HOFFER BROTHERS, Editors.

CAN THERE BE A NEUTRAL PAPER.

The late election has again demonstrated the impossibility of conducting a neutral paper in an exciting political campaign. A number of papers that have been started in various localities of the state, ostensibly to remain neutral, dispassionate, disinterested spectators, have shown themselves incapable of remaining out of the whirl. No doubt the editors meant well enough. But the temptation to dip in overcame their design or promise to keep neutral. The feelings engendered, as the conflict waxed hot, have not always been pleasant. In some cases the subscribers have vented their ill-will in stopping their subscriptions, and in other ways strewing with thorns the path the editor has to travel, who undertakes that difficult and improbable performance called a neutral paper.

Whoever undertakes to run a neutral newspaper should let politics alone. There is nothing neutral about politics. Even the term neutral is in itself an impossibility in party politics. For neutrality awakens the suspicion of the partisan. The selfishness of politics directs unfavorable attention from all sides upon the man who attempts neutrality, both before and after the battle. All the hostilities and poisons engendered in an excited political atmosphere are apt to be poured out on the head of a neutral paper and much of it often unjustly. In the very nature of the case this is unavoidable.

It seems from a most casual glancing into the conditions of politics that neutrality on the part of a newspaper is not apt to be a bed of roses for the man who becomes responsible for the conduct of the paper. We believe the only independence possible—and independence is not to be confounded with neutrality—is that of a party paper that is itself independent within the party. A neutral paper is an absurd misnomer and impossibility.

THE LABORING WOMAN.

Society of to-day is on a queer basis, at least so an old-timer would express it. The laboring woman is now the stirring feminine element in the modern, or rather western social world. Everywhere we feel how great is the influence of the woman who works, and see in every reform or good cause the effects of her zeal and faithfulness, linked to a record of hard work with none of the disagreeables shirked. If the woman of yesterday has been dubbed a necessary evil, the woman of to-day may be considered a necessity for the invention of good, for since she has been transformed from a beautiful hindrance to a noble helper the world's work has progressed as never before. Civilization, up to the nineteenth century tried to go on one leg and it was a poor limping affair at the best.

Society even in the "5 o'clock tea" strata, is to-day run by the laboring woman. She is the cavied one who in her early career learned the dress-makers' trade, and coupling the practicality of it to her later culture and experience, becomes a leader in the idea of sense in clothing and an experimenter for the benefit of all she comes in contact with. Look at Mrs. Jeannet-Miller, she is the great achiever who in her early career learned a trade or profession and can stand for a broken fortune or helpless father or husband and carry his projects to completion. Look at Mrs. Frank Leslie, or the wife of the architect of the great Brooklyn bridge. She is the beloved and admired lady who in her humble home of poverty and hard work has unconsciously developed a grace of heart and quick sympathy that will hold and bind her husband's followers, from the lowly to the mighty, and keep his ideals and ambitions high and pure, and, in secret, smooth his path of every drudgery. There are instances of this kind, too plenty.

Every time we find that the power upon the social throne as well as behind it is the woman who is capable. The girl who grows to be a woman of achievement, is the girl who has learned to work. The woman who is respected and influential is the woman who can do. And if you look closely into the signs of the times you will find that she is also the woman who is most beloved. At last she is the one whose love in return counts for the most and lasts longest. Woman need not crowd man in the field of labor. Look at the vast quidone, the great possibilities! Heretofore woman has consumed over fifty per cent. of what man garnered—the rest counted for the world's gain. To-day she works beside him in science, art and reform, and the treasure house of civilization and progress is swelling for the good of the individual and the healing of the nation. God bless the woman who works!

THE SCIENCE OF SMILING.

The world has always welcomed the smile-producer, and crowned with high honors him who was able to raise two smiles where only one was known before. Humorists have been better rewarded than statesmen, and the successful clown in motley array has always won higher applause than the philosopher in his russet cloak of wisdom. If the writer knew an infallible recipe for laughter he would give it to the world at once and enjoy seeing it hold its sides to keep from bursting with laughter.

Let us seriously consider if we may not increase the volume of circulating medium in smiles, and the world's legal tender of ready laughter. The smile is the silver of life; the joy of genuine laughter is its clear coin of ringing gold. Perchance you are too old, or the hardships and woes of life have smitten you so severely as to drive these two noble metals of hilarity out of your nature. Then let all the rest of us laugh on and smile broadly while you nod approval in your sombre laden sadness. But, take care you look not too long! It's catching, this epidemic of grins; before you know a quiet grin, some ghost of a ha-ha-ha! from the ages past, may steal over your face unawares.

We are not writing now for those blessed easy-laughing people, who are always a-cackling, and whose reverberating cackinations never hang fire a millionth part of a second. There are slower people, whose smile is a scarce article and whose risibilities take form in slow geologic processes. We would teach them to smile oftener in this bright electric age. We would make a mighty effort to strike a spark off their flinty taciturnity and touch the button that would discharge a whole battery of hearty ear-to-ear grins and stomach-gripping guffaws.

We all need to do more smiling. We need to suppress our laughter less. Let the light of our smile and the echo of our laugh be not so unfamiliar. Our solemnity is ridiculous. To test the truth of this assertion, let the most solemn man in town draw one side of his mouth down a little in a gentle curve, and as gently curl the other side up a trifle, and if he will look at himself all the dignity he can muster cannot keep his face from breaking out in smiles from ear to ear, and he will end in enjoying a hearty laugh at himself.

WHO IS BEFOGGED?

