FRIDAY JULY 19, 1889

YOUR BOYS.

From the report of the secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Henry J. McCoy, there are in this city 65,000 young men between sixteen and thirty-five years. Of this number 1000 are members of the association.

LAW TO BE ENFORCED.

The Mississippi authorities are bound to have their laws regarding pugilists enforced. Two detectives went to Albany on the 18th, presumably to consult with Governor Hill regarding the extradition papers of Pugilist Sullivan, who is believed to be hiding near that city.

A GOOD SENTIMENT.

I believe in the institution of marriage and I have no sort of sympathy with those persons who endeavor to oppose that institution. The fireside is the most sacred thing on earth, and the love of husband for wife is Godlike.

THE OILS STEEL COMPANY OF CLEVELAND, OHIO.

has just sold out to an English syndicate. An English syndicate is negotiating for the purchase of Warner's patent medicine works at Rochester. An English syndicate is buying up all the breweries in the country.

THE NEW STATE.

The constitution makers for the new state of Washington are hard at work, and yesterday were considering the judiciary question. They propose five supreme judges at a salary $5,000 a year each and propose each term to be for ten years.

THE prospect for Oregon becoming the "meat" of the world is being more fully developed every day. The faces of the people are now turned Oregonward and many have already started. Cheap homes, good lands, healthy climate, beautiful scenery, big forests, mighty waterfalls, unexplored mineral wealth, snow-capped mountains and fruit laden valleys, all have an influence that cannot help making Oregon populous and wealthy.

ROYALTY EXPENSIVE.

How will this strike the average American? In the commons, Gladstone agreed to a compromise—about $200,000—in the matter of awards to this royal family, by which the Prince of Wales will be allowed forty thousand pounds yearly as a substitute for all claims for his children. Five hundred and fifty dollars per day would make ample pocket change.

THE Chicago Tribune asks and receives $22,000 for a column of advertisements for one year. The business men of Chicago are keen to pay it. There is one house in Cincinnati that pays $4000 a week for advertising. There are several in Cleveland even, who pay as high as $10,000 a year. Somehow these men don't break up; a liberal advertiser never does.

REMINISCENCES OF 1848.

Thread of the Indian War Stories Continued by Judge Shaw.

This Sager family was a family that came across the plains in the year 1844. They lost their father on Green river with the camp fever and their mother near Fort Hall with the same dread disease. My father, Capt. William Shaw, brought the family to Dr. Whitman's, and their father and mother being Presbyterians, Dr. Whitman and wife kindly agreed to take the children and do the best they could for them, and when the massacre took place, John and Frances Sager were murdered, and the Sager girls, five I think in number, were taken prisoners by the Indians. Frances Sager was the only person in the whole number that was murdered that attempted to fight when the Indians set upon Dr. Whitman to murder him. This boy being about thirteen or fourteen years of age, drew a small pistol and would have dispatched an Indian with it but for the interference of some of the trackers who still had some hopes that they would be spared, but those Indians killed every one of them without mercy. Now to return to my narrative.

We had no rest all night, the Indians kept up their firing at intervals and we returned the fire as well as we could, for our ammunition was getting scarce and we had therefore to be a little saving with it. Before daylight came we cooked and eat our breakfast and saddled up our horses, and just as soon as it was light we all mounted and took to the hills on the west side of the road, thereby avoiding any ambuscade they might have prepared for us. As soon as we got on top of this hill we gave them a regular Indian yell in token of our readiness to renew the contest, and I must say that it was but a moment until we were in a hot engagement. Captain Hall's company from Washington county, and Captain Phil. Thompson's company from Yamhill, were in the hottest of the engagement and called for assistance which was rendered and the Indians were repulsed with loss. We were then permitted to move toward the Touchet, without any opposition, for some distance, and as we had beaten them in the first attack we were now entertaining fears that they would not follow us any further. Therefore our interpreter, Mungo, a half-breed Indian, was sent up on top of an adjacent hill to tell the Indians that we hoped they would not leave us in possession of the field without giving us another chance at them. He also told them that if they did not accept this challenge we would think them cowards and no better than women. This talk seemed to enrage them somewhat and they came on for the attack but we had got near the Touchet by this time, and in order to prevent the Indians from cutting us off from the timber and ford of the stream, your humble servant was ordered to take twenty picked men with good horses and cut the Indians off if possible on the left. We struck out in a dead run and made such headway that in about three-quarters of a mile we reached a point that completely shut them off from the creek, and this movement brought on a conflict again and we had to fight our way to the timber for there were some Indians that were coming around and aiming to come down the Touchet so as to attack us before we could reach the timber, but we were too quick for them and reached the timber in safety, and when they came we gave them such a warm reception that they retreated in disorder, but not until they had lost some five or six of their best warriors. At this point is when I received the first sting of an Indian bullet or missile which struck me on the left arm about half-way between the wrist and elbow. It was only a flesh wound on the top of the arm. When the ball struck the sensation was like that of a bee-sting or burn, as if some one had taken a hot iron rod and run it across my arm. The wound was about three inches in length.

