MONDAY.....DECEMBER 2

IT isn't right to cheat a playwright out of what he writes.

A YOUNG lawyer says he would dress better if he had more suits.

STRANGE as it may appear, it is when the fall comes that trade takes a rise.

IT has been raging for a long time, but it is certain that the first frost will kill the yellow fever in shoes.

WHEN one reads of a citizen of "40 years' standing" one feels as if somebody should offer the old gentleman a seat.

THERE is a brand of tobacco called "The Kentucky Smile." but the real old-fashioned Kentucky smile comes in a liquid state.

SPIRIT mediums pretend to see things in the other world. But then too much spirits will make one see things in this world which are not in it.

AFTER a man has finished putting up his stove pipe the family parrot has to be kept out of the room when the minister calls.

ONE er der reasons dey drink so much in dese yar proherbition states comes from de same princerpal dat chickens raised at night offen annudder man's roos' is got heap de sweetest meat on um.

"NICE carpets. Can't be beat," said the salesman. "I know it," said the customer sadly. "I bought some of them last year, and when I tried to beat them last week they fell to pieces. I want something that will stand triennial thrashing."

DEMOCRACY in its continual beating upon its political gong under Harrison's administration, reminds one of the story of the Indians during an eclipse of the sun and moon. When they saw the approaching occultation they would raise a shout, beat upon drums or anything to make a noise and then when the eclipse passed off would declare they had frightened away the evil spirit by their holabaloo, and would rejoice over their escape from destruction. So democracy, when an election is about to come off, raise a demonic clatter, and if defeated they keep it up and when a natural local cause results in a republican defeat they claim their holabaloo did the business.

THE following aptly given remarks by an exchange will bear repeating: "More towns die for want of confidence on the part of business men and lack of public spirit than from any other cause. When a man in search of home or business location goes into a town and finds everything full of hope and enthusiasm over the prospects of a place, and all earnestly at work to build it up, he soon becomes imbued with the same spirit, and as a result he drives down his stakes and goes to work with the same interest. When, however, he goes to a town where every one expresses doubt and apprehension for the future prosperity of the place, moping about and indulging in mournful complaints, he naturally feels that it is no place for him, and at once shakes the dust off his feet, while he pulls out with all possible speed for some other place. Consequently make a live, enterprising town out of the one in which you live. When you are working for or saying something good of your town you are accomplishing all the more for yourself."

A RAILROAD DOG.

Napoleon is a dog residing at Salida, Col., belonging to an engineer of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad. He has been engaged with his master for the past two and one-half years in running locomotive No. 86. His apprenticeship commenced at the early age of six months. His first trip was not a success on account of fright. This was spedily overcome. He can now go into the roundhouse where twenty-eight engines are domiciled, single out and mount his own machine, and in the absence of the fireman and his master, defend it against all intruders. He rides on the fireman's side of the cab with both front paws and head hanging out of the mindow, intently watching the track.

He frequently scents cattle a mile or more distant. When they appear in sight he becomes greatly excited, looking first at the cattle and then at his master, as though trying to make him comprehend the gravity of the situation. On nearer approach he sets up a cry similar to that of a human being. If necessary to come to a full stop he bounds out of the cab, runs ahead, and loses no time in convincing the trespassers of the importance of finding some other stamping ground.

When necessary to communicate with help at the pumping stations, frequently at long distances from the track, a note is written and given to the dog, who delivers it and speedily returns with a reply.

Signals to start from his own engine are readily interpreted by him, but he pays no more attention to the whistles and bells of other engines than to cattle that may be safely grazing on the sides of the road. His olfactory powers are so keen that he has frequently given his master timely warning against a rock, that, if struck, might have resulted disastrously. He is well known to all railroad employes between Ogden and Salida. If accidently left at any of the stations, he turns to Salida on the first train.

ARBORIAL.

