The State Fair.

It is only three weeks until the meeting of the state fair—that is it begins three weeks from next Monday—and preparations are well under way, for a successful session. The race track is already in a pretty good condition and a number of horses are in training there now. The grain, fruit and vegetable displays are going to be far in advance of anything ever before seen here. Sheep, hogs, cattle, horses, chickens etc., will be exhibited in great numbers and as a whole the fair promises to be better than at any previous time.

A New Enterprise.

A California gentleman, Eastman by name, will soon occupy the vacant store room in the Patton block with a stock of musical instruments. This is the room recently vacated by Beck's gun store.

Arranging Displays.

D. D. Prettyman, the veteran horticulturist, is still busy arranging displays of grasses and Oregon products. Now he is at work decorating the walls of the Oregon land company's office. The room will present a charming appearance when the work is completed.

Rich in Copper.

On the little fork of the north fork of the Santiam there has just been discovered a mine that is rich in copper. The shaft is down thirty feet and a seven-and-a-half foot vein of copper is the find. The Silver Dollar it the name of the mine and it will be further developed. Should the vein hold out there is a fortune in such a mine as this.

House Moving.

D. C. Howard is moving the old buildings away from Odd Fellows' lot at corner of Court and High, to make room for the new livery stable. He is moving Judge O'Donald's shop to the flat south of the Methodist church. Work will soon commence on the new livery stable.

The Big Wheat Harvest.

All day a long string of farm wagons loaded with wheat stands in the street in front of the Salem mills, waiting to be unloaded. But this same condition is seen at all of the warehouses of the country. Farmers are hurrying to get their big yields of wheat stored and ready for the market. Threshing is about all over, but the hauling of wheat will not cease for a good many days.

Articles of Incorporation.

Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state today as follows: The Prospective mining and machine company, with A. E. Campbell, Job Angell and C. W. Treaman incorporators. The capital stock is $500,000, into shares of $100 each; principal office in Portland. The Oregon shipping company. Their business is to navigate steamboats and vessels of any and all kinds used in ocean and river navigation and to establish salmon canneries, to catch seals and other marine animals. The principal office is in Portland; capital stock $25,000, divided into shares of $100 each. The incorporators are C. E. Wood, John McCraken and Preston C. Smith.

A Burglary.

Last night the store of W. L. Tooze at Woodburn was broken into by robbers, and a hole was drilled in the safe door and blown open. The burglars made their entrance by prying the store door open with some blacksmithing tools, which they had borrowed from the shop near. There is no trace to the robbers. They worked so quietly that no one knew anything of it until this morning when Mr. Tooze went to his store. The robbers succeeded in getting away with $35 in money and some goods.

One More Week.

It is only one more week until school commences. In one short week the summer vacation comes to an end. The indications are that the public schools, as well as the university, will have increased attendance. Salem is progressing and her schools are keeping up in the march of progress.

Ho For Yaquina.

Miss Esther Hall, Miss Carrie Moores, Judge Lord, Mr. Wilder and wife, Mrs. Dickens, Mrs. P. H. Raymond and children, and Mrs. Allie Moores left for Yaquina yesterday.

THE CITY COUNCIL MEETS.

A Large Amount of Minor Business Transacted.

The city council met in regular session at the council chamber last night.

Committee on ways and means, to which was referred petition of the engine companies for hiring the drivers and allowing one team to be in the house, each team taking its turn, reported favorably on the petition, which allows each driver $60 per month. In regard to the petition for the establishment of cisterns from 10,000 to 20,000 gallons capacity, the committee said it had been shown that a number of hydrants throughout the city have failed to give the necessary water pressure and in consideration of the same they recommended the immediate construction of a number of cisterns throughout the city and also to have the chief engineer examine all hydrants and condemn those that do not give the required pressure and stop the pay for the same.

Committee on ordinances reported favorably for a correction of an error in ordinance bill No. 180, and submitting an amendment to Sec. 1, of said ordinance, adopted.

Committee on accounts and current expenses reported favorably on the payment of a number of accounts.

The bill, amounting to $1050, for 1000 feet of 2½-inch, 4-ply hose was laid over until next meeting until report of the engineer has been submitted.

Committee on health and police recommended that the keeping of swine in the city limits be prohibited; adopted and the ordinance committee was ordered to draw up an ordinance in regard to same.

Report was read from the chief engineer stating that he was engaged in making examination of the fire protection of the city and would in a few days make a full report.

Petition for the construction of a sewer through blocks 70, 69 and 68, commencing at Chemekete street and running to Trade street, referred to committee on streets and public property.

Petition of sewer through block 76, to connect with Marion street sewer, referred to committee on streets and public property.

Petition of citizens in block 33 for the establishment of a sewer to connect with Court street sewer, referred as above.

