LATEST DISPATCHES.

Lightning Flashes of What the World at Large is Doing. EWING WATTERSON'S SCRAP. Jealousy Drives him Furious and he has Recourse to a Knife.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Ewing Watterson, son of Henri Watterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal, at present residing here, to-night stabbed a young woman at his boarding house.

It was at first thought that the wound was fatal, but an examination showed that a rib had stopped the progress of the knife.

The young woman's name is unknown. For some time exceedingly friendly relations have existed between the two. Lately, jealousy of the woman has caused some sharp differences, and yesterday the woman refused to have anything more to do with him.

This evening he went to her room and insisted that she should go out with him, but she abruptly refused. At this he became furious, drew a pocket knife and began to slash away at her.

The first blow cut her wrist pretty badly, but a bracelet prevented serious injury. The second blow fell in the region of the heart, cutting a gash about an inch long and apparently entering the cavity. The woman bled profusely, and when the landlady and the other boarders responded to her cries for help it was believed she was fatally injured. The police were called and Watterson was arrested and taken to the station house, where he will remain for the night.

The physicians are of the opinion that the woman will not suffer seriously, but had it not been for her bracelet, corset-steel, and the fact of the knife glancing on a rib, she would have been killed.

After his furious attack on the woman, and when she had sunk, bleeding beneath his blows he seemed for the first time to realize what he had been about, and then tried to stab himself, but was prevented by those about him.

As yet no complaint has been filed by the woman, though Watterson is locked up on the charge of assault with intent to kill.

Singular Suicide.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—Geo. Pahlgren, a shoemaker, has been lying at the almshouse. He was in the last stages of consumption, and yesterday the doctor informed him that death must speedily ensue. Within an hour thereafter Pahlgren covertly procured a razor and cut the arteries of his left wrist. That the flow of blood might not betray the deed, he held the wound over a cup, which he hid under the bed clothing. The cup was filled in a minute, and Pahlgren, weakened by the drain, lost courage and revealed his condition to a nurse. The wound was bound up, but the unfortunate man sank rapidly during the night and this morning died.

Not a Diplomatist.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The Mail and Express, says editorially: "It is not at all certain that the Russian government had a right to convey to the United States jurisdiction over disputed waters of Behring Sea, but the question ought not to be negotiated by Bayard. He is not good at that business. He would admit all the absurd claims for damages that are made by the Dominion schooners."

An Unwelcome Guest.

ST. LOUIS, April 19.—A special to the Post Dispatch from Saradria, Miss., says: Edward Cossar, a colored man possessed of considerable wealth, returned to his home unexpectedly last night and found Rev. Sidney Hibler, pastor of the Methodist church and principal of the school, at his home. Not being satisfied with his explanation, he shot him in the head, killing him instantly.

THE SITUATION MADE PLAIN.

Bro. Webb is irrepressible. In the school of experience he has probably learned that it is the persistent man who attains his end. Proudhon, who injected into our social philosophy the disturbing axiom, "property is robbery," (la proprieté, c'est le vol.) made this declaration: "If you would impress a general truth in the minds of the people, do not believe that its mere utterance will carry conviction. You have to sound it from the house-top; you have to repeat and reiterate; you have to strike blow after blow, as the blacksmith does, when he would shape the iron to his use." This seems to be the method that our cold water disciple has adopted.

In another column appears a communication from our fellow townsman's facile pen, in which he explains and justifies the political methods of the prohibition party. It has been charged against them as baseness the strategy they employ of striking the republican party where their blows will be most harmful. Perhaps it has been a little weak in republican writers and speakers insisting that forbearance should be extended to their side because a sympathy is felt for the end they are laboring to attain. Mr. Webb opens their eyes to the weakness of any such claim.

The prohibitionists have set up in business on their own account, and have started in to win. They have unfolded their banner, marshaled their forces and commenced a vigorous campaign. They ask favors of none, and will extend clemency to none who belong to a hostile camp. A mere approval of the object they seek, but co-operation with their enemies is set down as active belligerency; such parties will be treated as foes, until they go over to the prohibition side and swear fealty.

