English authorities have concluded that dynamic cooling, if not the sole cause of rain, is, at all events, the only cause of any importance, all other causes being either imperative or relatively insignificant.

FROM experiments made in Richmond, Va., with electric heaters, it seems probable that a passenger coach can be kept warm at an expense of two cents an hour, the current being supplied by a dynamo on the locomotive or tender.

A SYSTEM of building houses on tirely of sheet iron has been communicated to the society of architecture in Paris. The partitions, roofs and wainscoting are composed of double metallic sheets, separated by an air mattress, which is surrounded by different non-conductors of heat.

THE SECRET OF AERIAL TRAVEL. Referring to the sad fate of Prof. Hogan, who lost his life in attempting to navigate the Campbell aerial vessel, a few weeks ago, some one says:

When human ingenuity can match the product of nature; when it can make a machine possessing as much power and endurance to the ounce of weight as that of the homing pigeon which lately flew from Detroit to Buffalo (225 miles) in less than four hours; when it can so arrange and automatically shift a series of vanes like shifting feathers in a hawk's wing, which suspend it in the air for hours almost without apparent motion, when it can solve the problem of how this same hawk drops like a bullet from the dizzying height of a half mile, and checks itself unharmed above its prey, then it may learn to travel in the air.

THE CIGARETTE DOOMED. Observation in public places gives satisfactory evidence that the use of cigarettes is rapidly on the decline. Whether this is due to the stringent laws passed in many of the states against selling them to minors, or that smokers have come to their senses and have taken warning from their own experience and the unanimous condemnation of smoking cigarettes by the medical profession, or whether the evil practice has begun to be looked upon as a discreditable vice to be practiced only in secret, we know not; but it is certain that, as compared with the past, very few cigarettes are now smoked in public. Cigar dealers say that the sales of cigarettes have fallen off enormously. The manufacturers of these noxious things have been compelled to advertise largely to prevent the entire destruction of their business. Employers and business men generally have arrayed themselves in opposition to those who persist in the objectionable practice, and young ladies have learned to understand that the real reason why their young men smoke cigarettes is that they can smoke twenty of them, vile though they are, for the price of a very cheap cigar. It will be well for our youth when the habit becomes wholly extinct. William Dudley, Professor of Chemistry in the Vanderbilt University, gives the results of recent careful analytical experiments made by him in his laboratory with the smoke of an ordinary cigarette. The tests were thoroughly scientific and conclusive. The fact was demonstrated beyond the chance of doubt or question that carbonic oxide is the chief constituent of cigarette smoke, if not all tobacco smoke, and that its inhalation into the air passages and lungs must, of necessity, be exceedingly deleterious. Prof. Dudley refers to published assertions that the adulteration of tobacco with opium and flavoring drugs, and the alleged presence of arsenic in the paper, are the chief causes of the evil effects of cigarette smoking, but pronounces them unsatisfactory and insufficient explanations. His chemical tests, he insists, have demonstrated positively the actual cause of the mischief, namely, the cigarette smoker's absorption of the carbonic oxide.

A LADY Nearly Prostrated by a Badly Known Western Addition has been a great sufferer for years with indigestion and dyspepsia. Struck with the most potent of the vegetable stimulants upon the liver, kidneys and digestive organs, and its warm stomachic, were the very things needed, and she began improving and was herold self within a fortnight. This sounds like fiction, but the name can be given if necessary.—San Francisco Examiner.

It is one of those many European importations which do our people more harm than good. Many of our young men, and some of them are neither young nor inexperienced, are literally burning out of themselves the best element of their manhood by sucking into their systems the poison of physical and mental degeneracy through the filthy cigarette. Cigar smoking and pipe smoking are bad enough and pernicious enough in all conscience, but cigarette smoking is absolutely suicidal.

Over in Indiana a man went out hunting, and while he was thus engaged there was a big rain, and he sought shelter in a hollow log. The log became soaked with water, and swelled until the aperture was too small for the man to get out again. There he was in a dilemma. He quickly reviewed his past life, and when he came to think that he was not even a subscriber for his own home paper, he felt so small that he crawled out of the hole without any trouble whatever.

WHEN WORK IS DONE.

It is as if the world were glad! Whether in light or darkness clad, The hour is never so good as when work is done.

The very voices in the street Are tuned to notes more soft and sweet; We love all things we chance to meet When work is done.

The gentle music of the breeze, The tender whispers of the trees, And every sound, has power to please When work is done.

Upon each dear, familiar face Rests some new trait of winsome grace, And joy lights up the old home-place When work is done.

Life's tumult suddenly grows still, And love and gladness and good-will Come with their peace the heart to fill When work is done.

But when the hours of labor close, And earth is wrapped in a sweet repose, And all things sleep—alas for those With work undone!

Oh, kind Taskmaster, let Thy rest Be to tired workers manifest; And who all who do their best, Say Thou: "Well done!" —Marianne Farningham.

A COQUETTE.

How Ruby Howard Was Taught a Severe But Valuable Lesson.

"How absurdly disagreeable you can make yourself, Jack. But there—I'm not going to quarrel with you. How much longer are you going to keep me up to abuse me?" and Ruby laughed aloud in her usual saucy, tantalizing manner. Jack looked at her, his face as black as a thunder-cloud, on which was written a stern determination; but she was in no way appalled by it. On the contrary, she looked at him gayly and carelessly, as if she were perfectly indifferent to him or his moods.

"Miss Howard," he began.

"I am as firmly convinced, as you are, that I should have warned her that this meant more than an ordinary tiff, 'that you love me, but, with your natural perverseness, will neither acknowledge it to yourself nor me.'"

