Sixty Years Ago

The Wild Life in the Willamette Valley in the Earliest Days of White Settlement.

I have said in a former paper, that large game like elk and deer were very scarce on the plain lands of the Willamette valley as the home-builders who crossed the plains from Missouri began to settle here.

McCauley, Vancott, Burris, Anderson and others quietly disappeared and Leslie, Holman, Parrish, Waller, Judson and McClane, Keiser, Hawley, Harris, Carter, Beator, Sanley, Waldo, Matt and Delaney, the last five pioneers on the outside, took their place.

The civil government had been initiated at the wolf meeting which met at the residence of Joseph Gervais on March 9, 1843, and adjourned to Champey May 2 and where a civil government was initiated by a vote of 52 for against 50 opposed.

This of course created the necessity of more attention to the destruction of carnivorous animals, the increasing wants of increasing immigration however took public attention away from wolves and bears and panthers and each settler killed for himself.

My personal experience with wolves led me first to see that Roman legend of Romulus and Remus being of miraculous birth and suckled as twin infants by a she wolf, becoming the founder of the Roman empire, was the seed of a coarse imagination; and its believers must have been near the intellectual level of the Oregon Indians who killed the horse of a man who died so that he might have it for use in the other world.

No, that myth meant no more than that the destruction of the wolf-nourished Roman settlement by increasing the food supply of the family, and the Roman hunter that could kill the fat wolf and pursue his best girl to a point his door posts with the grease, would have a sheep skin for her to sit on on his hearth, and mutton for her food, and it would make little difference if she was a Sabine girl, just as was in 1840 in Oregon.

The coyote, or small wolf, were also plentiful in Oregon and the writer became somewhat skillful in killing them long before the big wolves were silent as they took poison readily, while the coyote, cunning as a fox, more so, in fact, got so cute that he would never take a second mess out of a lamb or sheep.

The lynx and wild cat were sometimes very destructive on lambs and small pigs where their drinking place was in bush cover. Some thirty-five years ago when the small wolf refused to take poison, Joseph Waldo, then my neighbor, set out to find hounds. He did not ask the quality of the hound only if his owner was tired of him.

(1) I wish to say here no illusion I make to Dr. John McLoughlin in this or any other paper I have written, or may write, should be taken to mean anything but high respect to him.

There was however, a body of settlers independent of Vancouver in Marion county and south of the original mission, and who began to sell out to the M. E. missionaries when the second site was chosen. The names of Wal-

LAND BOARD'S POWER LIMITED. Cannot Sell Land Devised to the State for Specific Purposes Without Special Law.

Attorney General Crawford yesterday rendered the following opinion to Governor Chamberlain: "Replying to yours of the 15th inst., referring to the letter of adjutant of the soldiers' home of date 13th inst. and requesting opinion of this office as to authority of the state land board, or other state officer or officers to sell a certain tract of land bequeathed and devised unto the state of Oregon for the sole benefit, enjoyment and use of the Oregon soldiers' home, located at Roseburg, described as the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 21 township 50 south of range 5 west, containing forty acres, permit me to say that I find no authority authorizing the sale of any lands bequeathed to the state of Oregon for the benefit of any institution.

Section 3295 of Bellingier and Cotton's code provides that 'the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer, as a board of commissioners for the sale of school and university lands and for the investment of the funds arising therefrom, shall be styled the state land board, and such board shall have power to sell lands devised to the state for common school, or other section 3299 provides that the board may make rules for the transaction of business coming before the board; section 3300 authorized the board to sell all lands acquired by grant from the United States and provides terms; section 3301 authorizes the said board to sell title lands; section 3304 provides the payments to be made by applicants to purchase timber lands, swamp, or overflowed or tide lands, and 'evidently refers to lands received by grants; section 3321 authorizes the board to sell lands bid in for foreclosure of mortgages; section 3332 confirms the title to the state, school and university lands, but does not confer any other power of sale than is conferred by the other sections, and I am unable to find any section conferring a general power to sell lands belonging to the state. Each section seems to refer to specific lands, except the one section which says 'lands received by grant from the United States.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that the state land board has no authority to sell and dispose of lands devised to the state for a specific purpose without an act of the legislature directly authorizing it, and no other officer of the state is authorized to convey any class of state lands, except the state land board. I am of the opinion that a special act is necessary to authorize the board to convey title to said tract of land devised to the state."

