R. J. HENDRICKS, Manager. SUBSCRIPTION KATES.

The Statesman has been established for nearly fifty-two years, and it has some subscribers who have received it nearly that long, and many who have read it for a generation. Some of these object to having the paper discontinued at the time of expiration of their subscriptions. For the benefit of these, and for other reasons we have concluded to discontinue sub-criptions. For the benefit of these, and for other reasons we have concluded to discontinue sub-criptions only when natified to do so. All persons paying when subscribing, or paying in advance, will have the benefit of the dollar rate. But if they do not pay i r six months, the rate will be $1.25 a year. Hereafter we will send the paper to all responsible persons who order it, though they may not send the money, with the understanding that they are to pay $1.25 a year, in case they let the subscription account run over six months. In order that there may be no misun derstanding, we will keep this notice standing at this place in the paper.

SIX PAGES FOR ONCE.

Owing to the non arrival of an order for paper, which was given in ample time, we are obliged to send out this issue of the Twice-a-Week Statesman in six-page form, instead of eight pages. It is not our intention to have this happen agains This occasions greater embarrassment to us than it can cause disappointment to the subscribers and readers, and we crave the indulgence of our more than 4000 subscribers on account of the missing two

Behind the counter of one of the whose father was once rich. The girl was sent to one of the fashionable of wealthy parents. Her home was althe true gentility, but are a pharisce. ways open and her parents were prodigal in their hospitality. In those days THE CONTEST OF THE FUTURE. the girl had scores of friends. But her father, always extravagant and reckless, failed in business and never again got his footing. The girl gave up her music masters and her luxuries. Servants were dismissed, the home sold and the family, growing poorer and poorer, moved into a small flat in an unfashionable neighborhood. There both parents died after a long and expensive illness, and the girl found employment at a salary which barely enables her to exist. She still owes money to the doctors and the undertaker.

One day a former schoolmate of the girl, shopping in the dry goods store, happened to see the girl. Walking up to her she kissed her warmly on both cheeks, just as she used to do when the girl's father was rich. Immediately the poor girl placed her hands over her eyes and commenced to sob. "Of all the girls I used to know who have seen me here," she said, "you are the only one who has kissed me and whose manbarely notice me and others still talk to me in a patronizing way and sometimes offer me money as they would than take it from them."

In her poverty this gentle girl has learned much about human nature; system, or rather lack of system. much that has made her sad and much that has cheered and comforted her. She ha found true charity and kindliness among her fellow workers and a few of her old friends-a very fewhave not changed in their manner toward her. But she says this: "The giving of money is the easiest and commonest form of charity. A kind word, a smile, a little unaffected attention are infinitely rarer and better alms than dollars."

It must be admitted, to the shame of men and women, that the experience of this girl is not unusual.

Charity of the mind is finer and rarer than charity of the pocket. Men who would not refuse a dime to a professional, beggar will give ready ear and circulation to a scandalous story about a friend. Women who busy themselves in works of philanthropy and organized charity will gossip cruelly about other clubs to make flannel undershirts for the heathen in tropical lands, and over their needles will murder a reputation with every breath.

The law presumes an accused person innocent until he is proven guilty, but society always accepts a slander with greater faith and alacrity than it accepts the gospel. And when a family lose their money they soon drop out of the minds of their friends,

President Roosevelt is forcing the question of the control of the trusts to the front. He is making it the paramount issue of the present Congressional campaign in the East and of the Presidential campaign of 1904. There will be no chance for compromise. The bridges have been burned. When the industrial conditions were simple, very little control' was needed, and no trouble was caused by the doubt as to where power was lodged under the Constitution, Now conditions are complicated, and we find it difficult to frame National legislation which shall be adequate, while as a matter of practical experience state action has proved entirely insufficient. and in all probability cannot or will not be made sufficient, to meet the needs of the case. I believe that the Nation must assume this power of controi by legislation, and if it becomes evident that the Constitution will not permit needed legislation, then by Constitutional amendment.

This has been another disappointing year for the grain growers of the Willamette valley. The fields of wheat and oats have not turned out the quantity of grain that was expected. bare summer fallow of last year falled to give old-time wheat yields this year. No one who is familiar with the bistory of agriculture has been surprised. The same thing happens everywhere Possibly some of the farmers who had so little respect for Dr. Withycombe's crusade against the bare summer fallow are beginning to see light. Fortunately, so much progress has been made in diversified agriculture in the Willamette valley that the reduced yield of wheat will not have a disastrous effect generally .- Oregon Agricul-

The farmers of the Willamette valley do not have to quit raising wheat. MEMORABLE ELECTION.

The people of Vermont had their state and Congressional election on Tuesday. It was the winding up of a memorable contest. It was a threecornered fight, in fact, a four-cornered fight, for there were in the field the license Republican, the Democratic and the Prohibitionist. The contest was principally between the regular Republicans and the bolting Republicans, or high license men, led by Percival W. Clement, candidate of the bolters for Governor.

The result is that there was no election for Governor or Lieutenant Governor, as it takes a majority to elect in Vermont, and no candidate has a majority. The election will be thrown into the Legislature, or the Assembly as the state's legislative body is known in Vermont. That body will be overwhelmingly Republican-regular Republican-and it may be that General John B. McCullough, the regular Republican candidate for Governor, will receive the office when the Assembly meets. It will convene in bi-ennial session on the first of October, so the suspense will not be a long one.

General McCullough received a higher number of votes than his principal opponent, Mr. Clement.

The following dispatch in one of the New York papers will throw some light upon the exciting contest the people of Vermont have been having: "Burlington, Vt., Aug. 28 .- It is the general ouinion in Morrisville tonight

An overdose of morphine is given as the cause of Mr. Small's colapse tonight.

"Mr. Small was carried to the hotel. and later in the evening his physician stated that the collapse was the result of an overdose of morphine, and that Mr. Small's career as a public speaker was probably ended."

WARM TIMES EAST.

They are having warm times in poltics in the East. It makes us glad out here in Oregon that our campaign does not come in the warm season. While excitement runs high in the states east of us our people can get along quietly doing their harvest work, picking hops, gathering prunes, and pursuing their regular lines of work undisturbed by the noise and din and commotion of the campaign. We have our little excitement over the state, district and county election in the spring, while the weather is cool and pleasant and while people have some leisure for extraneous matters.

As a witness of the hot air that is being agitated in the East, the reader is cited to the following dispatch to the New York Herald of last Friday:

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 28.-Joseph M. Huston, an architect, set one of his engineers at work today to plan the great Republican campaign ball which it is proposed to roll from Erie to Philadelphia immediately after the convention of State Republican Clubs, which will be held in Erie next month. "We will build a ball twenty feet in diameter," said Mr. Huston today, and on the surface I will have painted not only a map of the world, but have
