

VICTOR TREVIT'S DUEL.

Half-Breed and a Nez Perce Fight for the Possession of a Squaw.

Victor Trevit, the founder of Lewistown, T., was one of the most remarkable characters in the history of the Northwest has ever known. He was a half-breed.

Among the Nez Perces was a beautiful squaw, the daughter of Tall Pine, a noted chief, says the Omaha Bee. She was known as the Blushing Rose. Trevit conceived a passionate love for her, and intimated to Tall Pine that he desired to make her his wife.

The proposition pleased the old chief, but when the plan was laid before Blushing Rose she signified her displeasure by declaring that she would wed no man but Leaping Panther, a handsome young brave who had distinguished himself in the chase and whose intrepidity and skill in the use of the rifle were the wonder of the tribe.

The old chief, with an eye open to his personal interests, tried to laugh down the protests of his daughter, and coolly informed her that she must throw aside her silly infatuation and become Trevit's wife whether she pleased her or not.

She threatened to kill herself if she was pressed into a distasteful union, and Trevit and Tall Pine were in a quandary as to what move to make, when the brave young warrior, Leaping Panther, offered a solution to the difficulty by suggesting that Trevit and he fight a duel with knives, the girl to become the wife of the winner.

Two warriors quickly wore the shirts from the men's bodies and strapped their left hands behind their backs. Thus, naked to the hips, with a gleaming knife in their hands, the men moved toward each other with the stealth of a tiger in their movements and the cunning of a fox in their eyes.

The combat was not of long duration. Trevit suddenly rose to the full limit of his splendid height and rushed upon his foe with a force and a yell that caused the young squaw by the bowdler to turn pale and tremble, but a smile of exultation lit up her face as she saw the massive form of Trevit reel and the blood gush in a flood from his side.

Leaping Panther's agility had served him well, and with a spring he was on his wavering antagonist, who, with a wild sweep of his long arm, sent his glittering knife through the muscles and tendons of the young brave's shoulder, and the two men fell together in a helpless heap.

For many days Trevit lay at the point of death, but his powerful constitution pulled him through, and he became himself again. Leaping Panther never recovered the use of his right arm, and was obliged to relinquish Blushing Rose to Trevit, as the half-breed had been declared the winner in the fight, since he had rendered her forever useless the fighting arm of his antagonist.

In due time the young squaw became the wife of Trevit, but she never forgot her first love, and two years after becoming the wife of the old pioneer, one morning her remains, together with those of Leaping Panther, were found at the bottom of the Snake river.

They had deliberately gone to their death clasped in each other's arms.

RIDICULOUS BUT TRUE.

A Real Estate Dealer and a Preacher Exchange Laughable Yarns.

Two gentlemen vied with each other in their hearing on ridiculous stories, writes the Chicago Journal. The first was a real estate man, and I was present when the incident occurred and know it was truly related. The other was a minister, and of course that makes the story good. The first said: "We have had all kinds of customers to deal with, but an old lady visitor yesterday beat us all. She was in search of a house to rent, in her search she found one that suited her, and on it was tacked a large card with the name of our firm. The first intimation we had of her intentions was when she appeared in the doorway of the office with the 'To Rent' card in her hand. 'How much for the rent of this house?' she asked, holding up the card. Of course we asked her where she got it. 'On the house,' she said, shortly. 'Which house?' 'You ought to know that yourselves, it's the rent I want to know.' The typewriter stopped to snicker, the head of the firm muttered something about 'idiot,' while the talking member of the firm tried to reason with the old lady. At last he told her she should either take him to the house or bring the house to him, at which she flew mad and said she would go to some other agent if we could not answer so simple a request. Where she got our rent-card only she and the side of the house knows, and one is as likely to tell as the other." The preacher's story was short. It was on the hired girl. His wife got her through an employment agency. "We had company," said he, "and had to have her. Before retiring, the first night she was in the house, my wife gave her instructions about breakfast, and told her to ring the bell when it was ready. It was six o'clock the next morning, when we were half awake, half asleep, that there was a ring at the front door as if an angry messenger brought a telegram. The first ring was followed by pull after pull at the door-bell, until we rushed to the window and peered out the screen to see if there was a fire in the vicinity. We returned to our sleeping room laughing, while our guests were in the hall, half dressed, asking: 'What's the matter?' Breakfast was ready, and the girl was obeying the last order of the night before. She did ring the bell, but never will again."

A Mistake Often Made.

Boys and young men sometimes start out in life with the idea that one's success depends on sharpness and chicanery. They imagine if a man is able always to "get the best of a bargain," no matter by what deceit and meanness he carries his point, that his prosperity is assured. This is a great mistake. Enduring prosperity can not be founded on cunning and dishonesty. The tricky and deceitful man is sure to fall a victim, sooner or later, to the influences which are forever working against him. His house is built upon the sand, and its foundation will be certain to give way. Young people can not give these truths too much weight. The future of that young man is safe who eschews every phase of double-dealing, and lays the foundation of his career in the enduring principles of everlasting truth.

Do Figures Ever Lie?

Two women had 30 chickens each, which they took to market. They agreed to divide equally the proceeds of their sale.

One sold her chickens 2 for a dollar, getting for her chickens $15.

The other sold hers 3 for a dollar, getting for her chickens $10.

This made $25 realized for the 60 chickens. The merchant called on to divide the money said:

"You sold your 30 chickens 2 for a dollar, and you sold your 30 chickens 3 for a dollar. That makes 60 chickens at the rate of 5 for $2. Well 5 into 60 goes 12 times—twice 12 is 24. That makes 24 your chickens have brought."

But, as shown above, the women act has 25 in their pockets. And yet the dealer's figures were right!

A New Method of Treating Disease—Hospital Remedies.

What are they? There is a new departure in the treatment of disease. It consists in the collection of the specific used by noted specialists of Europe and America, and bringing them within the reach of all. For instance the treatment pursued by special physicians who treat indigestion, stomach and liver troubles only, was obtained and prepared. The treatment of other physicians, celebrated for curing catarrh, was procured, and so on till these incomparable cures now included disease of the lungs, kidneys, female weakness, rheumatism and nervous debility.

This new method of "one remedy for one disease" must appeal to the common sense of all sufferers, many of whom have experienced the ill effects, and thoroughly realize the absurdity of the claims of Patent Medicines which are guaranteed to cure every ill out of a single bottle, and the use of which, as statistics have, has run more stomachs than alcohol. A circular describing these new remedies is sent free on receipt of stamp to pay postage, by Hospital Remedy Company, Toronto, Canada, sole proprietors. 1-1-ly-cod

The Record estimates that 5135 new manufacturing and mining enterprises have been organized in the South the current year.

Catarrah Can't be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrah is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you have to take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrah cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrah cure is no quack medicine. It is prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials free.