The property in question is a 40-acre tract of land which belongs to an old soldier who died after being an inmate of the home for a time and who made a will devising to the state for the benefit of the home. It is of no use to the home, unless sold, as it is situated some miles away. It is probable the next legislature will make provision for disposing of it and using the money for improvements at the home.

MURDER NEAR RIDGEFIELD. Teamster Shot Down by Man Whom He Quarreled a Year Ago.

PORTLAND, Nov. 20.—A special to the Oregonian from Vancouver, Wash., states a man named Brooks shot and killed Adolph Miller, a teamster, today near Ridgefield. According to Brooks' confession he had a quarrel with Miller a year ago which ended in Brooks shooting at Miller. Brooks went to eastern Washington and returned Sunday, as he expressed it, "to get Miller." Brooks was captured at Ridgefield by a posse and held to await the arrival of the sheriff.

ANOTHER WRECK REPORTED. CLARKS HARBOR, N. S., Nov. 20.—The Norwegian steamer Turbine with captain and crew of about sixteen is thought to have foundered in a terrible gale Friday. The coasting steamer Blma E., from Mud Island, today brought the news that Friday afternoon a large steamer supposed to be ledge off the south coast of the province and disappeared in a raging sea.

Persons on the island saw the steamer strike the ledge but were considerable distance away and owing to the tremendous sea were unable to launch boats. So quickly did the boat go down that no opportunity was given the crew to fight for their lives.

While the craft hung on the rocks the seas made a clean breach over her. Suddenly a giant comb lifted her from her resting place and the next instant she took the fatal plunge. The only means of communication between the island and mainland is by steamer, the weather being too rough to permit the using of their own boats and in consequence the news of the wreck did not reach here till today.

LAST SPECIALS

THESE WILL BE NONE NEXT WEEK IN STATESMAN'S SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST.

But Every Candidate Is Working Hard This Week and Nearly Every One Will Pile up a Lot of Votes on the Specials for This Week.

Every candidate should keep close track of the contest from this time on, as this is the interesting part of it and this is the time that will tell if you are going to win or if some of the other contestants are going to be the winners. All of the contestants have the same chance and no one should get discouraged because some of the others may have a few more votes than she has. Remember that a new subscriber to the Daily Statesman for one year counts 2000 votes, this week, and as they are not hard to get you can easily go to the head if you but put forth your efforts, while the special offers are in force this week. You doubtless have many subscriptions promised, and if you get them this week and send them in you will receive more votes for them than at any other time, as this is positively the last special offer that will be made during the contest.

REMEMBER, NO MORE SPECIAL OFFERS AFTER THIS WEEK, and unless you take advantage of this week you will stand but little chance to win one of the fine prizes that are being given away. All new subscribers count for nearly twice as much this week as they will next, so get in while there is time. If you send the subscriptions in this week we will issue the votes for you and you can hold them as long as you please, or until the end of the contest. There is no time like the present, so get in and do your best. If you do this you will not regret it as you are the one that will receive the benefit from it.

Last week in The Statesman contest was known as the opportunity week, and we are going to make this another opportunity week. With the help of the fair contestants, we are going to make it the banner week. This is an opportunity to get extra votes by a little extra hustling on the part of the candidates. We repeat, this is the last offer of its kind that will be made, and it will pay the candidates to do their best this week. All candidates have had fair warning and an equal opportunity to better their positions in the contest. This will no doubt be the banner week as the paper of Sunday had special coupon good for fifteen votes; if voted next Saturday, and there are four more special offers this week: the special offers are for one month, three months, six months and one year new subscribers to the Daily Statesman. The voting yesterday, while not as heavy as Saturday, was quite heavy, and the doors of The Statesman business office are kept continually swinging all day long and a steady stream of voters is constantly coming in and out.

STOLZ ON THE ROAD. The Albany Herald Pays a Deserved Tribute to One of Salem's Active Citizens.

G. Stolz of Salem, a prominent manufacturer of cider and vinegars, spent yesterday in this city, leaving on the afternoon train for Corvallis. Mr. Stolz has for years conducted his factory in Salem and at one time had one in Portland, operating them very successfully. He has ever made a fight for purity in food products and prides himself on the fact that none but pure articles are turned out at his establishment. He is a prominent member of the Oregon Manufacturers' Association, and stands high in several fraternal orders, especially in the A. O. U. W., in which organization he has for many years been one of the most ardent and effective workers.

