STATE WOULD BENEFIT BY GOVERNMENT MANAGEMENT OF QUARANTINE STATIONS.
Senator Miller's Bill for Abolition of State Health Officers to Receive Consideration Today—Dr. Earle Explains Benefits of Government System.
(From Wednesday's Daily.)
The Senate committee on assessment and taxation held a meeting at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon for the purpose of considering Senator Miller's bill, which provides for the abolition of the offices of state health officers at the four sea ports of Oregon—Astoria, Gardiner, Yaquina Bay and Brownsville. These offices cost the state an aggregate of $2700 per year, and it is proposed that the state evacuate those ports in favor of the government quarantine service, which has signified its willingness to replace the state officials with government officials. This arrangement, it is believed, is satisfactory to all or nearly all of the legislators because it would not only save the state the annual expense of $2700, but would give the state the benefit of the best skilled service for the prevention of the entrance of communicable diseases into the state from other states and foreign countries.

The government has a fully equipped and up-to-date quarantine station at Astoria, in charge of one quarantine officer and ten assistants. Dr. Baylis H. Earle, assistant surgeon of the United States public health and marine hospital service, who is stationed at the Astoria station, came up to Salem on Sunday evening and will remain here several days. He comes not only to assume the state government part of the United States is willing to take over the four sea ports and establish quarantine stations there, but to be of any service he can to the Legislature in the effort to arrive at a conclusion in the matter. By special invitation Dr. Earle went before the Senate committee yesterday afternoon and explained to the members everything which they desired to know in connection with the service. In an interview with the Statesman last evening, Dr. Earle said: "The surgeon general of this service has each year at his disposal a large quarantine maintenance fund especially for the purpose of preventing the entry of communicable diseases from any foreign port or ports into this country, or from one state or territory into another state or territory."

"All Federal quarantine officers are required to make weekly reports of all transactions to the public health and marine hospital service, treasury department, Washington, D. C., and so are ever under the watchful eye of the bureau and of the department, whereby the utmost efficiency is secured."
"Service officers are stationed in all foreign ports of importance from which vessels sail for the United States, and no vessel may leave one of these foreign ports for the United States without an inspection certificate from one of these officers or a bill of health certificate by him."
"The bureau at Washington, the domestic quarantine officers, and the service officers stationed abroad, are in constant communication one with another, and it is now practically impossible for communicable diseases to gain entry at any port under the jurisdiction of the Federal service."
"A publication known as 'The Public Health Report' is issued by the service bureau at Washington weekly and a copy sent to each member of the service throughout the world."
"The service now maintains at Astoria the Columbia river quarantine station, the United States quarantine steamer Electro, and the United States quarantine office, at a total expense of about $1500 a month. One regular officer and ten quarantine attendants are detailed for duty there, the officer holding the positions of United States quarantine officer for this state and medical officer in command of the Columbia river quarantine station. All of these attendants have been trained to assist in the disinfections of vessels, their crews and cargoes. The station is situated near the small town of Knappa-ton, Washington, and the building and disinfecting machinery there now were erected at an original cost of $80,000. There is now available for use in the way of further improvements the sum of $8500, and I have received assurances from United States Senator Charles W. Fulton that this sum will be increased by the Congress now in session to the sum of $28,000. Service experts have pronounced the buildings and disinfecting plant now in use to be as good as any in the service anywhere and the disinfecting wharf and building to be the very best. The expected $28,000 will make the station as nearly perfect as possible in accordance with the present state of knowledge of affairs sanitary. The station as it now exists is capable of taking care of any vessel that can enter the mouth of the Columbia river."

"The presence of a state health officer at Astoria is unnecessary for the following reasons: That the United States quarantine officer takes precedence over the United States quarantine laws and regulations and the state health officer may not go near an infected vessel until the Federal official has finished with it, except by courtesy of the Federal official, that, if an infected vessel arrives at Astoria, it is at once quarantined to the quarantine station near Knappa-ton and there held until it and its crew are pronounced free from infection by the Federal authorities, and so is entirely out of the jurisdiction of the state health officer; and that, but for the presence thereof, the Federal official, an infected vessel might possibly enter in the north channel of the river and come to anchor on the Washington side, in which case the

A Grim Tragedy.
Is daily enacted in thousands of homes as death ensues, in each one, another victim of consumption or pneumonia. But when coughs and colds are properly treated the tragedy is averted. F. G. SHOULD PICK CLEAN.

