

TO ESTABLISH CORN CANNERY

An Expert Pronounces Salem Well Adapted to the Industry

SALEM CANNING COMPANY'S PLANT WILL BE ENLARGED—WILL USE PRODUCT FROM 1000 ACRES OF CORN AT GOOD PROFIT TO FARMER.

(From Wednesday's Daily.)

Another very important industry is to be added to the already large list in Salem, one which will prove profitable to a large number of laborers employed and to the farmers of the surrounding country.

He was in the city yesterday, in company with W. S. Willey, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, looking over the territory. Mr. Willey is a professional at the corn canning business, having been for several years superintendent of a large corn canning plant in Cedar Rapids, the city celebrated for the large amount of corn packed and placed on the market annually.

Corn canning is a business by itself, separate from other canning industries, either fruit or vegetables, and Mr. Willey knows his business thoroughly. He has been in the state for several months, and during that time has visited every section with a view of establishing a corn packing business, and after a visit to this city and the surrounding country, said to a Statesman reporter yesterday afternoon that he believed Salem offered more advantages for canning corn than any other city in the state, and he thought Salem was the proper place for such an industry to be established.

Mr. Holcomb will endeavor to induce a number of farmers to raise corn for his company, which will be sold by the ton, and if 100 acres of corn can be assured the first year, the canning plant will be established. This will enable him to pack 10,000 cases the first season, which will be an excellent experiment, but he will install a plant of sufficient capacity to use the product of 1000 acres of corn.

There is no doubt in anybody's mind that corn will grow in the Willamette valley to good advantage, and the ground will produce as heavy yields as any of the Eastern states famed as corn countries. The writer has seen 100 bushels of corn per acre harvested from a forty-acre field in this valley under ordinary conditions, and at this rate the crop would prove very profitable to the farmer. In raising corn for the cannery, none of the difficulties of stormy weather preventing the crop from ripening would be experienced, and the element of risk eliminated.

Mr. Willey was much interested in a new variety of sugar corn grown by John Wright on the Asylum farm this year, and took several ears to Portland with him as samples. The ears are unusually large, with even rows of large grains, and is a heavy producer. It is succulent of good flavor and would probably be a popular corn for canning. Mr. Holcomb will endeavor to secure a quantity of seed from this variety.

Manager Holcomb will continue his fruit packing business, as corn does not come on until the small fruits are all packed and out of the way, so he can utilize the machinery already on hand, and make the packing season twice as long. He will also install considerable new machinery, especially for canning corn, and will build a large addition to the drier.

There is at present not a single corn cannery west of the Rocky mountains, and certainly the field offers exceptional opportunities for the establishing of a new industry. There is an immense quantity of canned corn consumed, every grocery store having shelves full of corn, packed in the Middle States, for which large sums of money are sent out of the country, which might just as well be kept at home. Every family is a consumer of canned corn on account of the great difficulty in successfully canning, and almost every housewife has given up the attempt in despair, after a few failures.

Score another point for Salem industries and the enterprise of George W. Holcomb, manager of the Salem Canning Company.

GOULET WILL FILED

PROPERTY OF ESTATE I MARION COUNTY VALUED AT $900.

(From Wednesday's Daily.)

The last will and testament of Matthew Goulet, deceased, has been filed for probate in the Marion county court. According to the petition for the probate of the will the estate consists of real and personal property in Marion county, the probable value of which is given at $900. Other property belonging to the estate is located in another county and consequently is not within the jurisdiction of the Marion county court.

By the terms of the will, all of the personal property, consisting of livestock, etc., and one-half of the notes, annuities and real estate is bequeathed to the Goulet, and the balance of all the property is to be divided equally among the grandchildren of the deceased. Francis Buskey is nominated as executor.

The State Board of Fish Commissioners held their regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon, at which time Master Fish Warden H. G. Van Dusen made his report for the month of September. The whole of the meeting was devoted to the discussion of his report, which at this season of the year was of more than usual interest on account of the extensive improvements that have been made to the old hatcheries and the new ones built in the midst of the egg-taking season.

