is hailed with delight by its many regular readers. The issue to hand gives the following interesting information regarding crops and weather in Oregon:

General Summary.

Abnormally cool weather has prevailed during the past week over the entire State. In the western section moderately heavy showers have occurred almost daily, while in the eastern section they were principally confined to the first few days, the latter half of the week being cloudy.

The maximum, or day temperatures in Western Oregon ranged between 44 degrees and 64 degrees, and the minimum temperatures between 34 and and 48 degrees. In Eastern Oregon the maximum temperatures ranged between 42 degrees and 64 degrees, and the minimum temperatures between 24 and 38 degrees.

Light frosts have frequently occurred but they have caused little or no damage to fruit or vegetation, owing to the backwardness of the season.

The cool, showery weather has been unfavorable for farm work and the growth of vegetation. Fall-sown wheat and oats are in good condition. Winter wheat is still backward, and the spring-sown is slow in germinating. Warm, sunshiny weather is badly needed to bring the wheat crop up to its normal condition. Hop yards are looking fine, and in some sections the vines will soon be ready to train. Thus far there are no complaints of missing hills.

Grass has maintained a slow but steady growth throughout the week, and pasturage in the western section is reported to be in good condition. In the eastern section the weather has been too cool for satisfactory growth to ensue, and as a result feed is short on the ranges.

Fair progress has been made in garden and potato planting. In Southern Oregon and portions of the Willamette Valley early planted gardens are up and looking well. Peaches, apricots, early plums, prunes and some varieties of cherries are in full bloom. Stock is improving.

Coast District.

Johnson, Lincoln county, G. S. Parmile.—Heavy, cold rain with hail each day during the last week. White frost Thursday morning. Grass has grown as fast as usual during the week.

Knappa, Clatsop county, W. H. Radcliffe.—The past week has been cold and wet, with hail and frost. Grain is coming up slowly; grass is backward; some potatoes have been planted; but little gardening is done; some early fruit trees are trying to bloom.

Willamette Valley.

Laurance, Marion county, M. Luetta Cawood.—The past week has been damp, with low temperature and frequent frosts Farmers continue plowing on high land. Cherry trees and early plums are in full bloom. Fall wheat is looking well, and the general outlook is that this year will be an excellent one for good crops and abundant fruits.

Pedee, Polk county, C. W. Pagett.—Unfavorable weather has interrupted farm work during the greater part of the week, and while seasonably low temperature has prevailed, there has been no perceptable check to the growth of grass and other crops. Fruit prospects are good; some early vegetables have been planted. Hop yards are in good condition.

Cottage Grove, Lane county, Richard Topp.—Grain is in good condition. Ground too wet yet to work much, but some gardens have been planted; potatoes and other early vegetables being put in. Early fruit trees are beginning to bloom. Grass in pastures is good.

Albany, Linn county, Cyrus H. Walker.—The cold, stormy weather during the past week was not favorable for crop growth, and practically stopped farming operations, however, hundreds of acres of prairie land had been plowed, and with a few days of drying weather seeding will proceed rapidly. Considerable spring grain has been sown on river bottoms and on the high lands along the western slopes of the Cascade mountains. There is a magnificent prospect for a large fruit crop of all kinds. Peach and some varieties of cherry, prune and plum trees are in bloom.

Southern Oregon.

Glendale, Douglas county, Mrs. Fannie Miller.—Frosts occurred on the 8th and 10th doing little damage. Fall-sown grain is making good growth; barley is not doing so well. Spring-sown grain is making a good start. Gardening going on rapidly. Vegetation is coming out nicely. Wild strawberries are in blossom. Weather showery. Cool southwest winds.

Wilderville, Josephine county, J. M. Hoxie.—It has been rather stormy this week, but grain and grass are making a fine growth. Garden stuff is being planted; gardens planted early are up. Farmers are well along with their work. Alfalfa and clover are making rapid growth. All fruit trees are in bloom, except apples. Hops are growing fine; but few missing hills.

Buncum, Jackson county, J. Parks.—Weather fine; wheat improving; spring seeding up and looking nice and strong; early gardens are planted; spring plowing about complete; alfalfa seeding finished for the season; ground is in fine condition for planting; range feed is short, but stock is improving in flesh very fast; no losses reported by stock men.

Columbia River Valley.

Victor, Wasco county, W. H. Talcott.—Spring sowing is almost done and farmers are plowing summer fallow; fall wheat is looking good, but needs warmer weather. We had a fine rain on the 6th. Frost on the night of the 10th and 11th. The weather during the week has been cloudy.

Lexington, Morrow county, Edwin R. Beach.—The weather has been cold most of the week; snow fell one night, but was gone early in the morning; warmer Friday. Grain and grass are growing slowly. Every kind of vegetation is very late. The snow is still in sight on the near mountains. Water in the creek has been high most of the week; the result of mountain storms.

Plateau Regions.

Baker City, Baker county, W. C. McGuinness.—The wheat in this vicinity is growing nicely. There has been killing frost, but nothing is susceptible to its ravages. Trees are budding for leaves, and grass is becoming green. Stock is being turned out to pasture. The air is yet cool, but plowing and planting are in progress.