Mr. Stolz has for many years been deeply interested in civic improvements and betterment, and in Salem where he lives is always at the head of any movement for the improvement of the city. For several years he has not been on the road selling goods, but has sent out salesmen, but at this time he is making a tour of the valley looking after his trade, and during this trip he has made a close study of the condition of the cities and towns visited with a view to their seatness and the improvements made since he established the road several years ago, since which time he has not, until this occasion, seen any of those places. He stated yesterday that the improvements noted by him in Eugene and Albany were of a character that spoke volumes for the pride of the people of the two cities and his congratulations Albany on the civic improvements of the last few years. The many new cement walks, the cleanliness and the general tidying up of the city were so evident that he could not help speaking of the matter. This improvement he noted in both the business and residence districts.

WILLAMETTE SECONDS RIVAL FIRST'S RECORD

CORVALLIS TEAM EASILY BEATEN YESTERDAY. SMALL CROWD IN ATTENDANCE

Salem High School Loses to Eugene by Heavy Score—Other Football Games.

In a chilly downpour of "Oregon mist" the second football teams of Willamette University and the Oregon Agricultural College of Corvallis battled for supremacy on the local field yesterday afternoon. The result was a victory for the Salem lads by a score of 9 to 0. All the points were made in the first half of the game, and Gray, the speedy quarterback was directly responsible for them. The first four came on a well executed place kick, which was made doubly difficult by the conditions of the ball, field, and weather, and also the angle from which the goal was made. However, the oval sailed squarely between the posts with plenty of space to spare.

The other five points were the result of a twenty-five yard run by the same player. The most creditable part of this performance was not the run itself, so much as the way in which Gray drew in the Farmers' left wing on a pretended tackle play. When he started with the ball there was no one in sight to stop the runner, except the opposing safety, who was cleverly eluded.

In the second half honors were more even, although it is true that the playing was almost all in Corvallis' territory, and if the game had been longer Willamette might have scored again. Gray is certainly a star, and he might aptly be called "The Ecker" of Willamette University. Besides the feats already enumerated he showed his ability to punt, and a second attempt at a field goal just before the close of the half might have been successful had it not been blocked. Gray did not kick goal on his touchdown but this was excusable.

Ford was another star for Willamette and he got away for a thirty-yard run the longest of the day. Lonsberry went in in the second half, for the first time this season on the local field, except for a few moments in the Pullman-Willamette game. His defense was particularly noticeable.

Other good players for the Willamette team were Hewitt, McCully, Judd and Simpson. Sanders was good on the offense but he failed to back up McCully on the defensive. Jorstad made the longest kickoff of the season by a Salem team. Darby was the star for Corvallis, making a twenty-eight-yard run in the first half. Sweek, the other halfback, also distinguished himself, as did Rose Lytle, and McKinnon, first team substitutes. Cherry and Walker, center and fullback missed the train at Corvallis.

On a whole, the game was interesting to the handful of spectators who braved the weather. The lack of fumbling under such conditions, was remarkable, but little rag-chewing was indulged in. Willamette's backs showed a tendency to hit the line too high. Corvallis was weak in the kicking department.

Story of the Game. Corvallis defended the eastern goal, and, with a grizzling rain in the players' faces, the game was on. Jorstad kicked off to O. A. C.'s five-yard line, the ball rolling over the line, only to be brought back five yards. Pendergrass was the lineup at the beginning of the game: O. A. C.—Rose, r. e.; Hughes, r. t.; Wilkes, r. g.; Sweek, r. e.; McKinnon, l. g.; Lytle, l. t.; Harding, l. e.; Cronis, q.; Sweek, r. h.; Darby, l. h.; Pendergrass, full. Moscow, Nov. 20.—The zemstvo congress devoted two sessions to the discussion of the attitude it should adopt toward the new government and adjourned without a decision. The debate indicated clearly the existence of two apparently irreconcilable parties, though the relative strength was not shown. A score of orators participated and they were about evenly divided between the advocates of the immediate convocation of the constituent assembly and those urging co-operation with the government to save the country from anarchy if not from complete revolution.
