

NEW YORK LETTER.

A Grand Air Garden Proposed—All Important Event in Journalism
—The Razzle-Dazzle.

(Correspondent of the Journal.)

NEW YORK, July 21, 1890.

The long looked for opening of the new Croton Aqueduct, which took place last week, has caused a sigh of relief to go up from all parts of the city. Not only is there a much greater supply of water in the mains for ordinary use, but there is also an ample amount stored up in the great reservoir in Central Park, which can be called on in case of a large fire or any other necessity. One thousand million gallons is the capacity of the reservoir and this limit, it is thought, will be reached in the course of two weeks, when the supply will then be ample for any emergency. Among other things, the opening of the aqueduct has revived the suggestion of converting the old reservoir at Fifth Ave. and 42d St. into a public park, or place of amusement. The idea now put forth is to substantially floor over the reservoir, or air garden, somewhat similar to the famous "hanging gardens" of Ancient Babylon. It is proposed that Bryant Park, which occupies the remainder of the block toward Sixth Ave., be graded up and formed into a grand approach to the air garden on top of the reservoir. A magnificent music pavilion is suggested as among the possibilities, as is also an observation tower, which would give visitors a wide view over the whole island.

THE HERALD TO MOVE UP-TOWN.

It is given out on good authority that Mr. James Gordon Bennett, of the Herald, has determined upon one of the most important moves in the history of New York Journalism. This is nothing less than the moving of the Herald from the corner of Broadway and Ann streets to Broadway and 55th streets, which is also the junction of Sixth Avenue.

The new property, which comprises a small block now covered by an old armory, has been leased for a term of 99 years, and a new building will be erected worthy of the occasion.

It was well known that the Herald had been looking for an up-town sight for a long time, but no one thought it would venture as far as 55th street, for the reason that all the big papers and their necessary accompaniments, such as the Post Office, are located so much farther down town. However, as Mr. Bennett usually edits his paper by cable, while he himself is in Europe, or elsewhere, and also runs paper in London and one in Paris, perhaps he can manage the Herald as far up-town as 55th street.

MISS H. gave a little account of the work in a kindergarten prepared for the 4th of July, showing how such invaluable lessons of patriotism are instilled in the very young; how the children when led to think and talk about the glorious 4th, found that it meant more than firecrackers and picnics, and how even the three and four year-olds love the stars and stripes knowingly. All historical festivals, are thus lived and experienced in the kindergarten. Then there is training in size, number, form, pure color, position, direction, materials and all the essential properties of matter. The purpose of this early training is not to burden the child mind with a number of miscellaneous facts, but to lead him to make his own conclusions by giving him the typical forms and ideas to handle and learn about. He is given a basis by which to distinguish all the manifold and bewildering experiences as well as things about him and so grow to that natural degree of happiness and heartiness which make good citizens and good parents.