English Brewers Complain of Bad Picking of 1904 Crop of Oregon Hops.

The Statesman is in receipt of a letter from Herman Klaber & Co., the hop merchants, sent from their Tacoma office, which is self-explanatory and which should be of particular importance to the hop growers. The text of the letter follows: "We have just received a letter from one of our London correspondents, and considering that it is of all-importance to the growers of Oregon, we take pleasure in giving you an extract of the letter referred to, which is of date January 7, 1905, and which reads substantially as follows: "Complaints are now coming in from English brewers regarding the shockingly bad picking of the Oregon crop of 1904. We advise you to publicly inform your growers of this and impress upon them strongly that they will ruin the reputation of the Oregon product unless their hops are cleaner picked in future years."
"We submit the admonition of our London friends to the careful consideration of your growers."

It is reported that Ralph Williams, the Dallas buyer, has purchased the Kirkpatrick lot of 180 bales of hops for 28 1/2 cents per pound, and that he has tied up 200 bales more until June 1, which are owned jointly by himself and Kirkpatrick.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

Committees on Irrigation Hold Joint Meeting for Consideration of Irrigation Bills

The committees on irrigation of the two branches of the Legislature, held a joint meeting last evening for the consideration of all proposed laws looking to the interest of irrigation in this state. The principal matter which was considered was the irrigation code, as revised and adopted by the State Irrigation Commission. Upon invitation several members of the commission appeared before the committees to explain away the objectionable features of the code, as did also Assistant Legal Advisor Harry G. Holgate, of the reclamation service of the Department of the Interior and the special engineer in charge of the government survey work in this state.

On the other hand, the representatives of those people in Eastern Oregon principally in Harney and Malheur counties, also put in an appearance and the question was debated at considerable length. Some of the members of the committees are favorable to the bill while others are not and it is difficult to state what the ultimate action will be upon the proposed code. The principal objections to the code have arisen in Eastern Oregon on the part of riparian owners of irrigated land who claim their interests will be seriously interfered with if the code is passed. The government claims, however, that before any irrigation projects are begun in this state a regulation code of irrigation laws must be adopted in order to preclude all future litigation which is more expensive in the long run than the establishment of irrigation systems.

NOT A TRAGEDY

ONLY AN INCIDENT IN THE CONDUCT OF THE HOUSE BUSINESS YESTERDAY.

Story of How Mr. Richie's Pet Bill to Tax Dogs Came to an Early and Sudden Death Despite His Dramatic Treatise—Has a Substitute.

Reading Clerk of House (reading committee reports): "We, your committee on agriculture, beg leave to report that we have had under consideration House Bill No. 121, and respectfully recommend that further consideration of said bill be indefinitely postponed."
Mr. Speaker: "Gentlemen of the House, you have heard the com—" Mr. Speaker: "Mr. Speaker, from the floor of the House: "Mr. Speaker, Mr. Speaker!"
Mr. Speaker (looking in another direction and continuing): "mittee, and, if there are no ob—" Mr. Richie (jumping up and down and yelling at the top of his voice): "Mr. Speaker! Mr. Speaker!"
Mr. Speaker (continuing): "jections, further consideration of—" Mr. Richie (gesticulating wildly): "Mr. Speaker, I object."
Mr. Speaker: "House Bill No. 121 will be indefinitely postponed and it is so ordered (raps the gavel). We will proceed to the next order of business." (Collapses Mr. Richie.)
The above is merely an incident which transpired in the House of Representatives yesterday afternoon and, in order that the public mind may be disabused as to the conclusion that a tragedy had been enacted, a brief explanation may be offered.

House Bill No. 121 was introduced by Mr. Richie, of Marion. It was a bill for an act to compensate owners for the loss of sheep or goats by a direct tax on dogs. The bill provided that a special tax of $1 each be imposed upon all male and $2 on all female dogs in the state, such revenue to comprise a separate fund in each county to be used for compensating owners of sheep or goats which had been killed by dogs. The money was to be paid out upon verified claims, the same as any other, upon the county, which were to be audited by the county court, and, in case of a surplus in such fund at the end of the year, it was to go into the special road fund.

