MONMOUTH NOTES.

We have a barber shop in Monmouth now. Still we grow.

The concert given Sunday evening by the Sunday school was largely attended.

Rev. Mr. Waller's wife living about a mile and a half south of town died very suddenly Tuesday evening at supper time.

Mrs. Kelsey, of Dallas, and her mother died at their residence Thursday, and Rev. Kelsey died yesterday at 1 o'clock.

Some one entered Ira F. M. Butler's house Thursday evening and took fifteen dollars and a watch.

Bill Nye's Humor. Cleanly and Kindly Characteristic of the Man's Home Life.

Bill Nye, or to use his proper name, Edgar W. Nye, lives on Staten Island.

After having received a good education he started for the west in 1876 and obtained a position on the old Daily Sentinel in Laramie City.

Justice Miller, of the United States supreme court, is spoken of as "a man of the simplest tastes and most unostentatious habits."

James Whitcomb Riley is spoken of by the irreverent editor of the Peoria Transcript as "the gentleman who travels around with Bill Nye in order to convince people that Nye is not the homeliest man in the world."

He is now in receipt of a good income. It is said that his lectures last year netted him $30,000 and his pen $10,000.

Most of the humorist's pen portraits represent him as perfectly innocent of hair. This does a gross injustice to the vegetation with which his scalp is fringed.

The chief character of his work is the unexpectedness of his statements and the good humor which pervades all his writings.

A person with a sensitive conscience sometimes finds it difficult to transact business properly and at the same time follow his inclinations.

It is this difficulty that has led to the resignation of the president of the State Savings bank of Detroit.

He refused to accept the paper of a tobacco firm because he believes the sale of tobacco is immoral.

He refused to allow a watchman to watch the bank Sundays and Sunday nights, because he thinks no man should work on Sunday.

The other stockholders protested against this sort of thing, and, as burglars have no conscientious scruples against working Sundays, the stockholders insisted that the bank should have a watchman on that day.

So the president sold out his interest in the institution and retired.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, who often visits Copeland in his private car to meet his son, who is being educated at the noted St. Paul's school, is a welcome guest at the hotels and to the hack drivers.

To the latter he hands a $5 note for passage from the city to the school, refusing any return change, the regular fare being $2.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward looks askance on the woman's rights movement, and has a sister married to Professor Huxley.

She shuns publicity, writes a singularly masculine hand, and is a complete enigma to her own family, who are still trying to find out what all the fuss is about.

A machine makes 200 pins a minute.

At Deadwood, S. D., coal is $20 a ton.

The Cigarmakers' Union has $240,000.

A Heidelberg cask holds 800 hogsheads.

Nine-tenths of our razors come from Europe.

We ate 110,000 European eggs the past year.

Bricks are now being burned with oil in Pennsylvania.

Three-fourths of our ladies' cloaks are made in New York.

There are 240,000 men and women employed in Ohio's factories.

Cardinal Gibbons contemplates going to the City of Mexico to attend the celebration of the golden jubilee of Archbishop Sabastide.

The Prince of Wales has never affixed his signature to any recommendation of a hair restorative.

He has not the hair to back it up.

Austin Corbin paid $13,000 for a herd of Manitoba buffaloes with which to stock his hunting park in the mountains of New Hampshire.

Justice Miller, of the United States supreme court, is spoken of as "a man of the simplest tastes and most unostentatious habits."
