The New River Craft.

The O. R. & N's. new Willamette river boat was launched at Portland Thursday. Considerable difficulty was experienced in finding a proper name for her. It was finally decided to call her the "Modoc." This is a very appropriate name, as she is to travel on the upper Willamette, where the old redskins used to scalp the whites in short order. The launching was witnessed by quite a number of people, several of whom had amateur photographic outfits, to catch a view as she glided into the water. The new boat will draw but thirteen inches of water when loaded, and hence can go up the river at all times of the year. A force of carpenters and machinists are busily engaged in fitting her up for active service, and she will be put on her run by the 1st of July. The Telegram says that as soon as the Modoc is running on the upper Willamette, either the Occident or the Orient is likely to be taken off, as there is not enough business to keep the three boats running all the time.

The "Journal" Endorses It.

The following editorial expression in relation to advertising, from the Morning Clip, receives the hearty endorsement of the CAPITAL JOURNAL:

"There are more worthy charities for the money of Salem's business men than rump newspapers and blackmailing publications, and they know it and act accordingly. Advertising is an investment. It is either a good investment, an indifferent one, or a poor one. If it is in a sheet without circulation or character, or in a sheet that does not reach the constituency of the advertiser, it is worse than money thrown away; if it is in a sheet of meager circulation, poorly gotten up and printed it is an indifferent investment even at a low price; but if it is in a newspaper of acknowledged circulation and influence, that is well made up and printed, and that circulates among the people the advertiser desires to reach, it is a good investment at a reasonable price. No good business man can afford to ignore this fact, and no progressive business man in Salem does ignore it. There is no doubt it would pay some of them to employ legitimate mediums of advertising more than they do; but it will pay all of them to let snap and fakir advertising schemes alone entirely."

By Way of Dallas.

Citizens of Dallas are in receipt of letters from prominent shareholders in the Astoria & South Coast R. R., stating that they would soon be in Dallas to look over the ground and feasibility of the railroad continuing by way of Sheridan and the Luckiamute, and thence on to Salem. Such a line they say would tap some of the finest timber lands in Oregon, and would be one of the quickest ways in assisting in the development of the country.

Agency Business Lively.

If there is one agent canvassing Salem in the interest of a book, an insurance policy, a patent fly trap, or corn salve, there are a half hundred. Really the city has more agents making the rounds just now than has been known for a long, long time. The householder is harrassed and the business man is disgusted. They cry aloud for the rest that is not given them.

Deserves to Succeed.

Salem is receiving a big advertisement at the hands of the Oregon land company, that company having contracted for the entire advertising space on the elephant blankets of Sells Bros'. circus. The exchanges of the state generally say that "Salem deserves to succeed, as she has the energy."

Measles and Good Crops.

A citizen o' this city took a trip through the Waldo hills this week and reports everything doing nicely. He says that there are a few cases of measles in that section. The hay harvest is rapidly progressing. A new school house is being built and will be known as the Independent school house.

In Salem Next Week.

The Georgie Woodthorpe troupe played M'Liss last evening to a large audience, giving a fine entertainment, in which some excellent acting was done.—Albany Democrat.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE.

How it Was Interrupted by an Angry Parent and a Big Six-Shooter.

From Jefferson comes a romantic story of a young Lochinvar, who won his bride in the face of an angry parent armed with a revolver.

A young man from that place, a brother of the bridegroom, was in the city yesterday, says the Albany Herald, and stated the following: Fred Smith wooed and won a daughter of a farmer named Ewell, who has been teaching school there. The girl's father opposed the match and refused to allow young Smith to visit her. About three weeks ago the young couple were secretly married, the girl in the meantime still teaching school. Thursday when the school closed young Smith went to the school house after his bride and the angry parent went also. When Smith attempted to accompany the girl her father drew a revolver, which the young man took away from him. On attempting to leave the school house one of Mr. Ewell's neighbors confronted him with a shotgun. Young Smith was taken to Jefferson and lodged in the calaboose on a charge of abduction. During the night he broke jail, and now proposes to carry off his bride in spite of angry parents or a whole arsenal of shooting-irons.

A Tribute to Salem.

"A visit to Salem is refreshing to the weary," says the Dallas Observer. "The signs of healthful growth are increasing on every hand and any observer can see that Salem is having a healthful 'boom.' The steel railroad is doing a good business. The citizens are learning to use and appreciate this convenience and it is not a matter of a great time before all the important suburbs will be closely connected with the business centre. If Salem is spared from a sweeping fire for two years more her complete renovation will have been effected and the old frame shanties will pass away without carrying in their wake valuable brick structures. We rejoice in Salem's growth."

Look Out For Tramps.

Those living in North Salem should be careful about leaving their houses unlocked, as there is a professional tramp stopping in an old house in the northern part of the city. He can be seen every day coming up town, where he lounges about the city until night when he returns to the old house. He claims to have the rheumatism and can't do heavy work and can find no easy job. He is a professional tramp and should be watched.

Almost an Accident.

On Friday afternoon Martin Durbin, Mrs. Alice Martin and Mrs. Savage were out blackberrying on South Prairie and as they were going up a hill near the lake the horse refused to pull and began to back. This brought the wagon's hind wheels off the bank into the lake. Mr. Durdin succeeded in stopping it from dragging the horse over with it. Mrs. Martin was considerably bruised by the accident, but she is not dangerously hurt.

