

INSPIRATION.

A Sermon Delivered by Rev. H. H. Brown at Unitarian Hall June 8, 1890.

(Concluded from Saturday's JOURNAL.)

This experience of Longfellow's is a common one among the poets. That beautiful poem so often found in our papers and entitled "There is no Death" and credited to Bulwer, was written by J. L. McCrea, then city editor of the Dubuque, Iowa, Times. In the presence of his wife he told me the circumstance of its composition. He had been sick unto death with typhoid fever and while lingering in the balance, that poem forced itself into his mind. "I did not think of it, I did not plan it, but it came there and troubled me and I got no peace till wife sat by my bed and took it down as fast as I got strength to whisper it to her."

"How did you, a boy of 18, ever write it?" asked a lady friend of mine as she met Baily, the author of Festus. He replied: "I did not, it wrote itself." Had it been written in Hebrew 3000 years ago it would have been as sacred as Isaiah is today.

A similar reply was given by Thackeray when asked why he married a couple in one of his novels: "I did not; they married themselves."

E. P. Roe, in a preface to one of his novels, says: "I can honestly assert that I have never manufactured a novel." * * * My stories have come with scarcely any violation on my part, and the characters control me."

The same is told of Scott and Dickens and of Mrs. Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Edward Belamy tells in "The Nationalist for May '89 how he came to write "Looking Backward." * * * In undertaking to write "Looking Backward" I had at the outset no idea of stamping a serious contribution to the monument of social reform. The idea was of a mere literary fantasy, a fairy tale of social felicity." For a year or two this idea had been vaguely floating in his mind. He had made at last his plan, his sketch, when he says: "No thanks to myself, I stumbled over the destined cornerstone of the new social order." This led to an entire change of motive and a new casting of the story. Does it not seem as if that power called in the church "The Holy Ghost" had brooded over him till it had prepared him for the full inspiration, and then he wrote because he must. Heber Newton says, he knows parts of the bible are inspired because they inspire him. By this test and from the numbers it has inspired "Looking Backward" was also "an inspiration from on high."

Dr. Holmes was asked the history of "The Chambered Nautilus" and said: "It has none. It wrote itself, and so did the "One Horse Shy." That was one of those random conceptions that gallop through the brain and that you catch by the bridle. I caught it, seemed it. All my poems are written while I am in a sort of spasmodic mental condition that almost takes me out of my own self and I write only when under such influence."

Miss Lizzie Datus, a spiritualist, who has written two volumes of beautiful poems, has a similar experience to that of Dr. Holmes, so that her case is not exceptional. Of one of her poems she says:

"I was seized with an undefinable uneasiness. I wandered up and down the garden till finally an idea of what I was to do was clearly defined. Then with pencil and paper I hastened to a corner and there wrote, 'The Song of the North,' so rapidly that it was not legible and I was obliged to copy it at once lest I lost the connection."

These cases are common literary experience too paralleled in the life of almost every author, and in that of every orator, musician, painter, sculptor, inventor and artisan.

There is one law under which they all come. From the simplest editorial to the grandest creation or poem it is only a question of degree. The city editor pens his lead by an ordinary inspiration. Intensely that sufficiently, if the mental machinery is capable, and we have a poem, an essay or an oration.

There is no more need of introducing any new factor, any infra-red power, here than there is on the railroad if we would go 30 miles an hour when we are going ten. It is only a little more present on the level.

As said above, inspiration does not confine itself to literature. Since all manifestations of life are spiritual, we are inspired to do all of life's duties. The inventor is taken possession of as is the poet and orator.

A clergyman writing in one of our magazines of Edison says, "he has his mood, his periods of inspiration, out of which he comes with new ideas and his difficulties solved."

The business man has his flashes of inspiration that show him when to invest, when to collect a bill, and whom to trust. The farmer is inspired concerning his crops, the housewife about her work, and the mother to care for her child. God's Holy Spirit is by all and inspires all. It is only a question of receptivity. Sheridan inspired, inspired his army at Opequan. The inspired mother inspires her sons to lives of honor. To the scientific eye, effects in all these cases being alike, the cause must be one.

But how? What is the real of war and how is it improved? We do not know, we can only speculate.

It is only a few years since man began to apply law to physical phenomena and how little he yet knows. In that field, only a student of science realizes. Mental science is only a name. The student who in schools studies the text books upon it knows less in explanation than when he begins. He has gathered some data and been misled by dogmatic theories. In the field of psychic phenomena we know still less. It has been considered too sacred to study and has been preempted by theology as its rightful field, and students warned off. The fundamental condition is prayer—prayer, not an utterance of words, but a receptive condition of spirit and sincerity of mind. No one can ever reach a high degree of inspiration when he knows he is telling a lie or acting falsely. He cannot put his soul where he is not.

We are to do nothing for which we cannot pray. Before we decide to do a thing, let us ask ourselves if we can call God and holy angels to help us. If we can do this, the help is already ours.

Let us now, most comforting and strengthening thought, this of God's constant presence and our constant communion with him through inspiration! No bonds of dependency, no notions of impotency; no weakness when we keep ever this earnest of communion ever with it comes "the power that passeth understanding."

But let us remember, that before God, all are equal and that for us, if we with this, is an inspiration as grand and glorious as ever mortal had. Our great modern inspirer, Emerson, has told us that for us "there is within moment an utterance of word and grand as that of the celestial state of Phœbus or the power of the Egyptians, or the power of Moses or Dante, but different from all these not less easily will the soul attain, if it compares with its thousand chosen tongues, to repeat itself but if you can hear what the priests say, surely you can reply to them in the same pitch of voice. Above in the simple and noble regions of thy life, obey thy heart and thou shalt numbered the Fugitives."

Instead of mere creation should be a common federal council "with the most eloquent and the most gifted in seat itself." It seems itself, it depends upon the sum of the various how much of God has at any one time, and it is to our power to increase or diminish the amount. And the more we throw away self, the more of God we find. When Self is completely lost, then are we "possessed" or inspired by "The Power that is not ourselves" and which works for righteousness."

To me, thought is as real a force as electricity and exists as that does, a fixed quantity in God. We can use electricity by observing its laws. So we can use thoughts. When we arise into the thought realm, it takes us and we obey it, and not as commonly the idea, the thought obeys us. It masters us.

As your car is obedient to the current of electricity that passes through its metal medium and the nervous system. If it fails to receive proper nourishment the nerves will be the first to cry out. Dr. Hitler's Hydriastine Restorative cures, gives nutrition to those who are feeble and perfectly nourished body and to nervous.

"Work on the heart and let the age and time die."

Let us now, with every effort, under whatever name and whatever form, that seeks to familiarize people with this fact of communion with God, the inspiration of His Spirit, until all shall know that, by invocation from Him in their life, and shall consequently provide for themselves the channels of a greater inspiration. Only by thus living can we have more godlike lives. Only thus bring the kingdom of God on earth where we have taught to pray for its reign. Only then can men be re-born. Only by this means,

"Work on the heart and let the age and time die."

How to Cure Nervousness.

A body with a nervous temperament will make known its wants through its natural medium—the nervous system. If it fails to receive proper nourishment the nerves will be the first to cry out. Dr. Hitler's Hydriastine Restorative cures, gives nutrition to those who are feeble and perfectly nourished body and to nervous.
