NOTES OF TRAVEL.

Survey of the Umatilla Reservation-- Allotment in Severalty. A LONG RIDE EASTWARD. Wheat Raising by the Wholesale-- Arrival at Minneapolis.

Let us recall some incidents and observations on the long railroad ride. One thing very noticeable in Eastern Oregon is the presence of the noble red man. You see these aborigines, with their marked features, on foot or seated on their cayuse ponies, wrapped in showy government blankets, with elaborately beaded mocassins. Some of them, especially the women, have an air of lost pride; their dependence on the government for rations and annuity goods is hurtful to their self esteem. The braves hang around the saloons a good deal in a town like Pendleton.

BUT PROHIBITION PROHIBITS in their case, though poor Lo has a huge thirst for the strong drink. The average saloon keeper has no scruples about receiving the Indian's money, but the peace officers seem in favor of enforcing the law. And notwithstanding that some red men succeed, by connivance with those who want their money, in evading the law, I have never heard any white man favor a repeal of this liquor inhibition, or high license even, so as to make the sale of fire water to Indians "respectable," or a source of revenue to city or state.

Adjoining Pendleton is the immense Indian reservation of Umatilla; the old wagon tracks of the early immigration running through there are yet clearly seen.

WHAT A TALE THEY TELL of patient, plodding heroism, a love of adventure which marks our people impelled by a desire for a permanent home. This tract of fertile land, so long coveted by the intrusive paleface, is being surveyed, under the recent act of congress which provides for allotment in severalty. On the appointment of a special agent by the president, the Indians will select their farms, and the remainder will be sold, in parcels not exceeding 160 acres, to the bona fide white settler. No land monopoly allowed under this act. Some whites have married or taken up with squaws, to get the benefit of the allotment. There is no accounting for taste! The Indians cannot make a valid title to their farms for twenty years, this is to prevent unprincipled white men filling them with liquor and getting their homes for a song. The proceeds of the sale of land will be used in the purchase of wagons, live stock and farm implements for the adults and the schooling of their children. I know men who have been waiting fifteen years and longing for a chance at some of this rich land, now ready for cultivation. Where the land is moist, as on creek bottoms, or where capable of irrigation, alfalfa that wonderfully prolific white clover grows well. But you do miss

THE GARDENS AND THE ORCHARDS. Eastern Oregon bears much the same relation to the Willamette valley that San Joaquin in California bears to adjacent coast counties, with this difference, that crops are surer in Eastern Oregon than in San Joaquin. But they both seem to be mainly given over to wheat growing or stock raising on a big scale. We are now traveling through the night, and morning finds us near Spokane, where we get a glimpse of the falls, and notice a growth in the town. Evidently an attempt has been made here to shut up the saloons, and restrict liquor selling to "hotels." So you see signs like this, "Beer 5 cents, lodgings 25 cents." Beyond we note much grazing and waste lands, with settlements few and far between. Helena, Bozeman and other towns are growing. The great Mullan tunnel is on fire, its massive timbers still smoldering. So we have to go over the surface of the mountain, 5,000 feet above sea level. Two ponderous locomotives pull and one pushes the train over. Two hundred tons of propulsive power. How they puff and pant! Now we stop for a rest; then they start again. Arrived at the dizzy trestle work, we steam along slowly, for the weight of engines and cars is great. Over the summit two engines are uncoupled; the train hands, with lanterns, for it is night, examine the brakes and couplings; the engine is then oiled and carefully looked over, and then away we go down grade. We notice snow fences, wherever there are cuts on the road, to prevent them filling up in winter. We pass an Indian village, occasionally. No game is seen, and the buffalo bones and horns, so abundant when I passed over the road a few years since, are almost entirely removed.

HERE IS FORT CUSTER, forty miles from the scene of the celebrated massacre. The recollection of that dread tragedy sends a thrill of horror through the traveler; but quiet reigns now, and the Indians you meet have a cowed look. Now we come to the big farms of Dakota, where they start out from ten to twenty plows on a line, or in town, the same number of harrows, seeders or reapers. One of these immense farms is but one field really. The spring is wonderfully backward, which makes the whole country look barren and uninviting. There seems to be only a farm house and capacious barns on each ranch, none other noticeable improvements.

