

HOP NEWS OF THE WORLD

All is activity in the local hop market and dealers are skimming the country all around for hops, both of this and last year's crops, with prices ranging about the same for both, with, perhaps, a slight shade in favor of the new crop. The sale of 200 bales of the Kirkpatrick crop of this year, at Dallas, was reported Wednesday by Williams of the same place and a former partner of Kirkpatrick's, the price being given at 12 cents. All dealers who have contracts are out inspecting and taking them in and general satisfaction is expressed in the quality. Never before since 1896 has the quality of the Oregon product been so good and flattering reports are being heard from eastern sources where samples have been received.

Reports from New York indicate the market there is being depressed on account of the low offerings from the coast and brewers state they can get all the coast hops they want at 15 cents whereas the New York growers, who are averaging from one-half to two-thirds crop, are depending on 17 and 18.

Hop Growers Organize.

An association of hop growers of the Sacramento valley districts has been formed and articles of incorporation filed in the name of the California Hop Growers' association. The purpose of the corporation, as expressed in the articles, is selling of hops owned by the members. The principal object of the association is to protect the interests of the growers in the market. The following directors of the association have been elected: Robert Merkley, Ed Palm, W. W. White, P. M. Rooney, Charles Colquhoun.

The association is said by one of the principal hop growers to be neither a trust nor a pool, but simply an aggregation of growers who, by selling as a unit and directly, expect to take advantage of the best market conditions. There is no element of speculation and the association buys no part of any crop.

This organization is based practically on same principal as has been suggested for the proposed Oregon corporation for the purpose of effecting an organization of which President Krebs has called a meeting of the growers for Saturday, October 14. At the time no representative expression of opinion is obtainable upon the question of the formation of a corporation but Mr. Krebs feels confident that it will be successfully brought about, or some means of solving the problem of how to best protect the interests of the growers and secure for them what is considered a fair price for their product, and while only a certain percentage of the growers will go into it on the start, it will soon build up so as to include the majority of the state.

News From All Points.

The local market has not started up very much as yet. There has been a little buying, probably a little less than 100 bales. The prices range from 16 to 18 cents. Among the lots sold are Shumway Bros. of this town and Geo. Lough of Hartsville.

Madison County Leader: A good sample of hops may be certain twenty cents of possibly only fifteen cents. At present there is nothing doing in trade, neither grower nor buyer appearing to know where they are at.

Middleburg News: Since the last issue of the News we learn of the following sales: Engle and Brass sold their crop of both early and late hops for 18 cents. T. W. Neville bought a portion, and the balance was sold to Erkane Bros. For the late ones he received 18 1/2 cents for the early ones he received 19 1/2 cents. The early hops have nearly all been sold. Lots of 25 bales were divided into four, five and six bale lots and shipped to different parties. As but few have commenced to bale their late hops not many buyers have been in the market.

Cobleskill Index: The Schorhar Co. crop of 1905, now practically harvested, is about two-thirds of that of last year. The market is merely nominal both growers and dealers being inclined to wait for further development before transacting business. Some believe the ruling price will be 20 cents.

Lowville Journal and Republican: Some hop growers in Lewis county received about two-thirds of a crop this year, and others only about half, and in some instances old yards were altogether abandoned because of the lice and blight. A fair estimate places the total yield at about one-half that of last year. Only a few farmers in this county are now engaged in hop growing, while a few years ago it was one of the principal industries of the county.

Oneida Dispatch: The hop harvest in this vicinity has been completed, and the market is very quiet, few transactions thus far being reported. Mrs. George Lawrence of the first ward has sold her hops for 20 cents a pound but as a rule buyers are offering only 15 or 16 cents.

Maione Gazette: The first sale of hops on the local market were made this week when W. H. King secured the Laid & Smallman growth of sixty bales from their east main street yard at 20 cents per pound. Thomas Shield sold between 50 and 60 bales to H. S. Klock of Oneida at 17 cents. These sales constitute all the transactions up to Tuesday. Offers have been numerous at about the figures here quoted. Growers are generally disposed to wait for further market developments.

Cobleskill Times: The hop crop is harvested and pressing and baling are now the order of the day. The Cobleskill crop has been gathered in first class shape, the hops being of good color and nicely picked. They should be good sellers. The local market is inactive, no sales being reported.

Oneida Herald: There is a downward tendency this week in the hop market, and local dealers who made small purchases a week ago at 20 cents, cannot offer the figures at present. Growers who, early in September, sold 20 cents are now offering to sell at 17 cents, without takers. The lower prices are said to be due to the very low offers of brewers of coast hops, which can be had at 15 cents.

