A WORD ABOUT BOYS.

The Need of Good and Thorough Business or Professional Training.
In the existing state of society, with keen competition in every department of business, and scores of well-equipped men ready to suap up every vacant position that is worth any thing, it is a crime for parents to turn their boys loose upon the world without a trade or a profession. The gain-ing of an honorable livelihood is difficult of the Mongolians were seriously enough with the best preparation, but to hurt. send a boy out from the paternal roof with nothing but his hands to depend upon is to consign him to a life of toil, if not of crime. There are exceptions, but they are few. Greatness of intellect and moral rectitude sufficient to overcome natural obstacles are so rare as to be scarcely recognized witen they appear. Men like Henry Clay, Abraham Lincoln and Henry Wilson, all poor boys who worked their way from the lowest to the highest positions in life, can be counted on one's fingers without going over himself and his creditors Brown them twice. One of the oldest and most capable busi-

I would consider it a crime against society to do so. What chance has a boy got to hold his own in the fierce struggle for existence without skill of some kind! | great convenience to Athena and None stall. The most he can hope for is a has done good. lowly station and a career of drudgery at manual labor of the roughest kind. He may start out with high hopes and noble puradopted a joint resolution declaring poses, but when he comes in contact actual business affairs he will soon find that they are too com-plicated and precise for his crude ideas and methods. The result can not be doubt ful. He will drift from post to piliar and finally bring up at the bottom of the ladder, where he will remain. He has been tried and found wanting. This is not his fault; he may have done the best he could; but it all comes from his parents neglecting to give him that training of brain and nand lifested. which is so necessary to success in this age of keen wits and sharp competition. "Business methods have changed wonderfully since I was a boy. Then it was conducted, for the most part, in a crude, haphazard sort of manner. Nearly every thing was on a small scale, requiring no particular training or experience. Some people have the notion that it is the same now, but they are sadly mistaken. Men who were successful in business life forty or fifty years ago could hardly fill a clerkship now. Business has been reduced to a science, and its manifold complications are as hard to understand as any other branch of knowledge. A good business man in these days is competent to fill any position, public or private. More than one President has called men from the store or factory to assist in carrying on the Government. do not care how or where a boy is trained,

There is no excuse for neglect in this matter. The country is full of public schools where a good education can be obness can be learned by the proper application. Therefore, I say there is no excuse for parents allowing their boys to go forth into the world and tie themselves down to a smashed in the front of four house . ballot for senator was without re- life of drudgery, which they must do if they have neither trained minds nor skilled hands. The dangerous classes of society are composed of men who, when boys, left home without knowing how to do some thing. Having no skill at any thing, they seldom find employment, and then only at the roughest and least remunerative work. The result is that they first become dissipated and then criminal. This picture is not overdrawn, it is borne out by statistics, and a matter of almost universal experience and observation. I have known many naturally bright boys who, from this cause, have grown up to be drones in society. They failed in competition with men better equipped than themselves, became discouraged, and settled down in poverty

"These are facts which parents should take home and seriously ponder.
