

OVER THE CAPITAL CITY.

Complete Recital of the Daily Doings Compiled From Various Sources.

Happenings Over the City and News From the Country Roundabout.

Romeo's Father On The Scene. Yesterday evening an old gentleman from Washington Territory arrived in the city in search of his son. He told a JOURNAL man that when he was at home he lived on the north fork of the Lewis river, answered to the name of Harold and had a son George who a few days before had drawn $7500 in the Louisiana lottery and left home, presumably for Salem. Our readers are familiar with the case. Young George's head was set to whirling by his good fortune—he came here to see the Juliet of his fancy—leaped from a moving train and broke his arm. He was borne to his adored Mary Ann Sullins' home in South Salem, where the dislocated member might knit and the love of two young and tender hearts flourish. Distance had lent enchantment and a few days in the presence of the youthful Ann sufficed. Love to bitter hate had turned, and he decamped. The father arrived a few hours late. Romeo had fled. Juliet was in tears. The romance was ended. Mr. Harold, Sr., returned home to-day.

The Democratic Nominees. Last night the democrats of Salem held their city nominating convention at a room in the opera house, the meeting being called to order by W. E. McAfee, chairman of the central committee.

Nap. Davis was chosen to the chair and Hugh Thompson to the desk of the secretary.

It was decided by the committee on order of business, to conduct the nomination in the following order: Mayor, recorder, marshal, treasurer.

For mayor, P. H. D'Arcy was the unanimous choice of the convention and his nomination was made by acclamation.

John Chase and W. E. McAfee were placed in nomination for recorder, and a count of ballots gave Chase 13, McAfee 5. Chase was declared nominated.

For marshal the names of Henry Barendrick and Duncan Ross were announced to the convention. A ballot gave Barendrick 14, Ross 4. Barendrick was declared nominated.

For treasurer Hugh Thompson was the unanimous choice of the convention.

In The Penitentiary For Life.

Henry Miller, the boy murderer who was found guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of Elmer Wright on Yaquina bay last May, was brought from Corvallis to the penitentiary yesterday evening. The jury was out but five hours and brought in a verdict of life imprisonment.

Both boys were about 18 years old. They were returning home from Sunday school at the time of the murder. The day before they had quarrelled and young Miller brought the matter up again by asking: "Do you want to fight that out now?" Young Wright replied: "You are too big a coward to fight."

At this Miller drew out a long case knife which he had ground down to a sharp edge on either side and to a keen point, and stabbed Wright several times. The wounded lad lived but a short time.

Another Lad Sentenced.

Lewis McVay was brought down from Corvallis yesterday and placed in the penitentiary for a term of one year. The jury found him guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon, which is a less crime than that of assault with intent to kill, for which he was tried, and has a lighter punishment affixed. The testimony went to show that last August the two brothers were riding together in a wagon when they began to quarrel about a woman, and William told Lewis he could get out if he wanted to, which he did. The wagon went on a few steps, when William got out and brandished a cane, and Lewis advanced and the two men began to struggle and Lewis stabbed William several times with a dirk knife. The wounded man was in court and his wounds were exhibited to the jury.

It May Be Smallpox.

The people of Jefferson are exercised over what they think is a case of smallpox. The local physician says no, but they sent to Portland for another opinion. While they are learning what it is the good people are thoroughly frightened.

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

Points of Personal Mention and Notes of News.

The entertainment to be given by Miss Stuart and pupils next Wednesday evening promises to be first-class.

The university is endeavoring to secure the famous Boston Quintette club to give one of their concerts in Salem next week. It is hoped their efforts may be successful as such concerts are rare.

In order to make room for the large additions which have been recently made to the library, in the way of books and other reading matter, the faculty are having new tables and shelves put in. The library is becoming a popular resort for students who desire to peruse good literature.

The old Willamette University is shedding her influence abroad as the following will plainly show. In Marion county the teachers of the following places have held at some time during the past three or four years, ranks in her classes: W. T. Van Scoy, Jefferson; E. A. Bennett, Stayton; Edith Pentland, Aumsville; Agnes Aitkin, Rickey; J. B. Early, Macleay; Bertha Cunningham, Kays; Kate Dearborn, Hazel-dell; Lavinia Culver, Rocky Point; Mary Shafer, Turner; John Scott, North Howell Prairie; Minnie Frickey, Wanless district; Lottie Bennett, Johnson district. This does not include the Salem schools, of which a majority of the teachers are from the university.

Prof. Arnold's last evening was the scene of a happy gathering in honor of the professor's birthday. The members of his Sunday school class met at the Women's college and proceeded from there in a body and took the professor somewhat unawares. He had surmised that something was going to occur from the preparations which had been made in the kitchen but waited quietly for the result, when a little before eight o'clock last evening thirty young ladies and gentlemen burst in on him. The evening was spent in literary exercises, games and social converse. About ten o'clock the guests repaired to the dining room where a bountiful repast was served, after which the class presented to the professor as a token of their respect, a life sized photograph of himself, made by Mr. Cherrington. At a late hour the guests departed, having spent an enjoyable evening.

His Term Expired.

To-day Fred VanWagner was released from the penitentiary, his term of sentence having expired. Last February he was convicted of the larceny of some blankets from the Chemekete, and received a sentence of one year. For some time he has been a trusty and has thus earned double time. He is a Salem boy, and it is the general verdict that he was more sinned against than sinning. During his servitude his conduct has been exemplary and the prison officials speak of him in the highest terms. His parents reside in Salem, and the boy is welcomed home to ease a mother's breaking heart.

The Teachers' Examination.