RESULT OF BRAWL

EFFORT TO PUT ONE MAN UNDER BONDS TO KEEP THE PEACE FAILED.

(From Wednesday's Statesman.)

Emil Beier yesterday filed complaint in Justice of the Peace J. O'Donald's court, against Charley Pugh, charging him with having threatened violence to plaintiff's person and asked the court to put Pugh under bonds to keep the peace. The matter was given a hearing at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Justice O'Donald, C. L. McNary representing the state, with C. M. Inman as associate counsel for the prosecuting witness, and John A. Carson for the defendant.

From the testimony given at the hearing it appears that the trouble originally emanated through Emil Beier while in the employ of one John Hamilton, engaged in cutting wood upon the property of Mrs. Joan Pugh, wife of the defendant, which led Mrs. Pugh to appeal to the Circuit Court to enjoin Hamilton from cutting any more wood upon her premises. On Friday of last week, Pugh, Beier and others met at a neighbors and entered into a social game of cards, during which a quantity of hard cider was imbibed. In the course of the brawl which followed the wood subject was broached and this led up to hard feelings and finally resulted in a fight between Pugh and Beier, in which Beier was worsted, and he came to town on Saturday afternoon and entered a charge of assault and battery against Pugh to which the latter plead guilty and paid a fine of $5. Later Beier complained that Pugh threatened him bodily injury and sought to have him put under bonds.

The court, after hearing the case, concluded that sufficient evidence had not been introduced to prove or convince that any threats of a serious nature had been made and the defendant was discharged.

EATS GLASS WHEN ANGRY.

Apparently well authenticated comes the report that Joseph Goddard, when angry, eats glass to cool his wrath, and finds the novel remedy efficacious. Where an ordinary man would kick the cat or smash the furniture or get drunk as a safety valve for his rage, Goddard seizes a tumbler or decanter and devours it, with evident satisfaction. Goddard has evidently hit upon a great discovery, but it remains for other men to take it up and perfect it. If glass has such a soothing effect upon the human mind, there is practically no limit to its uses as a moral agent Each person should be supplied with a month's rations of glass and the effect noted. There would no doubt be a great falling off in all species of crime due to violent outbreaks of temper. There would be no murders, no divorces, no wars. Of course it would require some persuasion to make the public take to glass, but when the advantages are pointed out it would soon accede. And everything should be done to make the vitreous substance palatable. It could be put up with tomato sauce or in sirup. Eaten as a sandwich, it would minimize the dangers of a picnic party slaying each other, to which there is a constant temptation. Care should be taken that a sufficient quantity of eating-glass should always be on hand, so that no one in a fit of rage would bite holes in the window panes or eat all the incandescent light globes. There is meat in this idea of Goddard's.

LOOKING FOR NO. 1.

Some of the manifestations of the self-life according to Dr. Watson, in the "Way of Faith," are: A disposition to look at everything with an eye to how it will affect ourselves. It is an instinctive, wide-awake looking out for what we call No. 1. There is a disease in the roots of some trees and vegetables called "root-knot," which causes the roots, instead of stretching themselves out in the soil, to curl themselves back into a knot, stunting the growth and preventing fruit. The self-life is always unwittingly magnifying itself. It will talk incessantly of its doing and great achievements; it will relate incidents in its past life in such a way as to show off self to the best advantage. A soul affected with mental root-knot is always turning back upon itself, and if it preaches, or prays, or sings, or gives money, or enters any enterprise, it has a keen faculty of seeing how the results will affect its own honor, or reward, or happiness.

MISSIONARIES.

What Are They Doing?—Are They Conquering.

Asia is the center of interest in the world at this time. Is there any prospect of it becoming a Christian land?

This is an ideal which, judging from the past, is not likely to be realized. In seventeen hundred years not one Asiatic nation embraced Christianity, and even in India, where the missionaries have all the backing of the British government, the results so far achieved in the conversion of the so-called heathen are so insignificant as to be quite out of proportion to the enormous sacrifices of money and labor made for this purpose. The reason for this failure of the foreign missions is because the Asiatic has an innate aversion against the Christian faith. He longs for rest after death, and the promise of an eternal life only fills him with horror. In view of this fact, even many good Christians hold that our missionaries would do better to stay at home where a good deal of work is still to be done, to convert thousands of professed Christians to true Christianity. And if they want by all means to go out into the world to preach to the heathen, let them do so in the manner of St. Boniface and other real martyrs—that is to say, on their own responsibility, ready to take the consequences of their hazardous undertaking. Christ's disciples had no government support when they went out into the world to preach the gospel. Apostles as the vanguard of armies, apostles as the pioneers of "The Ethics of Loot," apostles backed by cannons and $100,000 ransoms, is too abhorrent an idea to be associated with Christianity, and we should be proud of our government that it does not lend its support to this sort of propagation of Christ's teachings.

ONE'S WORK.

Some one has said that there is lots of trouble in the world by round men trying to fit themselves into square holes, and vice versa.

People who seem to have really found their work are outnumbered greatly by those who pled along like boys set to do irksome tasks.

