IS PORTLAND ALL OF OREGON?

Portland must be happy now. She has nearly all the federal offices in the state and the two United States senators besides. Earhart, collector of customs; Barin, United States marshal; Col. Weidner, collector of internal revenue; Shurtlett, Inspector; Ward, appraiser; Mays, U. S. district attorney; Sol Hirsch, minister to Turkey; all the deputies of collectors of the internal revenue; all the inspectors of hulls and boilers; all the subordinates of the custom house, with few exceptions; all the postal agents, and nearly all the important Federal officers in the state are from Portland, and it was found necessary, it seems, to go six hundred miles to Polk county, very near Portland, to find a register for the Lake View land office. It appears that very few in Southern and Southeastern Oregon could be found capable of filling any of the federal offices; and for state offices no one but a Portlander stands any show in a convention.

We can see no just reason why Portland must gobble up all the Federal offices.—Roseburg Plaindealer.

The question asked by the Plaindealer is worthy of our best effort to answer. The rural press sometimes understands the vast amount of work done by the Portland politicians. Do they not look after the details of primaries and expend thousands of dollars prior to conventions in order to ascertain by this costly process which ward striker shall head the delegation? How could the expenses of costly struggles to determine who shall be the boss of Multnomah county ever be defrayed anywhere but in Portland? And does not the party all over the state get the benefit of the contests where money flows like water in the inextinguishable bonfire of the state by re-electing Penoyer? Frequently it is necessary to pack a whole state convention, and who but the Portland patriots have to shell out to accomplish that? There is no telling in what manner the rural regions would handpick themselves and nominate headstrong men for office who would do just as the people wanted them to, did not the superior wisdom of Portland brains step in and save the day. All this kind, beneficent sagacity comes high and Portland has a monopoly of it.

When all the expenses of the primaries and conventions are met, Portland has to shell out the bootleg to carry out the election. How could the people ever cast their votes intelligently, were not their minds made clear on the vital issues by means of Portland bootleg? This great expense met, Portland patriots have to resume the responsibility of conducting the legislature and seeing that only proper bills pass. It is always necessary to lobby a few bills through, that will ultimately become state issues, to have the whole state torn up over, like the Portland water bonds, and all the expense of that is cheerfully met at the great center of Oregon's existence. Then there is the selection of a proper United Senator to be looked after, extra editions of the Oregonian has to be got out and paid for. There is no end to the expenditures that the Portland politicians have to meet, to say nothing of the grave responsibility. The country press must not be unreasonable.

AT THE SEA SIDE.

Hundreds of Oregon people are by this time indulging in this invigorating luxury. Thousands more should be; not over ten per cent. of those who go to the seaside ever go into the surf. They take the advice of the mythical mother interrogated by her not less mythical daughter in childhood rhyme:

"Mother, may I go down to swim?"
"Yes, my darling daughter;
Hang your clothes on a lucky limb
But don't go near the water."

They leave a good many of their fashionable clothes behind. Still, the men and children alone seem to enjoy themselves in rampant freedom of the beach and surf. Women stalk about, dragging damp skirts in the sand, as tho' they were unsocial relics of a decaying race, out of whose life the higher emotions of innocent unconfined enjoyment had passed, and they dared not even sit down flat on the sand.

Surf-bathing is the most bracing, invigorating and heroic of American amusements. On the Pacific beaches the water is as cold as molten snow. The swell is violent. It throws and tumbles the bather about, pounding and beating his muscles and viscera, the inviolable message furnished by nature. In the mean time the salts and iodides get in their work on the skin and are more or less absorbed by the skin. The weak, if not too weak, are braced into strength and activity; the insomniac are given sleep; the corpulent are reduced to proportionable dimensions. Old Neptune's trident is full of magic; it is fat for the lean; anti-fat for the rotund. Get to the seaside.

COURTESY PROFOUND.

That the human intellect under the most favorable conditions is a cumulative development, is easily instanced in the case of Gladstone. His command of language and resources of expression are wonderful, even in his extreme old age. A novel and yet felicitous mode of conveying a compliment was that employed the other day by the ex-premier in replying to some compliments from friends in this country, transmitted and repeated to him by means of the graphophone.