New York Journal of Commerce Bulletin: The reports received from the coast continued to report a steady market, with a fair amount of business being transacted at unchanged prices, they ranging from 10c for medium to 13c for choice grades. Some business was also being transacted up the State, with prices holding steady at 17c to 18c for prime choice grades. The foreign markets were reported unchanged.

New York Producers' Price-Current: The fall market is opening slowly; indeed the amount of business transacted up to the present writing has been very small. Most buyers have appreciated the downward tendency of values, and in a quarter has there been any disposition to stock up. Dealers have felt that they could afford to wait until the full extent of the harvest was known and the probable outlets could be gauged with some degree of accuracy. So far only a few lots of state 1905's have arrived and these sold at 18 to 20 cents, generally; possibly 2c more could be obtained if the quality was choice. Some 1904 Pacifics have been handled at 14 to 17c. Stocks of all kinds are light and everyone is anxious to see the market settle to a reasonable safe basis. The State crop is now pretty nearly picked, and a few lots have been baled. Estimates of the yield still vary considerably but it looks as if the shortage would be about 20 per cent. So far as quality is concerned there is a disappointment; this is reflected in the wide range of prices reported in the latter part of the season. Samples of Oregon are fine, better in fact than were looked for; picking is still under way and it is claimed that the yield in that state will run fully 100,000 bales, perhaps more. The quality of the California hops is variable, with some lots rough, dirty picked, dark, etc. Recent purchases on the Coast have been at 10 1/2 to 12c. Late heavy storms in England have done some damage, and the quality will be reduced, with a wide range in prices. The samples of German hops seen thus far are of fine quality, but it is said that recent storms have affected some lots and there will be some reddish growths. Recent purchases have been on the basis of 27c to 33c landed in New York.

Waterbury Times: The market that was established last week by several sales at 17 and 18c does not change, and the market is merely nominal. Those prices this week, the majority at the latter price. There is a great diversity in the quality of hops this year, some choice and some poor, and of course when all of these grades come into the market the prices offered will show a corresponding diversity. We have heard of nothing sold above 18c. W. S. Smith, and W. T. Loftus are reported to have gotten that price for their growths while R. M. Usher got 17 1/2 and C. L. Terry, Philipp Fenns, Terry Bros. and A. J. Barber received 17c for their growths or parts thereof. What the next few days will bring forth in regard to the prices is a problem. Many would be satisfied to see them remain firm at the present rates.

Kentish Observer: Although it is a certainty now that many acres will be left unpicked on account of the rain, the deterioration of quality through the adverse weather, the crop, nevertheless, will be a very large one, probably something over 600,000 cwt. The last huge crop was grown in 1901 when the official estimate was 649,387 cwt.

HOP CASE HAS INNING.

Late yesterday afternoon, Judge Galloway on department No. 2 of the circuit court heard arguments in Chambers on the question of dissolving the injunction in the case of Wolfer vs. Hurst & Hinkle, the Hubbard hop case. This is the case which in one form or another has been before the courts for about a year past and an injunction has been granted preventing Hurst & Hinkle from selling or removing a crop of hops pending a final hearing in the supreme court. The case came up yesterday on a motion of Carson & Cannon, attorneys for Hurst & Hinkle, to secure the release of the hops, the motion being resisted by Bonham & Martin, attorneys for Wolfer. The court took the case under advisement.

A number of additional witnesses were examined in the case of Mary Sappingfield vs. Amanda King, and others, a suit to quiet title to real estate, a suit to quiet title to real estate, and after the attorneys presented their arguments the case was taken under advisement by Judge Galloway. The hearing of this case, which involves property said to be worth $20,000, was commenced on Tuesday afternoon and a large number of witnesses gave testimony during the trial.

Judge Galloway took adjournment last evening for an indefinite period.

HOP PICKING ENDED.

DALLAS, Or., Oct. 3.—The hop picking season near Dallas and in Polk county generally is closed except in some large yards near Independence. Krebs Bros. especially have been short of pickers from the start and have considerable acreage yet to pick. The quality of hops is very good, and the rain has helped to bring mold, as was expected.

The prune crop is nearly all in and was harvested in good conditions. Mr. Linn Chapman has dried more than 100,000 pounds. M. M. Ellis has 190,000 pounds on his floors with perhaps 30,000 pounds on the ground under the trees. Kimball & Butts have as many on their floors, but are rapidly approaching the end. Every one is advised to bring mold, as was expected.