"As he said this—with an air of a judge pronouncing sentence on some unhappy prisoner—with his gray eyes fixed on her face with the sternest gaze they were capable of—in spite of herself the bloom on her soft, round cheek deepened to a bright red and for an instant her saucy, mocking eyes fell before his. A transient smile passed over his gloomy face at this evidence of his power, and left it even gloomier than before. As he regarded the lovely, half-shy face before him he commenced again bitterly: "And why will you not yield to that love and make us both happy? I will tell you. You do not wish to be tied to one; to receive the love and homage of one is not your taste. Oh, no, not for years to come. If I would wait patiently and in the meantime be always ready to dance attendance on all your whims, not noticing any one else, and always keeping in the background when a desirable flirtation came up, then, perhaps, if you didn't meet some one you preferred to me, after keeping me in suspense all that time, you might graciously condescend to marry me. But I decline to become the slave of any woman; and, as much as I love you, I am going to leave you forever."

"Ha, ha!" and her sweet, low laugh rang out like a chime of silvery bells. "The plot thickens. Please go on; it is as lovely as a play."

"I know and feel," said Jack, earnestly, "that we are especially suited to each other, and I believe that in time you will realize the truth of what I say and will regret me, even as I regret you now—but no more. I've already said too much—more than I intended; good-bye," and with a deep bow he turned and left.

"Well, of all things!" she murmured. "Forever! Fudge! I'll see him to-morrow on the promenade the same as usual. He is delicious. I do like him the best when he asserts himself. He is grand when he gets enraged. He looks so stern and glares so, and is so unapproachable that I am almost afraid of him—the darling. If I don't look out he will end in making me marry him before the season is over. Of course I shan't marry any one else, but I'm not going to hurry myself; there's plenty of time." After which sage conclusion she went up to her room in gay spirits, thinking of the good time she would have in making up with Jack as she had done a number of times before.

The next day Miss Ruby failed to meet Jack as usual. In fact a week passed, and in all that time he had not called. She had missed his presence from ball and opera, and every place that she had graced with her bright presence. At last, making a few inquiries, she found that Jack was out somewhere on the broad ocean on his way to China to join his brother, a tea merchant, and was likely to be absent a term of years.

Although outwardly Ruby managed to conceal the shock she had received, she could not conceal from her own heart that something had gone from her that she missed and longed for with an indescribable longing and a wild regret. It was all the more maddening that no one was to blame for her sorrow but herself. The old places had lost their charm. Every thing and every body was insipid, flat and monotonous. Ah! if he would only return, how gladly would she acknowledge her love, and how gladly would she marry him at the earliest date he might mention. Had she known his address at that time she would have written to tell him of her love and penitence.

Four years after Jack had gone Ruby was at a fashionable watering place. She was still the belle of every assemblage. Her indifference and utter carelessness, combined with her rare beauty, brought her scores of admirers, whom she drove almost mad with her coldness. She was still as lovely as ever, but in her big, brown eyes there was a shade of sadness, and a slightly absent look which gave a touch of soul to a face that had heretofore sparkled with wit, and glowed with gaiety and high spirits, but had lacked feeling. Now it was perfect. If Jack could only see her now.

One day she was taking her morning stroll, and feeling an unaccountable depression of spirits. Her great eyes were wearing their most absent look, and as they wandered over the crowd, that was ever coming and going, she started violently, and her delicate, high-bred turned as white as the slimy lace

The oldest steamer in the world, according to the Steamship, is lying in Bowling Harbor, on the Clyde. The Industry, built in 1814, plied for about sixty years on the Clyde, and was finally laid up where she now lies. Last year the engine, a side-lever one, with spur-wheel gearing, was taken out and placed in the Kelvin-side park at Glasgow. The old boat is fast breaking up, and will doubtless shortly disappear. The engine, however, will show to future engineers what a side-lever engine was like, and how it was connected by gearing to the paddle shaft.

"There was a frog that lived in a spring. He thought such a cold that he could not sing. Poor, unfortunate, Batrachian! In what a sad plight he must have been. And yet his misfortune was one that often befalls singers. Many a once-tuneful voice among those who belong to the 'genius homo' is utterly spoiled by 'cold in the head,' or on the lungs, or both combined. For the above mentioned 'croaker' we were not aware that any remedy was ever devised; but we rejoice to know that all human singers may keep their heads clear and throats in tune by a timely use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, both of which are sold by druggists.

One of the latest bits of slang owes its birth to the gifted Western baseball reporter. Enthusiastic followers of the national game, like General Dixwell of Boston, are now called "fans" by the young men who write of the "battles with the bats."

A WOMAN'S DISCOVERY. "Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz. There seems to be every probability of glass being, at least partially, superseded by celluloid in negative work, especially out of doors, we may expect soon to find a new subject for discussion in the question as to whether the substance referred to is altogether free from faults in its new application. It may be said, indeed, that the question has already been raised.

"Did I understand you to say that Dempsey was going to join the church?" "No, I didn't say that precisely. What I did say was that from now on he would be regarded as an ex-pounder."

WE desire to say to our citizens that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Sold by Daniel J. Fry, druggist.

The destruction of fallen apples this season will greatly aid in lessening the number of insects next year. This is the season of the year when the raw, cold winds create sad havoc with the hands and complexion. Soft white hands and a clear "peachy" complexion can be assuredly preserved by the frequent application of Duard's Specific. If rubbed into the skin well it leaves no greasy surface. The skin absorbs it. Sold by D. W. Matthews.