The Mayor returned ordinance bill No. 181, without his approval, giving his reason that the bill was unconstitutional. The bill provided for a deputy city recorder to perform the duties of the regular recorder in his absence. A vote was taken and the Mayor's veto sustained.

Introduction of ordinance bills. To amend section 1, of an ordinance providing for the construction of terra cotta pipe sewers in Marion and Ferry streets and the alley running through block 5, in the city of Salem, approved August 7, 1889, and numbered 180. Read the third time and placed upon its final passage; carried.

Ordinance committee instructed to draw up an ordinance so as not to allow the payment of any bill against the city which is not properly endorsed by the proper authorities.

The committee to which was referred the authority to advertise and receive bids for the covering of the cords of the big bridge across the Willamette river about one year ago, were instructed to reject all former bids and advertise for new bids for the same.

The street commissioner was instructed to refloor the big bridge and ask the two counties to pay their proportionate share in the cost of the same.

The recorder was instructed to place the assessment roll in the hands of the chairman on ways and means as soon as completed.

Salem's Progress.

Salem, the capital of Oregon, does not owe its prominence merely to the fact that it is the seat of government of a rich and prosperous commonwealth. It is one of the oldest cities in the northwest. It has always been in a healthy condition and has maintained a steady growth from the beginning, but the strides now being made are bringing the capital city to the front rank in all respects. The progress that has been made in the past year or so seems quite remarkable.—West Shore.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

A Kentucky man who was dying alone left his will in lead pencil on the head of a whisky barrel, and it is held to be valid. The only thing he left however was a gallon of whisky in the barrel.

Teaching Frugality.

The wealth of Holland and the great commercial prosperity of that country about two hundred years ago were built up by parsimonious frugality, which for a long time marked the character of the Dutch. This habit gave place to luxury when wealth had been secured. The clergy used to rebuke the growing extravagance, and a French writer tells how a successful business man taught his fellows a lesson:

Before retiring from business and taking leave of his friends in the city, he invited them to dine with him. The guests, on arriving at his residence, were surprised to see the extraordinary preparations that had been made for their reception. On a plain oak table, covered with a blue cotton cloth, were some wooden plates, spoons and drinking vessels. Presently the old seaman brought in dishes containing herring—some fresh, others salted or dried.

Of these the guests were invited to partake, but it was clear they had little appetite for such poor fare, and, with considerable impatience, they awaited the second course, which consisted of salt beef and greens. This, also, when brought in, they did not seem to relish.

At last the blue cloth was removed, and one of fine white damask substituted; and the guests were agreeably surprised to see a number of servants, in gorgeous liveries, enter with the third course, which consisted of everything necessary to form a most sumptuous banquet. The master of the house then addressed his friends in the following terms:

"Such, gentlemen, has been the progress of our Republic. We began with short frugality, by means of which we became wealthy, and we end with luxury, which will beget poverty. We should, therefore, be satisfied with our beef and greens, that we may not have to return to our herrings."

A Bully Story.

A man being out in the fields, wanted to inspect more closely a three-year-old bull. He bellowed at him and succeeded in attracting his attention. His bullship thought some of the neighboring bulls had got into his territory, and came up with head down, nostrils extended and fire in his eye, prepared to fight, but, fortunately for the man, there happened to be an apple tree close at hand which he succeeded in dodging behind just as the bull made a dive for him, striking the tree plump in the center, which luckily was just the right size to fit between the horns, thus holding him fast for a moment, which gave the frightened man a chance to use his horns as a step-ladder, thus enabling him to climb the tree, where he amused himself by throwing apples at the infuriated bull, who stood underneath pawing the dirt and bellowing until his owner came after the cows in the evening and drove him away.

Fell Heir to a Fortune.

The Oregonian is authority for the statement that I. C. Dickey, at one time sheriff of Linn county, now an officer at the state penitentiary at Salem, has fallen heir to a fortune of a little over $40,000. The death of his father in New York State, at a good old age, leaves Mr. Dickey a third interest in an estate valued at $125,000. Of course, no man rejoices at the decease of his parents, even when their sands are feebly run, but this is inevitable and must be a consolation to any man who hears the inevitable to know that he can leave his children well provided with this world's goods. Mr. Dickey returns east to receive this estate and his friends hope he will not be willing or able to forget his home in Oregon.

One day during the war, the colonel of a South Carolina regiment was making a round of inspection. Sitting lazily on a rail fence whittling at a piece of shingle he found a man whose face was not familiar to him. The colonel was indignant. Approaching the loafer, he called out to him with all proper severity: "Who in the —— are you, sitting here in this fashion?" "I," responded the man on the fence, continuing his whittling, "am the chaplain of the ——st regiment. Now who in the —— are you?"

Some folks pay their bills with resignation, others with money, while a great many never pay them at all.
