LUCK IN COPPER BOLTS.

A Chance Discovery Lays the Foundation of a Stevedore's Fortune. The fortunes of some men have their foundation in very queer incidents. Elmer A. Barton, of Duluth, Minn., says the Chi-cago Herald, is comparatively a wealthy man, while fifteen years ago be was a day laborer getting a job whenever he could unloading vessels, or any thing, in fact, he could find, but work around the docks was what he most looked after, and this fact was indirectly the cause of his streak of luck. Lying outside the harbor of Duluth was the nearly submerged hull of a vessel. No one appeared to know how long it had been there, but "the wreck," as it was called, was considered one of the features of the place. The boys used it as a swimming station, and it was a proud day for many a Duluth toy when he could say he had been able to reach "the wreck." This was another link in the chain of Barton's luck. He had a son who, with the other boys, made daily excursions through the summer out to the old hulk, and one day this son brought back with him one of the bolts and a piece of wood that had become loosened. By chance the father saw the bolt, and he asked the boy some questions him. After this excursion, Mr. Barton began making inquiries about the old boat, but could get no information as to when she ar rived there, or when she was sunk, or where she came from. He also managed to get permission from the authorities to re move it, the permission being the more readily given as it was in the way of some proposed harbor improvements. Mr. Bar ton began his work quietly-making no stir about it. He managed, by the aid of long saws, long-handled axes and hooks, to de tach piece after piece and get it ashore piling it up in the yard that surrounded his cabin. It took him nearly the entire year of 1874 to do this work, but it proved a profitable job. That bolt the boy had brought home was solid copper, and it opened the father's eyes to the possibilities. His investigation showed him that all the bolts in sight were of the same metal, and when he had completed his labor he had secure many hundreds of pounds in weight of valuable copper. Besides this, he had in the cords of wood piled up on his lot a value that proved a great surprise to him. The vessel had evidently been of foreign build, for she was composed of a number of different and valuable woods, the bulk of it being teak, a specie of oak, but there were large quantities of mahogany, some rosewood and a little ebony. Altogether it was a good year's work. He found ready market for his copper bolts, and the wood going off piece by piece brought him a nice little sum. t was this money that gave him his start in

Their Work by No Means as Pleasant as

Some Might Think. If there is any harder work than the champagne pushers have had to do in this city during the last fortnight, I can not comprehend what it can be, writes the New York correspondent of the Providence (R. I.) Journal. It is bestial work as well as difficult. As one great champagne importer put it in talking on the subject, the very charm and merit of champagne is supposed to lie in the fact that the fluid has not much "drunk" in it, the proportion of alcohol being only slightly greater than that in lager beer; yet these pushers advertise it by getting aruns on it every night. It is said for this wine that the worst effects are felt by men who drink spirits; that those who drink nothing but champagne are seldom intoxicated by it. The pushers have mann's theatre is found not to be | 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school | to drink spirits because their systems need bracing after each of their professional bouts in the bar-rooms.
