FAIR MOUNT PARK

IS LOCATED ON
South Salem Hights

Here Stretches Out Before You a Panorama,
THE TRANSCENDENT BEAUTY AND GRANDEUR

Of which enraptures the beholder with bewildering admiration and wonder. In the distance the rugged Cascade Range draws out its serpentine length, while along it at intervals rise up like grim sentinels all the white and weird SNOW-CROWNED PEAKS of the great northwest, their heads extending high in the celestial vault. The river goes winding northward "like a silvery ribbon wide," and on every side are elements of beauty. Lovely drives are being laid out and graded through the shady elevation and altogether the site is a grand one for elegant homes.

A Girl Shoots Herself.
PORTLAND, May 3.—Yesterday afternoon Nellie Olsen, aged five years, was shot through the head and almost instantly killed. Nellie, whose parents reside on the corner of Fifteenth and R streets, was playing with Nealand's two youngest children on the first floor above the store, when the occupants of the building were startled by the report of a pistol emanating from the children's room. A rush was made for the apartment and little Nellie was seen lying on the floor with a pistol ball through her head and her beautiful blonde hair saturated with blood oozing out of the wound. A 22-calibre revolver was lying on the floor near by where the handsome child was dying. An elder son of Mr. Nealand, about twelve years of age, stated to the deputy sheriff that last Sabbath he was out shooting with his pistol and upon returning home he neglected to remove the weapon from the coat he wore on that occasion and hung it on a nail. The little girl found it and shot herself.

Proctor Coming West.
WASHINGTON, May 2.—Secretary Proctor has returned to this city from New York and was at work in the department today. Saturday morning he will start on a trip to the west, accompanied by General Dunn and Colonel Burr. The military school at Leavenworth, Kansas, will be inspected, and the party will proceed to Denver, Cheyenne, Omaha, St. Paul and Chicago.

A Desperate Fight.
SAN ANTONIO, TEX., May 2.—News has reached here of desperate fighting at Guadalupe, Mexico, in which thirty soldiers and policemen and 200 rioters were killed. The trouble arose from the imprisonment of five Jesuit priests, who had been delivering seditious sermons. The populace endeavored to secure them, and the fight occurred. The prisoners are still in jail.

REMINISCENCES OF 1847-8.

Something More About the Indians and Wars of Early Days.
[Correspondence of the Capital Journal.]
In my last communication I left off at Portland where we had just organized some six companies and men ready to start into the Indian country, but before we leave Portland I will, in justice to the young ladies of Polk county, record a fact that may be of some satisfaction to some of the pioneers and perhaps to the young ladies themselves who were the actors in this good and patriotic deed.
When our company was organized there was a beautiful flag of our country presented to the company by the young ladies of Polk county, and the gentleman who presented the flag, in behalf of those patriotic young ladies, made this statement to the company: That there were fifteen young ladies of Polk that had pledged themselves to not marry anyone who was not patriotic enough to go to the war. So you see gentle reader we had friends at home that were wishing us well and many were the times that those young ladies was remembered by Company C of Polk county.

And now to resume my narrative. On the ninth day of January, 1848, our regiment moved from its quarters, where Albina is now located, in the direction of Vancouver and arrived there that afternoon. We were delayed a considerable time for want of transportation, for there was only one boat to ferry us all over the Columbia river. But we were all landed over that evening and struck our camp about one and a half miles above Fort Vancouver, which was then the supply fort for the Hudson Bay company—a large and powerful company organized in the interest of Great Britain. Here our colonel and some influential men had to make arrangements with said company to complete the equipment of our companies, for our Territory was not able to furnish us such supplies as were necessary to keep us in comfort during the winter weather. The equipments being made we moved on up the Columbia river as fast as we could. Our supplies were shipped up by the boat and we rode our horses up the trail which was a very poor one at that time, I assure you. We arrived at the Cascade Falls in about two days from Fort Vancouver, and there were detained again for two or three days making the portage around the falls with our boats. We succeeded at last in getting everything above the falls. Then commenced our forward march. But we had not gone far, perhaps one day's march, when we received the news that the fifty men who had been forwarded to The Dalles a short time since had been attacked by the Indians and were in imminent danger of being overpowered and captured. So our colonel took fifty more of his most anxious and resolute men and hastened on to The Dalles with all possible speed. The balance of the men moved on as fast as they could under the circumstances. Our horses being all fatigued it was but a short time until they began to become lame, which fact retarded our march very much, but in the course of time we all arrived at The Dalles and found our comrades all right. They had been attacked by the Indians, sure enough, but had given them such a warm reception that they were soon sent adrift in every direction, and the recruit coming up set all the Indians at The Dalles to thinking and they were soon induced to take a stand on our side. It seems that there were only a few Cayuses that came down to decoy the other more powerful Indians into the war that they were waging against the Americans, and also those up at The valley took sides with the Cayuse, and it was, therefore, necessary to whip them before we moved farther into the interior. So we commenced immediately to prepare for an invasion of the country up the Deschutes river.

T. C. SHAW.