If one's work is done with the interest and energy that children display in digging a cave in a bank, in throwing a dam across a rivulet, in fixing up a playhouse, or caring for crops or stock the profits of which will go to them—if work is done with enthusiasm and interest, it can never be drudgery.

As a rule there is no safer test of a man's ability than the pleasure he gets out of his work.

Slipshod work in whatever line of endeavor is a disappointment and a reproach.

"O, that's good enough," is a dangerous and damaging thought. It has kept many a man down without his knowing it has been at the bottom of what he set down as his general bad luck.

Pleasure to be derived from work depends much upon the worker. One who is really capable of higher and better things will never be found slighting his work because he feels it is unworthy of him. He may say to himself, "I do not intend always to do what I am doing now. I shall use it as a stepping stone to something better; but he goes at it just as if he intended to make it his life work.

Very many people dissatisfied with their surroundings or their work allow this feeling of dissatisfaction to enter into everything they do.

Hence their work is poorly done and the energy they should use in the tasks before them is largely frittered away in grumbling and in thinking about their ill luck. Work done in that frame of mind can never be one's best, and it is only one's best in whatever task assigned.

ONE CASE ARGUED

SUPREME COURT HEARS A SUIT FOR DAMAGES—SOME MINOR ORDERS MADE.

(From Wednesday's Statesman.)

In the Supreme Court, yesterday, the case of Laure Adkins, appellant, vs. The City of Monmouth, respondent, was argued and submitted by W. H. Holmes and Webster Holmes for appellant, and M. L. Pipes and N. L. Butler for respondent. The case grows out of an injury received by plaintiff while walking on the sidewalk in Monmouth. The complaint alleges that plaintiff accidentally stepped through a hole in the sidewalk causing an injury to her foot which prevented her from following her vocation, and she asked for $5000 damages and $115 special damages for medical fees, etc. The plaintiff was non-suited in the trial court, and the appeal followed.

Minor orders were made by the court as follows:

Flannigan & Bennett Bank, appellant, vs. R. A. Graham, et al., respondents; ordered on stipulation that appellants have until May 15th to serve and file its brief.

Annie Dammer, appellant, vs. Emily Schneider, et al., respondents, ordered on stipulation that respondents have leave to withdraw the testimony on file herein.

5,000 YEARS OLD.

Good Advice by an Egyptian King Fifty Centuries Ago.

Ptah Rotop was an Egyptian king fifty centuroes ago, and no doubt had some strange ideas about God, but he wrote a code of morals that in all that 5,000 years has not been surpassed. Here are some of the rules of his conduct:

A man shall answer the evil words of a hot-headed disputant with silence.

A man shall not dispise one whose opinion differs from his own, nor be angry with one who is wrong.

A man shall remember thoese who were faithful to him in his low estat.

A man shall not inspire men with fear.

A man shall let his thoughts be abundant, but keep his mouth under restraint.

A man shall not, if he be powerful, seize the goods of another.

A man shall train his son to be a teachable man.

A man shall not be haughty nor mean.

A man shall understand that love for the work he accomplishes transports men to God.

A man shall not answer the unfortunate in a crushing way.

A man shall keep himself from the fatal malady of bad humor—from grumbling, from little irritations, from rudeness.

Commenting on the above a great newspaper writer says:

"Think of it! Advice from a man who lived 5,000 years ago! If you nau a picture, a coat, a sword—even a brick—that was in his day, you would prize it highly among your possessions. But—advice is cheap.

"Besides, most of us know what is right and what is wrong. It is only the application of it that is lacking."

PUTTING OFF.

Not Enough of It Done by the American People.

"Never put off until tomorrow what you can do today" was not written by a philosopher.

Better that it should read "never put off until tomorrow what ought to be done today." The world was not made in a day.

Americans are constantly impairing their usefullness in the future and shotening their lives by accomplishing tiday what might as well be left until tomorrow.

Between the bogus strenuosity of their lives and the manana of the Spaniard there is a happy medium.

We do not sufficiently realize the beauty of that delicious word rest. Men and women who begin their daily toil often before sunrise and keep unflaggingly at their desks until exhausted at night cannot enjoy life and the effect of this socalled energy and enterprise cannot but have a deteriorating result on posterity.

Doing today what might as well be left until tomorrow is making us a nation of dyspeptics and nervous wrecks. It prompts the business man to stick to his office when he should be enjoying an eating; the farmer to plant acres he cannot properly till, the railroad man to stick to his post until the ambulance is required to cary him away.

Less strenuosity and more recreation are needed. Of course the man who postpones until timorow what should be done today is a fool, but having done that let him enjoy a rest. Without it life is a barren waste, a hideous sprint from the cradle to a premature grave.

NOTICE.

Sheep shearers are liable for damages done by their careless use of clothing and implements that they have used in shearing diseased sheep, especially those affected with scab.

Flock owners may under the laws recover from such shearers twice their estimated damage.

Shearers coming from other counties where sheep are known to be infected with scab should be particularly careful.

If shearers find they are shearing diseased sheep, when they have finished such bands or flocks, should burn their clothes used in such shearing, and put their shears in boiling water, letting them boil for fifteen minutes to one-half hour.
