A Dakota Bride.

Old Bud Jackson one of the terrorists of Montana, lost his fourth wife, and came over into Dakota for a fifth victim.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson wended their way to Bud's Montana home, and as the gushing bridegroom led his bride into his lovely cot of one room and introduced her to his favorite dogs he said tenderly:

"You want to remember, Mrs. Jackson, that I'm boss here. Don't you never forget that. The four dear companions that I've laid away mighty soon found that out. All I ever had to do was to crook my finger and they come a runnin' to know what I wanted. There wan't no hangin' back nor askin' questions. You see that ox gad up there? Well, that's the little brat that useter settle any slight differences I ever had with the four dear companions that are gone. They generally succumbed after 'bout six licks, and I hope you'll be equally obsecant.

Now, 'posen' you take my boots an' clean 'em up an' grease 'em. They've got mighty muddy while we was on our tower. Clean 'em up good. I'm mighty partic'lar 'bout my boots, an' I'd hate to take that air gad down the fast day you was in your new home. Come an' pull off my boots."

The frail, sad-eyed little bride did not move. Her pretty lips began to tremble, and her gentle bosom heaved.

"You comin'?" roared Jackson. "Hev I got to snatch down that air gad? Oh, yer comin' eh?"

She came. She snatched down the gad on her way, and with set teeth and with eyes that twinkled merrily she landed within two feet of Bud. He had faced wild cats and grizzlies, but never anything like this. A conflict ensued; it was short, fierce and decisive. It ended in Bud's crawling under the bed, and as his bride prodded him with a hoe-handle she gaily shouted:

"You pore innocent thing, ye! Hain't no mo' sense ner to raise the dovelines of Liza Jane Bagge Johnson, her that never did nor never will take a word of sass from any man livin'. Ye'd better crawl under there! Ye'd better crawl clean thro' the wall! Oh, ye'll holler 'nuf, hey? Well, you go and out a month's supply of stove wood 'fore you show your face in this cabin again. I'll learn ye who's boss here!"—Tid Bits.

For the Boys.

Wide Awake gives the following story, which is all the better for being true:

Two men stood at the same table in a large factory in Philadelphia, working at the same trade. Having an hour for their nooning every day, each undertook to use it in accomplishing a definite purpose; each persevered for about the same number of months, and each won success at last. One of these two mechanics used his daily leisure hour in working out the invention of a machine for sawing a block of wood into almost any desired shape. When his invention was complete, he sold the patent for a fortune, changed his workman's apron for a broadcloth suit, and moved out of a tenement house into a brown stone mansion.

The other man—what did he do? Well, he spent an hour each day, during the most of a year, in the very difficult undertaking of teaching a little dog to stand on its hind feet and dance a jig, while he played the tune. At last accounts he was working ten hours a day at the same trade and at his old wages, and finding fault with the fate that made his fellow-workman rich while leaving him poor. Leisure moments may bring golden grain to the mind as well as the purse, if one harvests wheat instead of chaff.
