A Narrow Escape. Wm Anderson was out in the country Sunday with his buggy and of course took his gun along. The horse was trotting along nicely and Mr. Anderson was examining the gun, which was loaded, when it slipped from his hand, the hammer catching on the seat. The gun was discharged, tearing a hole in the dashboard, but fortunately not striking the horse. It is impossible to conceive how the charge of shot missed the horse, but that animal did not receive a wound.

Six More Cottages. H. A. Thomas and G. W. Watt are building two fine cottages on Church street at present. When completed they will be for rent or sale. They also purchased ground in University addition on the car line, yesterday, and will immediately proceed to erect four houses in that neighborhood. It is their intention to try and supply a part of the demand for houses. In this way they are furnishing neat cottages to those who want to rent or purchase. Their idea is a good one and is greatly assisting in the improvement of the city.

Talking of Electricity. The Salem street railway company have in contemplation an extension of the line, which will help the city and benefit the people on asylum avenue and the eastern part of the city. A new track will be laid from Commercial street up Center street to the asylum, thus giving a direct line to the state penitentiary. They are also negotiating to put on electric cars and by the first of September, 1890, there will not be a horse used by the company. This is a great improvement to the city and there is but little doubt that the extensions and improvements will be made.

The Coming State Fair. The Oregon state fair will be held at the grounds of the State board of agriculture beginning one week from next Monday (Sept. 16). At the fair grounds just now everything is life and activity and a busy scene is presented. Many houses are there in training and exhibitors are arranging for their exhibits. The race-track is in first-class condition and entries in that department insure successful and interesting races.

Correspondents' Attention. The JOURNAL'S corps of correspondents is hereby notified that the JOURNAL will be pleased to hear from them as often as convenient. Now that the rush of work is over and the schools have commenced there will be much more time for reading, and the JOURNAL must have the news. If you have a startling item, and can do so, telegraph the particulars. But above all things, get the news and send it to us.

Well Known in Oregon. His relatives at Turner yesterday received by telegram the sad intelligence of the death of James Hilleary of Burlington, Iowa. The deceased was the father of W. M. Hilleary of Turner, and died at 9 p. m., Sept. 1st, 1889, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. Mr. Hilleary has many friends in Oregon among the old pioneers. He was a wealthy and trusted citizen, respected by all who knew him. The deceased leaves a wife and eight children to mourn his death.

He Would Rob the Roost. J. K. Buff of Silverton had an experience with a would-be robber of his chicken roost last night. He heard a noise among the chickens and ran to their relief, gun in hand. He saw the figure of a Chinaman disappearing in the darkness, with his hands full of chickens. Mr. Buff took aim and fired. The Chinaman hobbled as if shot and limped off, letting the chickens loose. Mr. Buff is satisfied he wounded the celestial but how seriously he was not able to learn.

A Straw Fire. About twelve o'clock to-day a shed filled with straw on the old Eddy place about a mile north of this city caught fire and burned to the ground. It was rented by M. H. Bowman and the loss is very small. Also about three acres of ground was burnt over and a small amount of fence. The fire originated from a brush pile a few yards north of it.

THE COUNCIL MEETS.

The committee on streets and public property reported in favor of constructing the alley sewers heretofore petitioned for through blocks 3, 4, 33, 68, 69, 70, and 76 and that the city surveyor be instructed to make surveys as may be necessary therefor, and that an ordinance be drawn providing for the same. The report was adopted.

An ordinance will be introduced amending section 4, title 1, chapter IV of the city laws, so that it shall read as follows:

Any person who shall ride or drive through the city at a pace to endanger life or property, or who shall ride or drive faster than a walk over any bridge across any stream within the city on which notice is posted forbidding the same, or who shall ride, drive, wheel or draw upon any sidewalk any bicycle, hand-truck or other vehicle, except baby carriages, or who shall willfully obstruct any crosswalk or sidewalk by stopping a team or wagon thereon, or by hitching any animal so that such animal shall obstruct the passage of pedestrians, or shall neglect or refuse to move such team, wagon or animal when requested, shall, upon conviction before the recorder, be fined not less than ten dollars.

It was referred to committee on streets and public property.

A motion was made and carried that the council appoint as special policemen to be put on duty by the marshal at the order of the mayor as they may be considered necessary, the following persons: A. Dilley, Isaac Miller, J. B. Arbestag, D. Gibson and Dick Savage.

A motion also carried that Chas. Litchfield, janitor of the East Salem school, be appointed special policeman, without pay, for the remainder of the year.

Council adjourned to meet Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

Look to the Road.

Just now would be the time for the road overseers to work the road leading to the fair ground. Usually just about fair time they are in a bad condition, and if time would be taken by the bangs, as it were, and the road fixed now and the ruts filled, this popular drive would be in a presentable condition fair week.

A GOOD CUP OF COFFEE.

The Farmers' Products.

(Correspondence of the Capital Journal.) I would like to inquire where T. E. Patton's "blackberry vineyard," mentioned in last week's JOURNAL is located. I am in the berry business and if I can find where I can raise eight thousand pounds of blackberries from one acre, and an average of twelve cents a pound for them, I am going there right off and will send no more blackberries to the Woodburn cannery for three and a half cents, you bet. And I want make twelve cent blackberries into $1.25 wine either. See? I don't refuse to believe these figures truthful, but I fear they missed a figure somewhere in the calculations.

[The article in question was taken from the Orling, W. T., Oracle, which was given credit for it.—Ed.]

It is also pleasant to learn that the Willamette dryer company can "use a good many bushels of fruit thus giving the farmers a chance to make something out of their orchards." They pay three-fourths of a cent per pound for these fruits, and it will cost one-half a cent per pound for us here to get fruit gathered and transported. A fourth cent per pound is "something," and is perhaps better than letting the fruit rot under the trees, as thousands of bushels are now doing; but it will scarcely pay the farmer for his labor and 90 per cent on his investment, as I am told the dryer does. If these prices will pay to buy fruit land in Parrish's addition at $400 per acre, it ought to pay here, where as good fruit land as ever was tickled with a hoe, can be had for $20 to $40.

A few years ago the Oregon papers told us that canneries and driers would be established "so soon as a supply of fruit could be had," and extolled the profits of fruit raising, and advised farmers to plant fruit. Now, the canneries and driers get all the fruit they can handle at starvation prices, and yet there is fruit enough going to waste all over the country to run a dryer or cannery in nearly every town and hamlet, and thousands of tons more would be raised if there was a prospect of a remunerative market. Why don't the farmers join together and can and dry their fruits? Because the farmers are farmers, and are not manufacturers or traders. In the meantime we are pleased that Salem and other towns boom. Hope there may be enough to go around.

H. A. DEARBORN, Acting P. M.

A daughter of Brigham Young has done what a woman may do to convince mankind that her sex are not influenced by facts when their affections are concerned. Just at the present time, when polygamy seems to be tottering to a fall in its American citadel, Miss Young rushes frantically to its defense. She compares families reared on monogamous principles with those reared in polygamy, and claims that she has seen and known more real happiness in the latter than in the former. She says she loved all her father's numerous wives, and has been devotedly attached to all her brothers and sisters. It is one thing to draw a picture of a happy Mormon household and another to conceive the moral transformation of woman which would enable her to be happy as one of many wives of one man. Miss Young doubtless means well, but she is engaged in a lost cause.

McCrackle—I see that a movement is on foot to induce the government to coin half-cent pieces. McCrackle—Yes; it is thought that more people could be induced to contribute to church collections in that case.

Hobson—Most women have a strange habit of talking to themselves. Does your wife do it? Dumpsey—Not when I'm around.