He said he had been accustomed to receiving notes of kindness from America that his vocabulary of thought was exhausted. In any man but Gladstone this were almost insufferable egotism; from him it is an expression of sentiment based on fact, linking in words of gold the community of interest felt on both sides of the Atlantic in a cause which is even greater than the character of the man.

He went on to say in the course of the same speech that if there was anything that could lead him to question the soundness of America, and make him believe that Americans were liable to be misled from the light understanding of human nature, it would be the exceeding warmth with which they are always pleased to frame their views of his character.

A nobler instance of profound courtesy is not on record. The friendship of America costs Gladstone deeply. But in this case his report must discern even his harshest tory critics.

RECIPROCITY VS. FREE SUGAR.

Mr. Blaine comes vehemently to the rescue when the sugar trust is in danger. He had forgotten all about reciprocity for a number of years, until the free sugar bill passed the house, and the people are in danger of getting untaxed an article of necessity, which under nearly thirty years of protection could not be built up into a national industry. If tea and coffee had remained under a high tariff, and none produced in this country, no doubt there would be tea and coffee trusts and combines mauling the people, and a proposal to put them on the free list would be met by some disinterested gentleman with a far-away reciprocity scheme to save the combine. Mr. Blaine's declaration about trusts a few years ago has not been forgotten and his suddenly awakened activity in the sugar bill is inopportune, to say the least. Give the people a free sugar bill.

So long as nineteen-twentieths of our sugar supply is imported, this country will have no protection from the sugar trust. Her feeble sugar industry at home operates as no sufficient check upon the manipulation by capitalists at the few ports of entry of all incoming cargoes. Reciprocity with the Hawaiian Islands has never hurt the sugar trust and all the reciprocity with other sugar countries proposed by Mr. Blaine would not disturb its operations a pennyworth. Only the great capitalists at a few great ports of entry can take advantage of sugar cargoes, under reciprocity, because under reciprocity there will be still enough government interference to allow the trust to flourish. Instead of reciprocity forcing the sugar producing countries to buy American products, it would only force this country to take the sugar at second hands through British brokers. Reciprocity as proposed in this instance is a fraud. It is a big word, surrounded by a cloud of contingencies, conjured up at this time to save the doomed sugar trust.

Whisky Business in Dallas.

Dallas Itemizer: The proprietors and the clerks of the three Dallas saloons are personally as quiet and orderly as anybody, but sometimes, and especially at night, they allow men full of mean liquor to become so boisterous within their doors as to greatly disturb citizens living not far away. Said disturbances are becoming more frequent and may soon be unbearable. Here is one of the conditions under which every license exists: A $500 bond to keep a quiet and orderly house, and neither allow nor permit any unlawful gambling in or about his premises. Will either of the proprietors pretend to deny that there is any gambling about his saloon? Some persons who frequently visit the saloons say that they often see minors inside of them which is in direct violation of their licenses. Another requirement of the city ordinance under which they exist is that they shall remain closed during the entire sabbath day. Last Sunday the front doors may have been locked, but the back doors were open and many men going in and out during the day. The penalty for a first violation of any saloon ordinance is a fine of $25, and a second conviction will work a forfeiture of license. Unless the saloon keepers proceed to comply with the requirements of the law they will be very apt to get into serious trouble. Everybody knows that the saloons have not remained closed on Sunday, and it will not be a difficult matter to prove it.

Luxury and Healthfulness of Bathing.

A gentleman in this city remarked to us the other day that he took an all over bath every morning and found it not only exceedingly healthful but a real luxury. If every man, woman and child in the country would form a fixed habit of bathing all over once or twice a week, it would decrease doctor's bills nearly one half and add fully as much to the comfort of living. So one should think of putting up a dwelling without a bath room. Allowing the pores of the skin to remain clogged up is a fruitful source of disease. Perhaps a majority of all our citizens do not bathe frequently enough, because it is inconvenient. It will pay to make it convenient and change your habits.—Ex.

A Cure for Sick Headache.

This distressing complaint is due to an inactive or sluggish liver or constipated bowels which congests the stomach and disturbs the nervous system causing dizziness and an oppressive dull pain in the head, often more severe on a particular day or night. One of the remedies is Laxative Pills with the most delicate and pleasant taste. It cures the liver and stomach and regulates the bowels. If taken three or four times a day, it will cure the headache. It is a sure cure and is sold by all druggists.