The regular quarterly examination of applicants for teachers' certificates is concluded. There were twenty-four applicants and Marion now has an addition of twenty-four to her corps of teachers. Those who passed the examination and received certificates were: Misses Etta Smith, Lizzie Caples, Mary A. Kelley, L. J. Kirby, Lottie Bennett, Mattie Griffith, Linnie B. Lewis, Ella M. Olsen, Anna Wright, and Carrie Schumaker; Messrs. G. W. Hobert, H. Hickman, Kenneth McLeod, G. W. Hubert, T. J. McClary, E. M. Engle, W. M. Bushey, Elmer Johnson, H. H. Smith, F. N. Mills, J. B. Early, Asa Hiron, C. P. Strain and H. H. Savage.

Superintendent Yoder informs the JOURNAL that this series of questions was decidedly the easiest one ever before submitted. Teachers are scarce and it was deemed advisable to increase the quantity at the expense of the grade. Country teachers receive only about from $25 to $40 per month here. No wonder good teachers are scarce. Of those who passed nine received first grade certificates, nine second and six third.

SMALLPOX.

Jenner's Discovery of Vaccination—Harvey and the Circulation of The Blood.

Galileo in the Gloomy Dungeon—Reform in the Treatment of Chronic and Acute Diseases by Electricity.

"Time overthrows the illusions of opinion, establishes the decision of nature." How striking the fact that in all ages the most important discoveries have on their introduction, been violently opposed. The following are a few: In 1790, Dr. Jenner, of Gloucester, remarked that the disease known in the western part of England, as the cowpox, communicated to those who milked the cows, precluded those who became thus affected from being subject to the smallpox. This strange fact suggested to him the idea of inoculating children with the virus directly from the udder of a cow, which he accordingly did, and in the course of four or five days he was pustules developed at all points where the skin had been punctured, similar to those of cowpox. When the pustules broke the pus dried, forming a thin scale or crust, which falling off, left a cicatrice.

There was little or no fever, the children continuing to eat and play as usual. After repeated experiments of this kind Jenner became satisfied of its being a preventive of smallpox, as not a single child thus inoculated was attacked with it. But how was the discovery received by the illiberal and dogmatic portion of the profession? With ridicule and contempt, like every other proposed improvement, and Jenner was persecuted and driven from his country; even religion and the bible were made engines of attack against him and his discovery. Some even attempted to prove by scripture that vaccination was the very anti-Christ. At that time smallpox was the scourge of the world, and would have remained so until the present time but for the discovery of Jenner.

Harvey, who discovered the circulation of the blood, was called the "circulator" in derision. He was deprived of the right to practice his profession in his own country; was threatened with banishment, and was finally compelled to leave his native land to escape the obloquy that was heaped upon him, and died without realizing the benefit of his labor.

1522 Ambrose Pare first introduced the ligature and tied the artery, instead of dipping or plunging the limb into boiling tar, as was practiced by his contemporaries. He was denounced with the most reckless violence for daring to suspend the life of man upon a mere thread.

In 1315 Mondini dissected two human bodies, and shortly after published his Epitome of Anatomy, illustrated with woodcuts. At this time, and for a long time afterward, it was customary to demonstrate anatomy upon hogs and other animals. The act of Mondini was considered heresy, and the persecution opened upon him prevented the dissection of any other human body for more than a century.

But behold one of the greatest martyrs to the cause of science. See Galileo in the gloomy dungeon of the Inquisition because he invented an instrument that unfolded to the view of the astronomer new worlds—worlds floating in space—and independent of our own spheres. Space would fail to show the vast numbers of theories that were once deadly opposed, but are now acknowledged facts, even among savans. And why this hostility among all classes to the inception of the good and the true? It is because they do not obey the injunction, "Prove all things, and hold fast to that which is good." These reflections are suggested by the presence of Dr. Darrin in Portland. They relieve the sick by a process that is opposed by those who know not the wonderful effects. As the disturbance of the vital fires is the source of diseases, they by some mysterious power restore the equilibrium, and thereby impart health. All show their appreciation of their valuable services by flocking in crowds to their rooms daily for treatment. The trophies of their success are seen not only in the grateful voice of those benefited, but by the many crutches in their room, left by those who have been cured. What can the opposers of the mode of practice say to such beneficent results? How is anything tested but by its effects? Are not the innumerable cases that have been seen in Europe or America of relief and cure proofs positive of the superiority of the doctors' mode of treatment? They pretend to give relief only in curable cases. Stubborn facts present an array of argument sufficient to convince all who are disposed to know the truth.

The following remarkable cure by Dr. Darrin show the superiority of the electromagnetic system. All can be referred to by letters or in person.

C. V. Fowler, Yakima, W. T., total deafness in one ear, cured in ten minutes. Also, a pterygium, or fleshy growth was removed from the eye which had nearly rendered him blind.

Comfort Under the Waistband.

The call of the stomach must be answered even at the cost of subsequent discomfort. How to make the digestion a regular sequence of the satisfaction of appetite so long baffled medical investigation that it was almost given up in despair, and dyspepsia viewed as well nigh incurable. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters came to the rescue of the dyspeptic, and upset the theory of incurability. If it be used with persistence, and common sense in diet be not constantly violated, the bitters will restore vigor and tranquility to the stomach and constant regularity in its digestive functions. The dyspeptic who uses it systematically soon ceases to suffer after dinner penalties, and enjoys comfort under the waistband between meals. A beneficial change, truly, and one that is aided by a sedulous avoidance of indiscretion in eating and drinking. Constipation, biliousness, nervous malaise, kidney troubles and debility are easily remedied with this fine restorative.