CHANGES DATE

HOP GROWERS WILL MEET HERE WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, INSTEAD OF 15TH.

President Krebs fears closing days of Fair would interfere with the meeting—Is sanguine of success of venture—Talks of conditions.

Pres. Krebs, of the Oregon Hop Growers' Protective Assn., announced last night, upon his return from Portland and points down the valley, that he had decided to change the date of the proposed growers' meeting, to be held here for the purpose of forming a corporation of devising some means for the protection of the growers' interests, from Saturday, October 15, to Wednesday, October 12. This change is made, he says, on account of the exposition closing date being fixed for Sunday, the 16, and he fears the fair would detract from the interest of the meeting and affect the attendance materially.

Dealers are still rustling about the country picking up all of the loose hops available, but, although several lots have been picked up during the past day or two, no sales have been reported. The current rumors confirmed. The price offered still ranges around the 12-cent mark. Krebs Bros, who purchased 540 bales at 13 cents, about two weeks ago, are reported to have offered the same price yesterday but no confirmation could be gained. In discussing present conditions, as he sees them, and future prospects and regarding the approaching meeting of the growers, Conrad Krebs said last evening:

"I am notified that the hop growers of Oregon realize the unique position which they occupy, in fact the Oregon growers have the key to the situation, because the quality of this state is excellent, whereas the quality of New York state is extremely poor. There are also a great many hops of poor quality in California and Washington, in short all of the choice hops of Oregon will be required for export. Why should we growers sell our hops at 12, 13 or even 15 cents per pound knowing that the United States produced about 30,000 bales less than in 1904, which, added to the fact that the market is barren of old and old hops and the brewers are fully out of stocks, entitles us to at least 20 cents per pound."

"In 1904 the United States produced about 255,000 bales and I estimate the present crop at 225,000 bales. But supposing, for the sake of argument, that there are 240,000 or even 250,000 bales, we are still entitled to 20 cents per pound. If the report of the brewers for the United States bureau of statistics and revenue department is accurate and reliable, which we have every reason to believe, as the report is a sworn statement and no one could be accused of falsifying a statement without a motive, and the brewers have absolutely no motive to misrepresent the report of the ingredients they are using in the beer for the government does not prescribe any certain quantity of hops or other ingredients per barrel, the government simply desires to know as a safeguard against deception in the revenue tax, the ingredients as well as the amount of each used in the beer. As I have stated, if the brewers reports are correct, which shows .32 of a pound of hops per barrel, and taking it for granted that 52,000,000 barrels of beer will be manufactured this coming year, then we will require for home consumption over 230,000 bales of hops for beer. Not to speak of the hops used for other purposes, such as yeast, patent medicines, etc."

"In other words, all of the hops in existence in this country are required for home consumption. The quality of English hops being poor will create a strong demand for choice American hops. Reliable authorities estimate the probable export from 60,000 to 70,000 bales. Every bale exported will mean that much of a shortage here. According to the New York state market and German market, our own market is too low by 3 cents per pound. Eighteen and 20 cents have been paid in New York, and a cablegram received from Germany reports the market 5 cents higher there, which, of course, sooner or later must reflect here. We are not aware whether England has 400,000 or 600,000 cwt., because our American brewers do not use English hops. Whatever foreign hops are brewed in America come from Germany, and our American brewers are only using the amount of German hops to which they are accustomed. The brewers couldn't afford to increase the use of German hops for one year even if they could buy them cheaper than the American hops, for it would change the flavor of the beer, which would make it necessary for the beer consumers to cultivate a new taste for that beverage."

"The growers should not lose sight of 12 cents duty on hops imported. On Wednesday, the 18th of this month, there will be a meeting of hop growers of Oregon at Salem, which will be the greatest meeting of growers the Pacific coast has ever witnessed. At that meeting the growers will devise some plan whereby they can receive the intrinsic value, based upon supply and demand, for their product. It is also well to bear in mind that England will not come into this market before November, possibly the latter part of the month. Due to the arsenic scare, and the dirty picking of 1904 hops the English hop merchants want American samples for inspection and analysis before they will operate. None of the growers should even think of selling before December, the shortsellers must make their deliveries no matter what the price may be. At present they are playing a freeze-out game, which, I believe, will be a failure."

Result of a Runaway.

The remains of Mr. and Mrs. John Donke and their three children have been found at the foot of a precipice on the Medford-Klamath road near the town of Prospect where they had lain for apparently three weeks. The wagon and the remains of the horses were also found at the same place. The family was evidently the victim of a runaway disaster.