While we were succeeding well at this point there was a hot engagement going on to the right, where it seemed some Indians had built a fort and manned by some of their best braves. Our men not knowing of this in marching across an open place, were greatly endangered by the fire of the Indians. At this point several of our men were seriously wounded, so there was a charge ordered and the Indians routed after an engagement of ten or fifteen minutes. There at this point comrade William Taylor was wounded by a dying Indian. He was shot through the right lung and died a few days after we arrived at the post. There were several other men seriously wounded but not fatally. As soon as those Indians were routed, which was not until the most of them were killed, they withdrew from the contest and we were left master of the situation. We had moved our wounded men over the creek where our headquarters were for the present established. As the Indians seemed to have enough of it for this time, and desired to get away from us, their squaws, some of whom had been with them all the time to help take care of their wounded and dead, set up a terrible wail, and told the warriors to come away from there or else the Bostons would kill them all.

Some of our boys got very brave and mounted their horses and went out toward the Indians and gave them a banter to continue the contest. Our interpreter was among the number and told the Indians they were cowards and dare not fight us any more; that we had intentionally retreated from them to cause them to attack us, for just as soon as we got the better of them they would run away like cowards and that if they did not return to the fight we would consider them nothing better than cloutchman, or women, or in other words, they were no better in our estimation, than camaneks or dogs. This was all done in the most taunting way possible, but we received no reply, but instead thereof they made a hasty retreat.

The battle being now over we cooked our dinner and then moved on in peace to Dry creek, and camped for the night. Our meat was out and we killed some Indian horses for supper. We were not molested during the night and we were not a little surprised when we arose in the morning to find two or three inches of snow on our blankets, for it had been quite warm the day before. I think it was about the middle of April. We soon got our breakfast and struck out for the fort which we reached before noon and found everything as we had left it several days before.

How a Hero Saved the Day.

The Duke of Wellington was once asked who, in his opinion, was the bravest man at Waterloo. "I can't tell you that," he said, "but I can tell you of one than whom there was no braver." The following is the story put in the words of the writer: "There was a private in the artillery. A farm house, with an orchard surrounded by a thick ledge, formed a most important point in the British position, and was ordered to be held against the enemy at any sacrifice. The hottest of the battle raged around this point, but the English behaved well and beat back the French again and again.

At last the powder and ball were found to be running short; at the same time the hedges surrounding the orchard took fire. In the meantime a messenger had been sent to the rear for more powder and ball, and in a short time two loaded wagons came galloping down to the farm house, the gallant defenders of which were keeping up a scanty fire through the flames which surrounded the post. The driver of the first wagon spurred his struggling horses through the burning heap; but the flames rose fiercely round and caught the powder, which exploded, sending rider, horses and wagon in fragments into the air. For one instant the driver of the second wagon paused, appalled by his comrade's fate; the next, observing that the flames beaten back for a moment by the explosion afforded him one desperate chance, he sent his horses at the smouldering breach, and amid the cheers of the garrison, landed his cargo safely within. Behind him the flames closed up and raged more fiercely than ever. This private never lived to receive the reward which his act merited, but later in the engagement he was killed, dying with the consciousness that he had saved the day."—Reminiscences.

The Age of Modern Man. People are fond of saying that "Mankind is growing wiser and weaker." But is it really so? Let us glance at the facts. According to the latest statistics there are more centenarians now living than at any previous time in the history of the world. Why? Because of the great discoveries in medical science which afford him immunity from diseases that formerly devastated mankind. Greatest of them all is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the best blood-purifier and renovator of the age. Scrofula, fever-sores, tumors, unsightly ulcers and eruptions vanish like magic beneath its beneficent influence.

Who is H. H. Warner, of Rochester, N. Y., whose Safe Remedies, especially Warner's Safe Cure, have obtained such success and celebrity at home and abroad? The question is inspired as much by affection as curiosity, since through his instrumentality hundreds of thousands, in both hemispheres, have been restored to health and happiness. Hon. H. H. Warner, then, is a leading and honored resident of Rochester, not only, but a prominent and influential citizen of the United States. On several occasions chosen by his party as a National delegate to nominate a President of the Republic, he has been a member of the Republican State Committee and of its Executive Committee. He is a member of the American Institution for the Advancement of Science; President of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce; a successful and upright business man. He has given away fortunes in charities. The celebrated and costly Warner Observatory of Rochester was conceived, endowed, and is maintained by him. His munificent prizes for the discovery of comets has been at once the wonder and delight of the scientific world. The yellow fever scourge in the South, the Ohio floods, the fire disasters of Rochester and other cities awakened his profoundest sympathies and in each instance his check for from $500 to $5,000 swelled the several relief funds. Where other wealthy men give tens and hundreds, he gives hundreds and thousands. His charities are as ready and magnificent as his enterprises and public spirit are boundless. The world has need of more such men. An incident led him into the manufacture of medicine. Seized some twelve years ago with what the ablest physicians termed fatal kidney disease, he was miraculously restored to health by what is now known as Warner's Safe Cure. At once he resolved to make known the merits of so potent a remedy, and the consequence is that to-day he has immense laboratories and warehouses in the United States, Canada, England, Germany, Austria, Australia and Burma. Sales of his Safe Remedies are enormous, and their power over disease simply marvelous. The merit of a production is in exact keeping with the character of its producer. An honest and reliable man himself, Mr. Warner makes honest and reliable medicines—a fact abundantly attested by their phenomenal efficacy and popularity.
