THE BRIDGE TROUBLE OPEN.

The county commissioners' court of the joint session of the two counties interested in the bridge, concluded their work late Tuesday afternoon. The bridge was accepted, and the contractors declared it open to the public late that afternoon. Grondahl's report shows the grand total of expenditures on the bridge to be $84,402.90, but in the credits are shown deduction for $1,033 for pile protection, that the contract price called for, and for material not used, which leaves the actual cost of the bridge at $83,369.90. Of this, Salem paid $20,000.00, and the agreement was that Marion and Polk counties should share equally the remainder of the costs. This was understood at the time of letting the contract would amount to only $20,000.00 to each county. Marion county has honored the bills of the contractors and has drawn warrants for her share of the bridge. Polk county hesitates to pay more than the $20,000.00, and what will be the outcome cannot yet be told. Since the bridge has been built virtually without any contract, except that the builders could do as they pleased at the counties' expense, there is no way out of the matter other than for the counties to pay for their mistakes and the betrayed confidence they put in the engineers and contractors.

APPREHENDED.—The Journal

is under obligations to Messrs. Quick & Stoddard, of the Tillamook Western Watchtower, for a complete account of the wreck of the ill-fated ship Strain, which went ashore on the west coast of Tillamook county, near Cape Lookout. Owing to the letter being delayed, which contained the account, the JOURNAL was not able to use it, but extends thanks to the Watchtower for the same for its kindness to the newspaper fraternity.
