STILL THAT BRIDGE STANDS STILL

Engineer Lederle Not Coming—New Theory Advanced to Meet the Existing Emergency. Mr. J. H. Albert received a dispatch last evening from Engineer Lederle, who is in charge of the Vancouver and the Lewis river bridge, saying that the chief engineer of the railroad company was expected and he could not possibly leave to come here at this time, as he had arranged with Mr. Albert to do.

The disappointment of Mr. Lederle's inability to come leaves everything in statu quo, and the authorities and contractors are comparing notes on what is best to do. If anything has been decided upon there is no disposition to give it to the public, but there probably has not been.

CUT OFF THE PIERS. Commissioner Grimm, of this county advances a theory to meet the difficulty and Judge Stouffer, of Polk, agrees with him. It is this: He says the foundation of the pier is overloaded and the only feasible thing to do now is to lighten the weight. This he would accomplish by cutting off the pier at high water line or several feet below it and put up cylinders the balance of the required height. He believes this would make a safe and lasting bridge, and bases his opinion largely upon the experience of the county with the Santiam bridges at Stayton and Mehama last winter.

Another feature of this move which he urges is that this 500 tons of cement cut off could be used as rip-rap, and while it would be costly material, it would be much better than sand, as it will be in its present condition. He says he presented this plan to Contractor Hoffman and that gentleman and his engineer thought it wise and feasible.

COMPLAINING OF DISCIPLINE. A Modest Suggestion in Relation to the Health and Comfort of Children. A mild complaint has been entered with the JOURNAL by a highly respected parent of children attending the East school to the effect that the discipline exercised in certain cases is too oppressive for the little folks.

Some of them attempted to seek shelter on the steps of the school house under the portico, but the teacher present would not allow it—said it was against the rules; that those steps must not be soiled, etc. This theory may be all good enough, but it is doubtful if there is a private house in the city wherein a lot of dripping children would be refused shelter from the rain, and the policy of keeping them out in the down-pour for the sake of keeping the school house steps from getting soiled is to say the least questionable.

Those who have come to the JOURNAL with these complaints are not kickers or grumblers; they are friends of the schools and the teachers; they recognize the benefits of discipline and order, but they do think these difficulties might be remedied. They think plain resting benches might be provided in the basement and when marching time came the pupils of each room, or of a series of rooms, could stand up and form as their time came, thus avoiding the long standing in one position without retarding the work or injuring the order.

Education without health is of little value and the latter should be guarded as well as the former. Call at Sherman W. Thompson & Co's jewelry store and see the most complete line of solid silver ware ever brought to the city. Also a complete line of silver and gold watches of all grades.

Lamps with chimney and burner, only 25 cents at Crisman's 5 and 10 cent store.
