

C. W. FULTON ON THE STUMP

A Ringing Address by One of Oregon's Favorite Orators

THE DEMOCRATIC CLAIMS THOROUGHLY PUNCTURED IN AN ABLE SPEECH—MR. FURNISH AND HIS FORMER ALLEGIANCE TO THE DEMOCRACY.

At the rally, in the Armory, last night, Hon. C. W. Fulton delivered the principal address on the issues of the day.

Mr. Fulton's Address.

Mr. Fulton in opening his address, called attention to the importance of the election, involving, as it did, National issues, as two Members of Congress have to be elected, and the Legislature to be chosen must name a United States Senator. He then took up the matter of the former political alliance of Mr. Furnish, and explained why that gentleman had become a Republican. Continuing, he said in part: "I well remember when it was sufficient to say of one that he fought under the shadow of the Stars and Stripes on the battle field of Antietam; of another that he was one of that grand division of heroes who stood at the bloody angle in defense of the life of this Nation, in that awful battle of Gettysburg where patriotism and death walked hand in hand. We did not ask of such a one how long he had been a Republican, for we believed then, as we believe now, that the badge of patriotism admits all unquestioned into the ranks of the Republicans. And were one to come today of whom it could be truthfully said that he was one of that immortal band who carried the Stars and Stripes up the steep and rocky side of San Juan hill till the sun was scaled and the victory won, I think we would not ask him how long he had been a Republican.

"But, my friends, there were patriots and heroes in 1896, as well as in 1890; in 1898 as well as in 1900. When the tide of Populism and false theories were mounting higher and ever higher, threatening to engulf in ruin our industries and our business, the savings of the poor and the accumulations of the frugal the honor and good name of a Nation, there were men who had the courage and manhood and patriotism to rise above party lines and go to the rescue of their country, and not the least of these in Oregon was William J. Furnish.

"I cannot think that any honor is too great for these men. On the contrary, I believe that the Republican party has honored itself in naming one of them for the highest state office in the gift of our people, and that our state will do credit to the wisdom and justice of our people by electing him. Yes, we are going to elect him by an overwhelming majority, and his election will be a just and fitting tribute to the heroism and patriotism of that splendid body of men who abandoned their party and joined their country. We are proud of our candidate, proud of his splendid, spotless character and recognized ability. The position he has secured for himself in social, business and political life is the most enviable tribute to our institutions and form of Government. It is a valuable lesson and an incentive to the youth of our land."

He took up the matter of the history of the two big political parties, and showed that Republican control had always been followed by great prosperity, showing in detail the great change for the better since the election of Wm. McKinley, to the Presidency in 1896, and continued:

"Such is the record of the Republican party; two words will describe it—prosperity, progress. You have tried it for a third of a century, and during all that time it gave you prosperity and progress, with widening development of our resources, with increasing value to our products and with increasing wages for the employed. You have also tried the Democratic party. You have placed it in control of Congress and gave it the Presidency. They wove their doctrines into legislation. Immediately every industry was paralyzed, while every branch of trade and commerce became stagnant and still. Then the Republican party again came into power, and with it came hope and confidence and new life and prosperity. Do you want to abandon these? If so, vote the Democratic ticket."

Speaking of the Democratic party he discussed the continuous failures and said:

"But what is now offered by the Democratic party that it has not offered before? What new excuses has this party of bunco and bankruptcy, to offer in order to tempt you once again to trust it with the destinies of your State and Nation? Does it profess and new light? None at all, positively nothing. It is the same old party, unwashed and unrepentant. It does not come, as it should, owing its weakness, its evil behavior, and leaving with meekness its sin to its savior.

"But it comes in the old wicked garments, comes trippingly, mincingly, waiting along as if it had always had the confidence of decent and respectable society; as if it never in all its history ruined prosperity, destroyed an industry or betrayed a confiding public. "Does it say that it has abandoned its evil associates or renounced any of its former doctrines, which result in so much suffering to our people? Not one, not a single one. It still stands for free silver and free trade. True, it does not in this state put this forward as a cardinal doctrine, but it makes no pretense of having discarded either."