As long as there are a half a dozen farmers in each voting precinct in the country who cannot see that a tariff tax less than highway robbery just alone will the monopolist and rich man sit around and laugh at the poor's perjury and continue to rake in the shekels. And as long as this befogged condition exists there is not much hope for any other valuable change.—Stayton Sun.

It is always a question whether the befogged are those who are accused of being in that condition, or the fellows who accuse them of it. We would not intimate such a thing as the possibility of an editor being befogged. The idea is absurd.

We are informed that the representatives of the national grange, farmers' alliance and knights of labor appeared before the house ways and means committee and asked that the tariffs on agricultural products be raised to the exact figures of the bill as it passed.

Can it be that the farmers are after the "shekels"? Or is it possible that after all the speeches and editorials they are in favor of a protective tariff? Has not our editorial neighbor placed the intelligence of farmers too low?

Astoria calls herself "The Gem City of the Ocean." See here, are you fellows out over the bar?

Herald, Dayton: First Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson, who is visiting this coast, and is traveling in his own special car, will stop at Salem about 5 hours on Wednesday next. While there he will look into the matter of a postoffice building at the Capital city.

The Dallas T. M. says: Mr. Wm. F. Dugan, representing Dugan Bros., hydraulic engineers of Salem, Or., is in the city. He has been examining our sources of water supply, and the distance to be pumped and piped before putting in a bid to put in the same. Mr. Dugan has put the pumps in operation in Baker City, and understands the business.

How to Cure Nervousness.

A body with a nervous temperament will make known its wants through its natural medium—the nervous system. If it fails to receive proper nourishment the nerves will be the first to cry out. Dr. Hiller's Hydrastine Restorative ensures perfect nutrition to those who take it, and a perfectly nourished body cannot be nervous. For sale at D. J. Fry's.

CAPITAL JOURNAL JOBS.

The boddler in politics must go.

It is no state secret that Salem continues to go ahead.

"Let us commence to begin" is a long ways off from doing anything.

The confidence of the business men of Salem is a prize worth winning.

Connecticut apple trees have been stripped by a worm that resists poison and fire.

Oregon wool is moving to market nicely and a great deal of money is going into circulation.

THE JOURNAL daily is 50 cts. per month by mail or carrier. Please leave your orders at office next door to post office, if you wish it sent to you when away from the city.

Albany Herald: If Governor Pennoyer, in selecting a successor for Judge Bean should name Hon. L. Bilyeu of Eugene, he would be honoring a Linn county boy, and a gentleman of the legal ability.

First Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson should not go back to Washington without having seen the finest capital city on the Northwest coast. That is what Salem is and Salem will keep the start.

Portland Telegram: The interest Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson is taking in mail matters in the Northwest indicates very clearly that he has no intention of resigning his position at present, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

Oregon Blade: According to the Oregonian's view of the matter forty-two fools in the senate voted for free coinage, twenty-five wise men, being convinced like the Oregonian that the people should have a guardian appointed over them, voted against the bill.

Dallas Itemizer: Many a drunkard loafer of to-day sadly regrets that his parents did not have him to be more industrious and keep better company in years gone by, and many a young man who is now drifting into the same course will yet have abundant cause to be sorry of it.

Independence West Side: Oregon never had a failure of crops and this year when dry weather was causing many a farmer to feel uneasy about his crops, the welcome rain came in due season, and all nature smiles and blossoms anew and the harvest of 1890 is again to be a plentiful one. What a grand state is Oregon.

West Side: The Oregonian is a grand paper and in every way far ahead of any other paper in Oregon, but notwithstanding that fact the combined weekly press can "down" the Oregonian on any and every issue where papers have influence. The Oregonian has been remarkably successful; but it is because the whole press of Oregon has reflected its brighter light into dark corners. Let the weekly press be ignored and its influence will be felt against the offender.

The vote thrown in Oregon June 2nd seems to have been a little over 71,000. The gain is about 10,000 in two years, a larger gain than ever before known in that length of time. It is well known also, that the full vote of the state was not cast in the recent election. In some of the counties voters have settled at great distances from the voting places, and did not appear at the polls; in Portland and several other towns the whole vote could not be cast within the hours appointed and the polls were closed while voters in large numbers were still in line. All, however, will appear on the census rolls.

Dallas Observer: Rev. T. Van Scoy, D. D., president of Willamette University, was present at Falls City campmeeting last Saturday and Sunday, and preached with his usual power and eloquence. The congregations were large and appreciative, especially on Sunday, and the best of order prevailed throughout the meeting. It was hoped that the meeting would continue through the week till after next Sunday; but a case of scarlet fever was reported in the vicinity, and hence it was decided to discontinue the meeting till a future time.

Portland Oregonian: The dumb brutes of this city have lost a friend in the death of Captain Felix St. Martin, the veteran police officer. He was during long years of service ever on the alert to rescue them from the cruelties imposed by man and bring their unreasoning persecutors to punishment. The Oregon Humane Society, speaking on behalf of the voiceless, recounts the services that the deceased officer has rendered them in their efforts to protect animals from abuse and cruelty, and gratefully names his name as one who sympathized with and aided in every possible way the work of the organization.

SCROFULA

It is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings on the glands of the neck; causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" and fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption, and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can SCROFULA Be CURED?

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula or impure blood, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, several breaking out on them in various places. My little boy, three years old, has had a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. I was advised to use Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we have all taken it. The result is that all have been cured of the scrofula, my little boy being entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ARTHURTON, Passaic City, N. J.