THE SILVER DILEMMA.

It seems the United States has not yet seen the worst results of silver demonetization, and the silver bill recently passed is only bringing out in stronger light the evils of a single gold standard and a fixed ratio between the two metals. Ever since the passage of the silver bill silver has advanced in value. The indications are that it will go so high as to be unavailable for coinage under the present bill, and it will be silver that will be leaving the country, instead of gold. There can be little doubt that the advance of silver will carry wheat up with it, when it is remembered that America's greatest wheat competitors have taken pay for their crops in American silver at a depreciation of nearly one-half its bullion value, and besides getting cheap wheat, England has made a profit of nearly 50 per cent. on her silver coinage. This government has not acted too soon in protecting the people's interest by protecting its silver product against depreciation as well as speculation. The boom is on in silver, and it is hard to tell where it will stop.

CAPITAL JOURNAL JOTS

The drummers call Grant's Pass "Grass Pants."

Nothing can excel the present delightful weather of the Willamette valley.

Gentle reader, if you want anything you don't see in the columns of the JOURNAL, ask for it.

A monster panther was killed on Cherry creek, Klamath county, last week. He measured nine feet from tip to tip.

In writing for the press the average editor must needs remember that an advertisement is more valuable than an idea.

Disliking Ben Harrison and being disrespectful to the President of the United States are two different things entirely.

Peter Jackson's last words on leaving the United States were, that he was still hopeful of getting a match with Sullivan. Sullivan is not so hopeful.

WEBSTER

ANCIENT AND MODERN
DON'T BE DUPED.

A so-called "Webster's Unabridged Dictionary" is being offered to the public at a very low price. The body of the book, from A to Z, is a cheap reprint, page for page, of the edition of 1847, which was in its day a valuable book, but in the progress of language for over forty years, has been completely superseded. It is now reproduced, broken type, errors and all, by a photographic process, is printed on cheap paper and flimsily bound. It is advertised to be the substantial equivalent of "an eight to twelve dollar book," while in fact it is a literal copy of a book which in its day was regarded for about $5.00, and that book was much superior in paper, print, and binding to this imitation, and was then the best Dictionary of the time instead of an antiquated one. A brief comparison, page for page, between the reprint and the latest and enlarged edition will show the great superiority of the latter. No honorable dealer will allow the buyer of such to suppose that he is getting the Webster which to-day is accepted as the standard and the best.

There are several of these reprints, differing in minor particulars, but, don't be duped, the body of each is a literal copy of the 1847 edition.

WHAT THE PAPERS SAY OF IT.

The New York Times says: "Only those who are ignorant of the great advances that have been made in dictionaries are likely to buy this reprint at any price."

The American Bookeller of New York says:

"The chronologies are utterly misleading, and naturally so; for when the Webster of 1847 was issued, Comparative Philology was in its cradle. The definitions are imperfect, requiring considerable rearrangement and additions. The vocabulary is defective, some of the commonest words of to-day, especially scientific terms, for which a dictionary it most often consulted, being entirely absent. In not one of these three prime requisites of a dictionary is the Webster reprint a trustworthy guide, or, rather it is a misleading one. This 'reprint' is not intended for intelligent men. It is made especially to be foisted by all the arts of the book canvasser on those who have been precluded from a knowledge of what developments lexicography has undergone during the last forty-two years. This is the crucial feature of this money-making enterprise."

The Buffalo Christian Advocate says: "Don't be duped. Thousands are, or are likely to be, by the flashy, fraudulent advertisements of The Original Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, which is offered for three or four dollars.  If any of our readers wish to invest in a purchase which they will be likely afterward to regret, they will do so after being duly notified of this."

The Journal of Education, Boston, says: "Teachers cannot be too careful not to be imposed on, since the very things which make a dictionary valuable in school are wanting in this cheap reprint. Any high school dictionary which can be purchased for a dollar and fifty cents is worth more for school use than this."

Many other prominent journals speak in about the same terms and legitimate publishers write us in strong condemnation of this attempt to foist an obsolete book on the public.

The latest and the best, which bears our imprint on the title page, has over 2000 pages, with illustrations on almost every page.