He then took up the state finances, as discussed by Mr. Chamberlain on the stump, showing the unfairness of the statements made and showed the record of Mr. Chamberlain as Attorney General and District Attorney, and the salary drawn by him. He then took up the question of the trusts, and said in part:

"Mr. Chamberlain charges in his speech that the Republican party has fostered the trusts. He does not point out a single instance where the Republican party has favored trusts excepting that in a general way he charges that the Republican protective tariff builds up and fosters trusts. He says that the Republican party has adopted no legislative measures to do away with trusts. Now, let us see how correct he is in this statement. "In the first place, it is not true. In my judgment, that the protective tariff has contributed one particle to building up of trusts. One of the greatest trusts that we have is the Standard Oil trust, and you all know that there is no tariff on petroleum. I am opposed to the trusts. I believe they should be prohibited. The Republican party has declared against them, and it may be that a reduction of tariff should be made on some articles that are in trusts, but I do not believe for a single moment that the removal of duty on any article controlled by the trusts will destroy the trust. It will take more than tariff legislation to accomplish that. And this brings us to the proposition of Mr. Chamberlain that the Republican party has done nothing to legislate against trusts. Let us see. As early as 1890 the Republican party enacted what is known as the Sherman anti-trust law. The Democrats were in power thereafter, having both Congress and the Presidency and made no attempt whatever to add to or in any way change that law; but no sooner had the Republican party come into power again than the Democratic party discovered that some additional legislation was necessary in order to control the trusts. It also discovered that the trusts were founded upon state corporation laws, and that under the present Federal Constitution Congress has no power to prohibit or dissolve these trusts organized under state laws. Therefore the Republican party in Congress offered a solution, proposing to amend the Federal Constitution so as to give Congress power to regulate, control, prohibit and dissolve trusts and monopolies of every character, whether existing in the form of a corporation under the state laws or otherwise.

"Now, you would naturally suppose that every person who is really and earnestly opposed to trusts would favor such a proposition would you not? And yet it is true that every Democrat in Congress voted against the proposition, and against amending the Constitution so as to give Congress that power, and yet they say that the Republican party stands a representative of trusts and refuses to legislate against trusts when it is enacted by the Legislature against trusts. And today several of the greatest trusts are being prosecuted by direction of the Republican President under laws enacted by the Republican Congress."

In ringing words Mr. Fulton appealed to the Republicans to stand by the administration in its Philippine policy, and he sharply called the Democrats to account for their policy of scuttling and the cowardly assaults made on the American Army, which under difficulties, was supporting the flag in the far-off Oriental possessions of the country.

COUNTY COURT MEETS

BRIEF SESSION OF THE MARION COUNTY AUDITING BOARD HELD YESTERDAY.

The county commissioners' court convened in adjourned session yesterday, to dispose of several matters of minor importance and more especially to repair in a body to the rock pit south of this city to observe and inspect the operations of the new rock crushing machine which is stationed at that place, but on account of the failure of a representative of the Portland firm of whom it was purchased, to appear, and put it in operation in accordance with the terms of the contract, the matter was postponed indefinitely.

The court ordered, on petition, that a re-survey be made of the west portion of the Sidney-Buena Vista road. An appropriation of $20 was made toward the improvement of the Silverton road, near the Frank Blackerby place, providing, however, the people benefited thereby will contribute enough money and labor to complete the work. The court adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

MAY FESTIVAL AT CORVALLIS

Splendid Success Attained by the Great Production

NEXT YEAR'S PERFORMANCE WILL BE GIVEN AT EUGENE AND SEVERAL OTHER CITIES. SALEM TO HAVE ONE NIGHT'S PERFORMANCE—SOCIAL NOTES.