Will Build an Academy.

At a meeting at Dallas yesterday of the trustees of the La Creole academy a resolution was adopted authorizing the erection of a large brick edifice to fill "the long felt want" for increased educational facilities and the work will be proceeded with immediately. The building will be large and modern in style and fitted up in a first-class manner.

Salem All Going.

Every available vehicle in Salem will be called into requisition tomorrow for the Turner campmeeting. The livery rigs have all been engaged for several days, and the present indications are that the camp grounds will be crowded tomorrow.

Harvest Time Coming.

A reporter of this paper took a ride through the prairie and found the grain all doing well. A few fields of wheat have begun to change their color from green to yellow and a good many tons of hay are cut, which will soon be ready for market. The hay crops are all doing well and a large yield is expected.

The Secular Reunion.

To-day the great secular annual reunion begins at Silverton, continuing also to-morrow. A good many people are present, among them Underwood and Putnam, the detectors. To-morrow the question of secular schools will be discussed thoroughly.

San Jose Bill Again.

The famous criminal, "San Jose Bill," Alias Wm. Atkinson, is at present in jail here serving a few days' sentence for gambling. He is a bad man, and here is a suspicion the Astoria Transcript hurls into his teeth: There had been grounds for suspicion against San Jose Bill as having had a hand in the notorious Kennealy—or "Villard hotel"—murder mystery in Portland. He was living in that city at the time. His wife gave the evidence upon which the suspicion was founded. He was out nearly all that dark and bloody night, and came home in a new suit of clothes and with $800 in his pocket. As he was bankrupt the day before, his new found wealth naturally excited some questioning, and in answer he told his wife that he got the money gambling. Her father being in the city at the time, Mrs. Atkinson informed him of the matter, and the old gentleman took the pains to make a tour of the city and visit its gambling haunts to discover information if possible, showing where "Bill" had gotten his wealth. With the exception of a few five-cent beer games, there was no trace of the fellow having gambled at all, and even if he had he was not a gamester of that calibre to set into a game of the pretensions he must in order to get away with so large an amount of money as he had. Men acquainted with all the circumstances are inclined to regard the story as plausible.

May Lose His Hand.

John T. Cox, living near Silverton, met with an accident a day or so ago which cost him two fingers and is liable to cause him to lose his hand. He was hauling a load of wood over a rough road, and being seated on the front tier, the fore wheel struck a stump, causing the wood to slip off in front of the wagon, throwing him under the front axle. His clothes caught in the hounds, turning him a somersault. In his struggle to free himself he threw his left hand under the wheel, which passed over the hand lengthwise, splitting the hand near the middle, and crushing the two first fingers, so as to necessitate amputation of both fingers. Dr. McClure of Silverton was called, and amputated the fingers. He has little hopes of saving the hand. Mr. Cox is getting well along in years and it will probably be sometime before he recovers.

An Insane Woman.

An insane lady was brought over to-day from Independence and taken to the asylum, as recommended by Dr. Ketchum. Of course she could not be received there without a commitment and was returned to this city for examination before Judge Shaw. She is lately from the east with her husband. They have been stopping at Independence, where she was taken ill a few days ago, the illness assuming the phase of insanity. Her name is Mrs. Mary Montgomery and she is hallucinated with the terrible, awful thought that she is dead and that she is now wandering in the dark recesses on the Plutonian shore. She was taken to the asylum, this evening, for treatment.

—The Luckiamute Falls people advertise that "the railroad possibilities of the place are certain and the coming of a road to carry the lumber and other manufactured products to market, is but the matter of a short time." Such a road will come to Salem, when built.

- Circus day and Fourth of July are here or will soon be. Picnics are all the go, but groceries, nice and fresh, such as can be found at Squire Farrar & Co's. are always in demand. Fruits in season and everything always the best and purest. Remember this advice.

—A correspondent of the Hillsboro Independent, writing to that paper from Gales City, says: "A civil engineer, with a party of our citizens, have been looking out a pass around Saddle mountain for the Astoria railroad. I think, from all that I can learn, that the road will be built on the shortest practical route. It may be the Saddle mountain route or it may be the Nehalem route. But either route will bring it down Gales creek, so we feel pretty sure our town will be favored with railroad communication soon."

Portland Points.

PORTLAND, June 22.—"Sandy" Olds' fate will be in the hands of the jury before whom he has been on trial, before sundown. When court adjourned last evening the defense had rested and the prosecution had only a few more witnesses to introduce in rebuttal.

The Grenade Came in Handy.

An incident that happened recently at Ellensburg illustrates the truth of the old proverb than "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." A well-known lady of that place had a number of hand grenades in bottles hanging up, and when she got a new German servant girl who asked what they were for she explained their use, that in case a fire started in the house she was to break the bottles and throw the contents on the flames to subdue them. Soon after they were heating a can of oil to oil the kitchen floor and in lifting the can that held the oil, the solder being melted, the bottom came off and the oil ran over the stove and floor and took fire. The lady herself ran off, crying out "fire," but the German girl remembered the story of the hand grenades and carried out instructions so thoroughly that the fire was immediately extinguished. The story of the Ellensburg fire is literally correct, and no doubt the hand grenades have great value, but since the factory that prepared them burned down there has been very little demand for them.