New Spino Game.

Reports have become current today of a bunch game which was worked extensively here last evening, and with such success as to indicate that the operators had had some training along the lines of frenzied insanity.

The method of operating was for the gang to meet with an unsuspecting victim, and inquire whether he knew if the Portland train was in or not. To this the glibest party would always say that it was. Then some member of the gang would offer to bet a dollar that it was not. The unsuspecting one would immediately produce the amount and the gang would take the bet. Here the fun would come for no one would know the money he given the stakeholder that that official would lead the crowd to a cigar stand, peanut Schools at Bend.

A year ago there was one public school, with an attendance of fifty pupils in all the Bend district. Since then the district has been divided and now four teachers are employed to teach 125 pupils in the same territory—and quite as many are now beyond school range as were then. Two teachers are employed for several five pupils in Bend and two in Laidlaw for about fifty.—Bend Bulletin.

New Round House.

During the past week the work of excavating was well advanced for the foundation of the new brick round house to be erected in the S. P. R. R. yards in this city. This work will now be pushed right along and the cement piers, engine pits and foundation walls put in place as rapidly as possible. This will be followed immediately by the brick work, and it is expected that the new building will be up within thirty or forty days and that it will be ready for occupancy by December 1.

The new structure will have a depth of about eighty feet—twenty more than the present building—and will occupy practically all the available space between the present round house (which will also be retained) and the J. G. Flook Co.'s planing mill. It will have eight stalls for locomotives of the largest type, and be fitted with all the modern conveniences of a structure of that nature.

Although the work on the new coal bunkers here is not yet fully completed, it is announced that the engines on this road are to be changed to oil burners as rapidly as possible. In conformity with this action large oil storage tanks will be placed in the railroad yards here at an early date. They will probably be placed south of the old round house. The use of oil will obviate the heavy expense of hauling and burning of coal here. These permanent improvements fix Roseburg's place all the more firmly as the most important railway point in western Oregon outside of Portland.—Roseburg Review.

New Firm to Take Possession.

Public Library for Baker City.

When the city council last evening decided to install a public library and accept the gift of the owners of the present library of their entire property, and also the offer of the Alpha Literary Club and Professor Churchill they made a popular move and a hearty welcome from the citizens of Baker City will be given them. A good library is now assured, which will be free to all and every citizen of the city will have access to it. To begin with the new library will have the 1300 books which belong at present to the private library and to this number will in all probability be added about 500 volumes which are in the public library. At the council meeting Prof. Churchill stated that he was confident that the school board would give their consent to put the school library with the city's, and thus add to the number of volumes. By doing so, there would be over 1800 books on the shelves.—Baker City Herald.

Coyotes Are Plentiful.

Charles Shapiash, the well known Umatilla scout, who resides at Thorn Hollow on his allotment, claims that the coyotes are more plentiful this year than ever before on the Umatilla river. Last year his wife, a full blood squaw, raised 100 Buff Cochins and Brahma chickens, but they were sluggish and large chickens and such poor runners that the coyotes caught nearly all of them. This year Mrs. Shapiash is raising Brown Leghorns, a smaller and speedier breed, which can outrun the coyotes, and thus far has lost none through those varmints.—East Oregonian.

Took Only Fifteen Minutes.

It took a Corvallis jury but fifteen minutes to return a verdict of guilty against the "social club" of that city for selling liquor where the local option law is in force. After the city of Corvallis was voted free because of the excellent schools there a few old "sports" who had always defied the law before thought they would organize a "social club," and continue to dispense booze regardless of the prohibition law. This jury of citizens has given them a jolt that they will not soon forget. A law is a law and the sooner the people come to recognize the fact the better.—Eugene Guard.

Mrs. John Starns, who owns the Rees farm near the Corvallis road, came to Albany this morning in a boat and in it two dead turkeys. His story was that Monday evening three or four Albany young men shot the turkeys and placed them in their boat, preparatory to bringing them to Albany, when he discovered the situation and took charge of the boat and turkeys. The three young men who had put denied having anything to do with the boat or turkeys and left without them.

Mr. Starns says he has lost during the last year fifty turkeys, one hundred chickens, and that his neighbors have lost a good many fowls. He believes they were shot and taken away by Albany boys and young men and he proposes to go to the bottom of the matter for the future protection of their interests.

Upon complaint of Mr. Starns warrants were ordered issued for William Crawford, William Garrett, Jos. Smith and S. A. Whitney, which were placed in the hands of the sheriff.—Albany Democrat.