CORRECTS THE STATEMENTS

Mrs. Evans Explains Matters in Defense of Her Character

SAYS MANY OF THE DETAILS GIVEN TO STATESMAN WERE GROSS MISREPRESENTATIONS AND THAT MANY OF THE FACTS WERE WITHHELD.

(From Wednesday's Daily.)

Editor Statesman: After reading the article in your paper, "Where Will the Matter End," I cannot refrain from trying to straighten out such gross statements. It is true that I was arrested at the instigation of L. Krebs for selling tobacco to his son, a minor. But your informant did not state that some time ago the boy was sent for tobacco and that Mr. Evans refused to let him have it without an order. In a day or so the said L. Krebs came in. I was in the office and he laughed and made light of the idea of Mr. Evans refusing his boys tobacco, saying it was for a hired man and to let the boys have tobacco any time they came for it, as they did not use it and sometimes the men got out and did not have time to come for it. Thereafter the boys got tobacco whenever they asked for it. As the order was never rescinded, though nothing of selling the tobacco on August 10, I do not think there is a dealer in Salem that does not do the same.

This looks very much like a malicious prosecution, growing out of the Krebs Bros. liquor license wrangle. If not, why was I not arrested sooner, and why was the arrest timed when Krebs thought to find me in the church and so humiliate me by arresting me, as they thought, or as your informant has it, before "an assembled congregation?" When the truth is there were present only Presiding Elder Rev. H. L. Pratt, Rev. G. L. Lovell, Mr. Oliver Beer, Mr. Pierce Callard and Mr. William Massey and wife, I being with a sick daughter and having no intention of attending the meeting. Your informant further states "that if the congregation expected to see Mr. Massey expelled from the church they were disappointed, for he was completely exonerated from all blame" and in the next breath says that "the Rev. Lovell arose and read the complaint," which was not read at all, and then "Mr. Massey asked where the other complaining witness was, and it was then found that I had been arrested and brought to Salem, whereupon the complaint was withdrawn and Mr. Massey dismissed." How then could he have been exonerated? The truth is there was no trial at all, but not because "the rules of the church require that at least two witnesses to a complaint filed against a member for his expulsion be present," which statement is not in our church law, but because all concerned wished to avoid a trial if possible. Mr. Massey stated that the petition was signed only after misrepresentation on the part of Krebs, and it was believed by the committee of investigation that he was sufficiently penitent and sorry for his conduct to warrant forgiveness on the part of the church. And as he acknowledged his wrong the charges were withdrawn. Our church law upon the subject reads: "None of our members shall be permitted to sign a license for persons engaged in the traffic of intoxicating drinks," chapter 4, par. 38. So it was not the people of Brooks that instigated Rev. Lovell to renege with his members for signing Krebs Bros. petition, but it was in his line of duty.

Hoping this explanation will be as kindly received as it is meant, I am, respectfully,
MRS. W. G. EVANS.

TRAMP TAKES A BATH

BLOWN INTO PUGET SOUND TOGETHER WITH A COAL SHED.

OLYMPIA, Wn., Oct. 6.—The wind storm that swept through this place yesterday was the worst in years. Wires are down all over town, trees blown over and stripped of limbs, but no serious accidents have been reported. When the storm was at its height the coal sheds of the P. & S. R. R. were blown into the bay. A hobo was caught like a rat in a trap under the roof. Two hobo men passing by heard his cries and rescued him by cutting a hole through the roof.

MATRON FOR THE PRISON

Miss Irene James Has Been Chosen For Responsible Position

HER APPOINTMENT PARTIALLY DUE TO HER MAKING HER HOME AT THE PENITENTIARY—MANY OTHER GOOD APPLICANTS TURNED DOWN.

(From Wednesday's Daily.)

Governor Chamberlain yesterday afternoon, in compliance with the act passed at the last session of the Legislature, appointed a matron for the Penitentiary in the person of Miss Irene James, the daughter of Superintendent James.

The act creating this new office was introduced in the Legislature at the instigation of the ladies of the W. C. T. U. of this city and the state, but it would have undoubtedly been defeated had it not been for the occurrence of the scandal which took place at the prison just a few days after the bill was introduced, and in which one of the officers and a female convict were involved.