This is about the size of it, and there is no doubt that our correspondent speaks by the card. And it is well to be informed of this fact. We have so long been accustomed to divide the American people into two great parties—the republicans and the democrats—and to scout all small factions—greenbackers, prohibitionists and independents—as cranks and malcontents, that most of us had closed our eyes to the increasing growth of the cold water disciples, and had failed to recognize the truth that they are looming up in our midst as a third "great party." When the southern states seceded and took up arms against the country, the first design of the government was to treat them as rebels; but when their power and determination were made fully manifest, it was found there was a formidable foe to combat, and the rights of a belligerent were accorded.

Now that we are given to understand that the few St. John extremists whom we have hitherto chided and ridiculed, assume an equal footing, have crossed the Rubicon, and are in the field with drums beating and colors flying, the question that comes home to the business and bosom of every thoughtful republican, is what conduct we shall observe towards these impracticable people, and what arms we shall use against them? We cannot treat them as political guerrillas, mere marauders without nationality and outside of military law; and it would be weak generalship to trust to the efficacy of calling names, or to suppose that they can be driven in utter rout by the advance of a skirmish line. Our correspondent, with an audacity that well becomes his insouciant demeanor, tells us that the prohibition party is "here to stay." So mote it be. We accept the challenge. As a loyal but chivalrous republican sheet the CAPITAL JOURNAL will do its best to make their propinquity interesting, and welcome them with hostile hands, (as Mrs. Malaprop would say,) to the empire they are ambitious to capture. If their cause is right, God will prosper their labors; if they imagine a vain thing, they are troubling themselves to no purpose.

It is encouraging to note that among all the property holders interviewed to-day by our reporter, in reference to the street improvements proposed, not one held back on account of the expense, or interposed any other objection. This is a hopeful sign, and is a prophecy of a good future for Salem. Now is the time for every one to put his shoulder to the wheel, and push along while the conditions are favorable.

Made His File but out of Health.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—J. C. Flood is reported in an interview to-day to have said that next month in company with his wife and daughter he would leave this city for Europe to be gone for a long period—a year, perhaps two.

Mr Flood is credited with saying: "I have reached a point which I have been aiming at for a number of years. I have at last got my business affairs into such a shape that I can go away for an indefinite period and recuperate my health. I am completely out of mining stocks, and don't care which way Consolidated California & Virginia and the rest of the market goes. My daughter's building is all completed and paid for, and is fast being filled with steady tenants. All my wheat losses are adjusted, and are fast being forgotten. Everything is going on smoothly and prosperously at the Nevada Bank. I have nothing now to bother me except my health, and will try the wonderful waters of Carlsbad."

Beyond his Depth.

GAINESVILLE (TEX.), April 19.—Frank Vanmeter, the little 10-year-old son of Edward Vanmeter, a farmer living twenty-five miles northwest of this city, in this county, was drowned yesterday in the Red river while attempting to wade from the shore to the middle of the river while his father and several other men were working with a seine.

Burned to Death.

BLOOMINGTON (Ind.), April 19.—This morning the 4-year-old daughter of Houston Runyon was left in a room alone, when its clothes caught fire. Attracted by the screams the mother returned, but the child was so badly burned that it died in a few hours. In trying to put out the flames the mother was also seriously burned.

Colored Murderer.

MONTGOMERY (Ala.) April 19.—Erwin Farris, who shot and killed Cat Allen, both negroes, was convicted of murder in the city court to-day and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary.

Is Georgia some strange people are to be found. Two young men killed a companion because he appeared in church better dressed than they. One of them being sentenced to be hung his father visited him in his cell, and when they parted the boy asked his father if he would be out to the hanging. The latter replied he could do him no good, but if it was too wet to plow he might be on hand. This is taking things coolly.

It is encouraging to note that among all the property holders interviewed to-day by our reporter, in reference to the street improvements proposed, not one held back on account of the expense, or interposed any other objection. This is a hopeful sign, and is a prophecy of a good future for Salem. Now is the time for every one to put his shoulder to the wheel, and push along while the conditions are favorable.