Steps should be taken as soon as practicable to plant trees along the sidewalks throughout the city, except in the districts wholly given up to business, and there is no good reason why they should not be planted even on some of the business streets especially those which shall be especially devoted to retail business. It would be a work of supererogation to attempt to give the reasons why shade and ornamental trees should be planted in a city, but while comfort and adornment are in a general way the arguments in their favor, to this, under certain circumstances, may be added the desideratum of increased health, which would be produced by planting the proper trees. The first thing to be considered will of course be the kinds of trees which will flourish in this climate, the next a selection from those which would be desirable, and the third a plan for uniformity in planting, and co-operation, which would bring desired results in the matter of appearance and economy, and success in planting and cultivation. As to the matter of health improvement, the eucalyptus tree is largely cultivated in California cities, and would doubtless flourish here. It is said that this tree is an absorbent of malaria and miasma, and if this is true, which doubtless it is, the results would be immeasurably beneficially hygenically. As what other trees might be desirable and possible, that should be made a subject of investigation by competent authority, and hard wood shoud be secured so far as practicable. As to the matters of uniformity and cooperation, for the purpose of securing the highest degree of ornamentation and economy, it may be said that the differing tastes, prejudices, sentiment, ignorance regarding planting, etc., would interfere with the one, while success and economy would often be thrawted by the fact that property owners planting, every one on his "own hook," are liable to become the victims of commercial tree men, who do not care whether the trees succeed or not so they get the money for them On this subject the Chicago Times publishes good advice in an article from which the following paragraph is clipped, "Alderman Vierling," it says, "appears to have a warm interest in the matter of beautifying the city and increasing the comfort and health of its residents by judicious planting of sidewalk trees. Recognizing the disadvantages of individual endeavor against the capacity of freemen, who have no more conscience than their constituents, he has introduced an ordinance providing for a shade commission or board, in the city government that may take charge of the whole matter. Then and may then be done by special assessment, to the great advantage of property owners and residents of streets upon which there are vacant lots, that unless for municipal action would not be shaded any more than but for such action they would have a sidewalk. The project is entirely feasible and ought to be welcomed."

The Bennington battle monument has reached the height of over 268 feet. It is expected the shaft will be completed by the middle of the month with favorable weather.

A clerk in one of the departments at Washington has discovered that soldiers in the late war were killed in their first, third and fifth battles more than in any others.

AN OLD GUN.

Efforts Made to Unearth the Identy of an Old Rifle.

The old gun now in the possession of Messrs. Rose & Bentley, and on exhibiton at their office, has attracted so much attendion that efforts have been made to trace its pedigree by experienced relic hunters says the East Oregonian.

They have met with some success. The gun was unearthed near Albion. Although rusty and mouldering with the decomposing effect of the many years which have rolled by since its oiled stock and polished barrel were inspected with pride by some trapper or mountaineer, it is in a fair state of preservation. The mysterious letters, "M. R. R. K. Co.," faintly legible on its stock, gave the only clue to its identity. They were interpeted to mean "Mounted Rifle Regiment, Company K," and investigation shows that there was such an organization in existence.

The Mounted Rifles were organized in 1846, Col. W. W. Loring in command, to protect the wagon trains of immigrants from the Indians. The gun may have belonged to some trooper in the rifles, whose bones have long since mingled with the dust.

Its peculiarity lies in the fact that the hammer is underneath the barrel. Encyclopædias were searched leading to the discovery in the Encyclopædia Brittanica that guns of this character were among the first cap and ball fire-arms made. Percussion caps were generally in use in 1840.

Anyway, the gun must have an interesting history, and the quaint evidences of antiquity which it bears might serve as an inspiring theme for the poet.

The Weight of Drops.

Boymond has lately published an interesting article on the weight of drops. It is well known that the weight depends upon the exterior diammeter of the dropping tube, the interior diammeter having no influence except upon the velocity of the flow. The nature of the liquid determines the weight, whatever may be the proportion of the dissolved material it may contain. Boymond used a dropper of one-eighth of an inch diameter, and determined the weight by a very delicate balance. The mean of his results gave: For 15 grains of distilled water, 20 drops; alcohol of 60 deg., 52 drops; alcoholic tinctures from 60 to 90 deg., 33 to 61 drops; ethereal tincture, 82 drops; fatty oils, about 45 drops; volatile oils, 50 drops; aqueous solutions, whether diluted or saturated, 20 drops; wine, 3310 25 drops; laudanum, about 32 to 35 drops.

A CALIFORNIA SENSATION.

[Petaluma Courier.]

It is reported that the sales of the "California Remedy," Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla, have grown within a few months till they are now really sensational. The way the fame of this production has spread is simply marvelous. Six months ago it was unknown. Today it is all over the country. It is authoritatively stated that they have been actually giving it away in San Francisco to people afflicted with dyspepsia, sick headaches, indigestion and liver troubles, not to be paid for unless it cured. Such practical tests are so startlingly convincing as to be almost sensational. It is stated that two of the active principles of the new remedy belong to the vegetable kingdom of California, and are so well known to us all under common names that it would surprise us if told them. But we are not surprised at anything Californian, and this recent discovery of the new medicinal virtues of its vegetable kingdom is but another instance of the astonishing possibilities of a soil and climate like ours.

Catarrh

is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanent cure. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed. Hood's Sarsaparilla also builds up the whole system, and makes you feel renewed in health and strength.

Catarrh

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, and received great relief and benefit from it The catarrh was very disagreeable, especially in the winter, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effect to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I am never without Hood's Sarsaparilla in my house as I think it is worth its weight in gold." MRS. G. B. GIBB, 1621 Eighth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