While the bill was in the committee Mr. Richie, who considered it a very meritorious measure, learned that strong opposition had developed on the part of the delegates from the eastern, northern and southern portions of the state, which threatened to defeat it, he decided to amend it so as to exclude all counties in the state except Washington, Clackamas, Polk, Linn, Lane, Yamhill, Benton and Marion, the delegations of which were all in favor of its passage, from its provision. When the committee made an unfavorable report Mr. Richie's desire to explain the situation and endeavor to save the bill by offering the amendment, which accounts for his dramatic actions as illustrated in the above dialogue. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Speaker chanced (?) to be interested in watching the descent of the rain through the window on the opposite side of the House, probably congratulating himself that he was in out of the wet, and evidently did not hear the frantic entreaties of Mr. Richie.

In order to comply with him and offer his sympathies a Statesman reporter went to see Mr. Richie, who was sitting limp and helpless in his seat, who, after having recovered his breath and speech, stated that he was very sorry that his pet measure had been sacrificed upon the altar in such an undignified manner, for he thought it had really ought to pass. He finally straightened up and took fresh courage and, with a triumphant beam in his eye, and a sigh of relief, said: "Oh well, never mind, my friend, Mr. Munger, of Lane county, has prepared a similar bill and will introduce it tomorrow and there is some hopes that we will be able to secure its passage." With that he returned to his interrupted task of writing a letter, or perhaps a book upon "The Trials and Tribulations of a Disappointed Legislator."

PETITION GOES IN.

Senate Orders Investigation of Charges Against Prison Officials by McMahon.

As stated in the Statesman of yesterday morning the petition of L. H. McMahon, calling attention to certain alleged irregularities in connection with the management of the penitentiary, was presented in both houses yesterday morning. Senator Brownell presented the communication in the Senate and followed it up by a resolution setting forth the charges of "maladministration" in condensed form and providing for the appointment of a joint committee to investigate the same, which was adopted almost unanimously. A similar resolution was presented in the House but no definite action was taken upon it yesterday.

Owing to a misunderstanding on the part of the Statesman's informant, which, it was afterward found was unintentional, it was inadvertently stated in the article of yesterday morning that either Senator Howe or Senator Wright would present the communication. Neither of these gentlemen had sought to do with the petition except to read it through while it was being passed around. This correction is cheerfully made and without request in justice to Senators Wright and Howe as absolutely no harm was intended in the statement.

O'Donald while awaiting the action of the court, escaped from the Portland jail during last May and had since succeeded in eluding the officers. It is said that he has spent the past few weeks in Salem, dodging around on the side streets so as not to meet the police, all of whom know him. O'Donald has been in trouble many times before. He is a morphia fiend and most of his troubles have been due to that habit. He is well known in this city, where he formerly resided.

VERY COMPLEX

SOME PROVISION NEEDS BE MADE FOR RELIEF OF CONGESTION AT ASYLUM.

New Addition Will Only Provide Temporary Relief—Be Necessary to Provide for Separate Building—The Only Question Is the Location of Latter.

Had provision been made by the present session of the Legislature for the immediate establishment of an institute for the care of defective youth and epileptics, when completed this institution would have afforded prompt relief for the crowded condition at the insane asylum, there being about forty patients in the latter institution who could be transferred to the new institute. The postponement of the creation of the feeble-minded institute until two years hence will, therefore, necessitate the making of extensive provision for the relief of the present over-crowded condition at the asylum.

In his biennial report to the Legislature Superintendent Calbreath calls attention to the rapid and steady increase in the number of patients in his institution and he recommends that another wing be built upon the main building. At the present rate of increase, however, this would only provide temporary relief, since the three new wards would be filled in the course of another year, and he suggests that another building be provided for the care and treatment of the insane, the location of which is left to the judgment of the Legislature or its appointed representatives.

While Superintendent Calbreath suggests that the proposed new building be located convenient to the present institution, it has been proposed that a branch asylum be located in another part of the state, it being argued in support of this move that it would have a tendency to lessen the expense of transporting patients from the distant interior of Eastern Oregon. To do this, however, would require the amendment of the Constitution, which provides that all state institutions shall be located at the seat of government, i. e., the capital.

Up to the present time no direct move has been made in this direction, but an indirect one has been made by the introduction of a joint resolution, by Senator Pierce, of Umatilla, seeking an amendment of section 3, or article 14, of the Constitution, providing for "the location of public institutions at such places within the state as the Legislative Assembly may by act determine."

Although, when introducing the resolution, Senator Pierce explained that his only motive for doing so was a "desire on his part to be consistent with the constitution when he voted an appropriation for the support of the State University at Eugene, and other state institutions located away from the capital," it is thought his ultimate object is to secure authority for the location of a branch insane asylum in Eastern Oregon, possibly at Pendleton.
