ADVERTISEMENTS UNDER THE hands of ANTED, FOR SALE, FOR RENT, FOUND, LOST, etc., of an acceptable nature, not to exceed three lines, will be free for one week—only one ad. for each individual. This does not include business advertisements.

If answers fail to come the first time we invite as many repetitions as are necessary to secure what you advertise for. We wish the advertisers to feel that they are not imposing on us by using our free columns.

The CAPITAL JOURNAL is the medium through which the general public may always have their wants supplied.

Advertisements should be directed to letters directed to INITIALS ONLY are not delivered through the postoffice. If initials are used, they should be directed to the care of some person, firm, or postoffice box.

Advertisements can be left at our office or sent through the mail to CAPITAL JOURNAL PUB. CO.

For hundreds of years, since movable types were first invented, but very few improvements in the mode of making and using them have been introduced. While man's inventive genius has substituted the electric light for the tallow candle, the overland and sub-marine telegraph and the lightning express for the courier-post and lumbering stage coach, the one method has existed down to this, 1888 of picking up types by hand and arranging them in shape for printing.

OREGON SHOULD REACH OUT.

Reports from the eastern and middle states indicate a large exodus of farmers to other states, where they hope to better their condition and avoid the cold winters, the droughts and floods, the blizzards and hurricanes, the plagues of grasshoppers and chinch bugs, which seem to be their only lot at home. Where these people will go depends upon the amount and character of literature placed before them by the hundreds of advertising agents from the west and south. Every state and territory west of the Missouri river has its agents throughout the east disseminating knowledge of its particular locality, while hundreds of real estate firms, corporations or colonies have their private immigration boards for their particular schemes.

No country offers better inducements in the way of never failing crops, equable climate, varied and undeveloped resources, wealth of agricultural land, and of forest and mine, than Oregon. This state possesses in itself the diversified resources of a nation, and with development is capable of supporting millions of people. That population will come in time there is no doubt, but in the meantime other localities with their highly colored literature are endeavoring to attract the dissatisfied farmer of the east. Without prompt advertising they are left in ignorance of the characteristics of this state.

The amount of money spent in advertising will soon bear its fruit, and there will be a large immigration next year. But the work of scattering information throughout the east should not stop. The indirect benefits accruing to a state by a proper advertisement of her resources can not be estimated in dollars and cents, but a rapid growth of population will bring untold wealth in its train, and her citizens will be benefitted by the outlay.

THE AMERICAN SOLDIER.

The remnant of the Seventh regiment had a reunion and dinner in New York a few days ago and General Sherman was called upon and made a speech in which he paid a glowing tribute to the American soldier. One phrase employed by the old hero awakens a world of thought. He said:

"The soldier is a man; not a musket." The American soldier is indeed a man; not a mere machine. When the great civil war came upon the country like a tornado the little army of 25,000 soldiers was scattered far and wide throughout the states and territories.

The fate of the union depended upon the patriotism of the people, not upon numerical strength and discipline of a standing army, upon which nearly every other government on earth depends for support and preservation in times of danger. The strength and permanency of our institutions were tested in a degree to which no republican form of government had ever before been subjected. When the call was made for hundreds of thousands of her citizens to leave home, family and friends and submit themselves to the hardships and dangers of a dreadful war, the farmer, mechanic, laborer, merchant, lawyer, doctor, in short, all classes of citizens responded to the call and went forth in defense of the country. When the great object of the war was accomplished the soldiers returned to their homes and became at once good, industrious, law-abiding citizens. The American soldier is indeed "a man, not a musket."

Typhoid fever, it has been ascertained by scientists, is generally caused by the existence in the water used for domestic purposes of minute animalcules, which are visible only by the aid of the most powerful magnifying glasses. It has been proven that these microbes are generated by contact with sewage products, and are taken into the system through the use of such water, passing from the digestive system to the circulating system of the human body and multiplying in such enormous numbers as to change the character of the blood and bring on the dangerous and contagious diseases known as typhoid fever, diphtheria, etc. These are facts accepted generally by the medical fraternity, and may be termed scientific in their character. The life and habits of these microbes have been studied by eminent practitioners, and it has been ascertained that they can be and are destroyed by boiling the water containing them at the highest temperature, this process rendering it perfectly innocuous and healthy. In many cities where the water supply is taken from the rivers subject to pollution, or from springs of doubtful character, a great many people resort to boiling all of the water used in their households. The trouble of this is something, of course, and the water so heated lacks the life and vigor of fresh spring water, but this difference is not perceptible or disagreeable after a little use. The typhoid poison is effectually removed by killing the fungus life which sewerage water has imparted to it.

AN exchange wants to know what makes one town grow into a city while others with good location remain villages? It is because in one case there are men of push and energy, who are not afraid to spend their time and money to boom their town. They erect substantial buildings, organize stock companies and establish factories and secure railroads, work for public improvements and use every means in their power to induce people to locate in their city. They send newspapers to acquaintances they think can be induced to visit their place. When strangers arrive the attractions are shown to them and they are treated with so much kindness that they fall in love with the city at once. A town only succeeds when it begins to work for itself.

TOLEDO NEWS.

Salmon are not so plentiful as they were some little time back.

Our saw mill hasn't been running very steadily for some time past.

Clark Copeland is putting up a new barn on one corner of his lot.

The town needs a depot building pretty badly, as we have none at all.

New families are coming in all the time. We will soon have quite a village here.

Democrats don't like free whisky; they fear that they will get too much under those circumstances.

School is getting along nicely. There are forty-three pupils enrolled and a few more yet to come in.

Mr. Vincent is now building a dwelling house, which is to be occupied by the teacher of public school.

The government is constantly taking rock from a few miles above here, to the works on the jetty at South beach.

The young man upon whom a horse reared up and fell back, a few days since, is improving rapidly and will soon be all right.

The Siletz Indians bring a great many fish here to sell, to the canneries below here—sometimes as much as three tons per day.

Our band is doing very well. They furnish us with music for excursions and two or three times during the week besides. They are improving very rapidly. We hope that they will keep on in that line.

October 27th Mr. Weatherford of Albany spoke to the people of Newport on the issues of the day. He told the reasons why he thought we ought to vote the democratic ticket at the presidential election. The Toledo people had a free excursion to Newport on that evening.

M. C. George spoke on the political issues of the day at Newport on the evening of Oct. 20th. He clearly set forth his reasons why everybody should vote the republican ticket at the coming election. The large hall at that place was crowded with people from the surrounding country. The Toledo people went down to hear the argument.