The May Festival, given at Corvallis, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of last week, was the fourth anniversary of the organization of the Willamette Valley Choral Union. The first festival at Eugene was a success and each succeeding year has shown an increased interest and success. The first program was given by the Portland Symphony Orchestra, with solo numbers by Mrs. Rose Bloch-Bauer soprano, and Mr. Arthur Fraser, pianist. The principal orchestra number was a great symphony by Beethoven.

The second night was devoted to Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" and "Stabat Mater." The chorus numbered 190, of whom 120 were Corvallis singers. The orchestra consisted of thirty-six members of the Portland Symphony Orchestra, two from the Spokane Symphony Orchestra, and two from Salem—Miss Lelo Nickles and Mr. Le Roy Gesner. Each of the works presented contains ten numbers, and no number was omitted. The "Hymn of Praise" was composed in 1840 for the fourth centennial celebration of the discovery of the art of printing. Five numbers are written for the chorus alone, two for tenor, one for soprano and tenor, one for soprano and chorus, and one for Mrs. Bloch-Bauer, Mrs. Walter Reed and M. W. H. Boyer, sustains the solo parts nobly while the entire aggregation of soloists, chorus and orchestra was held together well by the baton of Mr. W. Gifford Nash. The "Stabat Mater" contains but four choruses, including the celebrated "Inflammatus," for soprano and chorus. The tenor, alto and bass are each given a solo, the remaining three numbers a duet for the lady soloists, and two quartets. The music is brilliant, almost operatic, and saxes chorus and orchestra to the utmost. In this work, Mr. I. M. Glen was added to the list of soloists, and his singing was refined and artistic. Some of the choruses were really thrilling and the audience showed great interest and appreciation.

The Messiah, on Thursday night, provided a great amount of singing for all the soloists, and the chorus as well. Of the twenty-two choruses in the work fifteen were sung. The Messiah is so long that it is never given entire, the usual number of choruses given being less than at this Festival. The performance of every number was worthy of special mention, and the general verdict was "a noble work nobly done." Mrs. Walter Reed was obliged to respond to an encore after singing "The Was Despaired." The audience numbered 1200, and everyone of them must have felt that "it was good to be there."

A plan is under consideration, which will next year give two cities an evening of orations with the Portland Symphony Orchestra. The May Festival will be held in Eugene in 1903. Mr. I. M. Glen was elected president; Miss Yorand secretary, (both of Eugene), and vice-president was elected for Salem, Albany and Corvallis. The Salem vice-president is Mr. Scott Bosorth; and he securing a grand production of oratorio with this superb orchestra next year.

A Surprise Party.

On last Thursday evening the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Churchill was invaded by a jolly party of boys and girls. They were friends of the young daughter, Miss Mathel, who, though taken completely by surprise, acted the part of hostess in a creditable manner. The evening was spent in music, games and story telling. About 9 o'clock all marched to the dining room where a table had been tastefully arranged by Mrs. Churchill and well filled with tempting viands. And the rapidly with which the burdened table was relieved, was convincing proof of the excellent quality of the food and the healthy appetites of the children. Soon after this part of the program was completed all retired to their several homes to enjoy a peaceful sleep or perhaps, to dream of wagon loads of sandwiches, cakes, oranges, well mixed with lemonade. Those present were the Misses Mary Pigler, Minnie and Frances Williams, Mary and Lida Fischer, Anna Graber, Mathel Churchill and Masters Carl Veatch, Clyde Stege, Walter and Eldon Churchill.

An Anniversary.

Silver Bell Circle, Women of Woodcraft, celebrated the fifth anniversary of its organization on Friday night, with a splendid program. An address by Prof. W. C. Hawley, and a number of literary and musical selections were much enjoyed, and the program was followed by serving delicious refreshments. The celebration occurred in the Woodman halls in the Holman building, and the two large halls were beautifully and tastefully decorated for the occasion, with ivy, evergreens, flowers, and ribbons in the colors of the order. It was an event long to be remembered by all in attendance.