We reach the town of McCloud, Minn., which was struck with a cyclone some time ago, converting the building into kindling wood, picking up a load of pig iron as though it were wood shavings, and killing a young couple just married. But I saw no notice of this visitation posted in the town, and the inhabitants, by their easy going ways, seemed to have lost all dread of the horror.

At Brainerd, those passengers for Duluth take another train. About 4:30 p. m. on the fourth day from Portland, we roll into Minneapolis, ten minutes ahead of time. Pretty nice calculation on a 2,000 mile ride. Being earlier than expected, the persons appointed to meet me are not on hand. But I have heard of Harrison, Farrington & Co., who were so thoroughly converted to prohibition at the last national convention of the W. C. T. U., that they offer $15,000 cash in premiums to those who get the greatest number of subscribers, (not to be less than 50,000), to the New York Voice. They sent a circular to each of their 20,000 customers, urging them to subscribe and also to induce others. So I go to their immense wholesale grocery house and make myself known. What a contrast between the generous fervor of these merchants, and some small Oregon dealers who feared to vote for the amendment lest they should be boycotted or hounded by

A PROFLIGATE PRESS. Well, to describe this city of 200,000 people must be reserved till my next. I leave for Indianapolis next Monday, via the Minnesota and Montana conventions to the national convention. I ought to add that the west bound trains were, as a rule, heavily laden with passengers, mostly of the emigrant or "tourist" class. But some passengers on our train, returning from Seattle and Tacoma complain that settlement is sadly overdone there. I answer questions about the Willamette valley and distribute the Oregon Land Co's pamphlet.

J. W. WEBB. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 26.

Brace Up. You are feeling depressed, your appetite is poor, you are bothered with headache, you are flidgety, nervous, and generally out of sorts, and want to brace up. Brace up, but not with stimulants, spring medicines, or bitters, which have for their basis very cheap, bad whiskey, and which stimulate you for an hour, and leave you in worse condition than before. What you want is an alternative that will purify your blood, start healthy action of Liver and Kidneys, restore your vitality, and give renewed health and strength. Such a medicine you will find in Electric Bitters, and only 50 cents a bottle at Dr. H. W. Cox's drugstore.

Their Business Booming. Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at Dr. H. W. Cox's drug store as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted.

A race between Crawford and Patton of 100 yards for $5 occurred on Liberty street last night, was witnessed by a large crowd, and won by Patton by ten feet.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

HERMANN ON DECK. He Snatches the Seal from the Protectionist Big Gun of Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Congressman Hermann, of Oregon, had a fight with Randall in the house yesterday, during the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill, in which the latter came out second best. The row came up when Randall offered an amendment cutting down the salary of the surveyor-general of Oregon from $2500 to $1800. Hermann raised a point of order against it, and after a sharp fight between the gentlemen the chair was appealed to and sustained Hermann.

The latter then moved that the salary be fixed at $2500, on which he called for the ayes and noes. All the republicans, and the California delegates, voted with him, but the rest of the democrats voted solidly, and the amendment was defeated.

Randall then moved that the salary be put down to $1700, and Hermann beat him on a point of order. The democratic leader said if he did not take that he would get nothing, and Hermann said that if that was the way the appropriations committee regarded an office where such a volume of work was performed, when the salary of the Florida surveyor-general was cut down but $200, they would do without salary altogether and let the office be run by clerks.

Mr. Randall said that suited him, and the bill now fails to provide anything to pay the surveyor-general.

Congressman Hermann said tonight he would fix the matter in the senate, when the bill reached there, and the salary would not be less than $2500, either.

The Verdict Unanimous. W. D. Sult, Druggist, Blippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters does cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at Dr. H. W. Cox's Drug Store.
