MARION COUNTY REPUBLICAN TICKET.

- REPRESENTATIVES: J. D. WALDO, Mosley; T. T. GEEB, Silverton; J. Q. WILSON, Salem; S. LAYMAN, Woodburn; Wm. ARMSTRONG, South Salem.

THE WORK OF THE CONVENTION.

We present to-day the ticket nominated yesterday by the Marion county republican convention. The wisdom of their selection is approved by all, the nominees for the legislature and county offices alike, being men unspotted before the world, of good judgment, and experienced in business affairs.

The platform is also a stable one to stand on. It favors an honest administration of good laws, a fair distribution of the burden of taxation, a liberal and judicious outlay in the improvement of our rivers and harbors, and an exercise of the protective policy that will benefit all classes of the community.

The enthusiasm that prevailed in the convention will be diffused through the republican masses of the county during the campaign, and at the polls they will achieve a victory in evidence of the fact that devotion to republican principles still prevails. In this sign we conquer.

WANTS TO COME WEST.

We print the following as a specimen of the letters that are being received by one firm in this city at the rate of thirty a day.

THE WINTERS TOO SEVERE. EIDSVILLE, CLARK CO., WIS., March 19th, 1888.

GENTLEMEN: I take the Pioneer Press, of St. Paul, and I saw where you advertise land in Oregon. Now I want you to send me your pamphlet, stating prices. I have a good farm in Wisconsin, but oh, the winters! Three feet of snow here yet and the mercury down to zero every night. Can't raise any fruit and very poor for stock. I have twenty-five head of good stock, but they have eaten their heads off this winter. I hate to leave our farm, but it seems there is a better climate than this. I have lived here twelve years and have good buildings, but it seems every winter is harder to worry through. Write just what I can do there and I may come out. If I like the country I can bring twenty other families all well fixed. The weather is very changeable here; warm two days ago, and yesterday snowed one foot; to-day the sun is warm, but the air very wintry. Everybody is complaining and is dissatisfied with the climate. The land is good, but the springs are so late one can't do much until May or June. Please send pamphlet. Yours respectfully, JOHN B. CLARK.

The above, we say, is a sample copy of the character of the letters addressed to this city from all parts of our broad country. So wide extended a thirst for useful knowledge is evidence of the fact that the desire exists in the minds of a large share of our fellow-citizens to change their surroundings, and that their eyes are turned in the direction of the Pacific coast. This is a timely hint to our citizens that they must be up and doing. By taking the proper steps to set forth the unsurpassed advantages they have to offer, we can divert to this section and the rich valley of which it forms a part, a good share of the flow of population that is now pouring into Washington Territory and Southern California.

Having suggested this idea to several real estate dealers and property holders in this city, who approved it as commendable enterprise, one of the number was moved to send us the following communication, which contains some useful suggestions. We commend it to the attention of our readers.

HOW TO ADVERTISE THE CITY. ED. CAPITAL JOURNAL: In order that the pamphlet you speak of may reach the class of people who are likely to come to this coast, a short notice of it should be published in western papers. In this way, every copy may be sent directly to the persons who want it, and who will appreciate it. The names of applicants for the pamphlet will also constitute a list to whom extra editions of our local newspapers may be sent, or any subsequent publications that may be of interest to them. The total expense of the pamphlet and advertising will amount to about $1500. Of this sum $500 should be expended in advertising, $500 for the pamphlet, and $500 for illustrations. This expenditure would, at a low estimate, supply reading matter to 10,000 families, all of whom would be interested in Oregon. Of this number, it is fair to suppose, a large per cent, should be coming west, would make Salem their destination.

The usual method of scattering publications broadcast is not only very expensive, but is comparatively barren of results. But it will be seen at once that this plan is not open to this objection. The sum itself is small compared with amounts expended by other places. Portland, conservatively as it is proverbially, proposes to expend $20,000, or twenty times this amount, during the coming year. Not only would the expenditure of this sum be a good stroke of policy for Salem, and return, in a very short time, many times the sum expended, in the advance in the price of real estate caused by increased immigration and in the increased amount of business due to the enlargement of the population, but every citizen of Salem would derive satisfaction from having a creditable representation of the resources of the country and city in a nice illustrated pamphlet.

Salem, March 28th. Wife—John, you have a very annoying habit of saying "What's that?" whenever you are spoken to. Can't you break yourself of it? Husband (reading)—Er—what's that?—The Epoch.

LET US HAVE PROOF.

Our chipper democratic neighbor, in Oregon City, the Courier, is raving against the republicans in this dulcet strain: "The republican party, when Rev. R. R. and R. Burchard's mouth overthrew it, left to the democratic party a legacy of frauds, rapacity, political chicanery and, above all, of moral degeneracy in public affairs that has hampered it in its efforts to promote the welfare of the republic." He has seen this serious charge so frequently advanced that he probably has grown to believe that it must be true. But will he just point out one or two cases of official dishonesty left "as a legacy of frauds" to the democratic party, and illustrate by citation "the moral degeneracy in public affairs" that was brought about by alleged republican misrule? Unless our neighbor can produce some proof of his sweeping condemnation, he will be classed with those howling hoodlums, who raise their barbaric yelp over the roofs of the world.

Maudlin Clarence was drowned in a butt of Malmsey, but one of these Chinese certificate hoodlers indulged in a yet more expensive bath. A dispatch from San Francisco tells the following rich story:

It is said that on one occasion Boyd and Ciprico were enjoying what is commonly known as a "littlesupper" at a well-known restaurant here. On this occasion Boyd was feeling pretty good, and determined to have his little joke. He therefore announced his intention of taking a champagne bath. It is said Ciprico nearly had a fit at the idea of such extravagance, but Boyd insisted on his ordering and emptying bottles into the bath tub. Fifteen hundred dollars is said to have been expended in this way—300 bottles at $5 apiece—each bottle wringing a groan from Ciprico. Then Boyd had his bath, and whatever was his power over his comrade it was sufficient to make the latter foot the bills.

That exponent of California democracy, the San Francisco Examiner, is hard up for a political champion. It is now lauding Cleveland in superlative eulogy as a paragon of purity and an exemplar of American statesmanship, and hails the ponderous executive as "the representative of the party of the Pacific Coast." As Mr. Cleveland's travels have never extended west of the Missouri, and the Pacific Coast is as unreal to his understanding as the still vexed Bermoothes, he must be rather a lame representative, and its advocacy, during the coming struggle, should be committed to more competent hands.