There were numerous applications for the position from ladies on the outside, all of which applicants Governor Chamberlain said were worthy of the appointment and he was extremely sorry to have to turn some of them down, for the will no doubt feel very badly over the matter, but it was deemed advisable to appoint some one who could live at the prison constantly, and it was partly upon this account as well as for other qualifications that Miss James was chosen for the position, her parents being residents of the institution.

Miss James is said to be amply qualified in every respect for the filling of the office, principally on account of her having held many positions of trust and responsibility, of a public character, and is accustomed to dealing with the public.

CIRCUIT COURT

(From Wednesday's Daily.)

Judge Burnett held another session of Department No. 1 of the State Circuit Court yesterday, and after making several docket entries took adjournment until 1 o'clock p. m. Thursday. In the case of B. B. Colbath vs. Hofer & Zorn, an action for money, the court made an order in obedience to a mandate of the Supreme Court, striking out certain paragraphs of the defendants' first further and separate defense. The case came up for trial at a former term of the Circuit Court, during which Judge Burnett overruled a motion of the plaintiff to strike out certain parts of the defendants' answer. The case being decided in favor of the defendants, the court's decision in overruling the motion was appealed from, with the result that the Supreme Court reversed the ruling of the lower court and referred the matter back for further consideration.

This action was brought to recover upon a lot of hops, which the plaintiff alleged he had attached as sheriff of Marion county, upon a certificate issued in another proceeding, and which he had delivered into the custody of the defendants for keeping, until ordered released or called for by the plaintiff. He further alleges that although he held receipt for the same, the defendants refused to deliver the hops into his custody when the same were demanded by him, and the action in court followed.

The docket entries made by the court yesterday were as follows: George O. Savage, plaintiff, vs. Salem Flouring Mills Company, defendant; action at law; motion of plaintiff to strike out parts of answer argued; defendant has leave on its motion to apply to sheriff to amend so as to conform to the facts of his return on the subpoena issued by Emma Murphy Brown, notary public, and directed to plaintiff requiring him to appear before said notary public and testify in relation to this cause on September 5, 1903.

Capital National Bank, plaintiff, vs. Charles Scott, defendant; action for money; default and judgment with order to sell attached property. Quong, Shong, Tong Company, plaintiffs, vs. Jim Tong, defendant; action for money; default and judgment, with order to sell attached property. B. B. Colbath, plaintiff, vs. Hofer & Zorn, defendants; action for money; first and second paragraphs of defendants' first further and separate defense stricken out in obedience to mandate of Supreme Court; defendants have leave to amend answer on or before October 7, 1903.

HOW ABOUT YOUR DOG?—Have you lost your dog? Several Salem residents are complaining that they have, last year, about the time of the opening of the hunting season, six fine dogs were stolen in Salem in one night. It seems the dog thief or thieves are out again. A fellow is prone to feel bitter against the dog thief, when he boards and lodges a good bird dog a whole year, or several years, with the hope of having his services during the hunting season—and some hound of a man comes along and steals him, before he can have a chance to get his gun ready. If this thing keeps up, there will be some gunning for the dog thieves, without regard to the open season for them.

CAUSED BY AUTOMOBILE—As Geo. A. Judson was driving his team of work horses and empty wagon across the street car tracks at the intersection of State and Liberty streets, shortly after 6 o'clock last evening, his horses became frightened and began to kick. One of the animals succeeded in getting his hind leg over the wagon tongue and this scaring the badly frightened animals still more, they started to run. Although it seemed impossible to stop the team, Mr. Judson clung to the reins and finally brought the horses to a halt at the corner of State and Church streets. A smash-up with an electric car was narrowly averted by the presence of mind and skill of Mr. Judson, who successfully guided the team past the car, the swerve that was made nearly upsetting the wagon. No damage was done, with the exception of the bruises on the horse's leg, the result of his wild run astride of the wagon tongue. It is a wonder that some one was not hurt as a great number of people were on the streets, returning home after the day's labors.
