HOUSE RESOLUTION No. 32.

By Minto, reciting that appropriation bills now aggregated more than all the revenue of the state, and whereas world's fair, river improvements and other extraordinary expenses, therefore that all wagon road bills be scaled down about one-half of amounts now asked, that law for stenographic court reporters, state board of horticulture, agricultural college and other similar measures be repealed. Judge of this district had never appointed a reporter, and litigants should pay for reporters if they wanted them. The agricultural college was the best endowed school in Oregon. It needed no state aid and would no doubt be favorably reported upon by the committee. Rep. Hall moved that all relating to stenographic reporters be struck out, as this matter was under consideration of judiciary committee. Rep. Minto opposed as an unnecessary expense costing more than Judges.

THE RESOLUTION WAS ORDERED PRINTED.

AN UNWILLING COMPANY.

The Oregon Pacific is Worrying the New Steamboat Association.

Evening Telegram, Jan. 21st, '91: The recently-organized Columbia River Steamboat Association is getting upon its feet in pretty good shape, but a thorn is growing in its flank in the refusal of the Oregon Pacific Railroad Company to enter the compact. One of the members of the organization made that known to a Telegram reporter and in reply to the question of numerical strength, said the association controls about fifty steamboats and barges.

"Will the association cause an advance in passenger and freight rates?" the reporter asked.

"Yes, it will, most assuredly," was the response.

"About what figures will the advance assume," was the next query.

"Not over 20 per cent. I think that will be about the conclusion. In raising rates we will make more money, and consequently interest in steam-boating will be revived. That means that more and better steamboats will be constructed, and the service will be so strengthened as to accommodate the public more generously than ever before."

Some people think, said the reporter, that this steamboat association amounts to nearly, or quite, the same thing as a 'trust.' Are you not of the same opinion?

"Well," replied the steamboat man, "when the matter is looked at from the public point of view, I guess some people are about correct in their ideas."

A BIG CARGO.—The British ship Scottish Gargo finished loading at Astoria Saturday and is ready for sea. She has on board a trifle over 3100 tons of wheat, an amount that seems enormous when a comparatively small portion of the ship is above water. To look at the deck of the vessel, even an experienced man would hardly believe that over six million pounds of wheat was stowed away beneath the decks, and a man not acquainted with shipping would have grave doubts as to the truth of such a statement. She carries one of the heaviest cargoes ever shipped to a foreign port from Astoria.

THE COMING FAIR.—We are more than gratified at the interest evidenced by the citizens of Salem in the coming G. A. R. fair. Never a dissenting voice, but a hearty "success to you," are the words which greet those who are working hard to give the public an entertainment worthy of patronage. The second regiment band is going to surprise itself and the people. Such music as will be heard during the week of the fair will astonish, and delight everybody. All new music, ordered especially for the occasion. Season tickets are now out for sale at $1.00 each, which admits you afternoon and evening during the week. Buy one.

A BETTER SYSTEM.—The Salem gas light company are having new and larger pipes put in on State street. The old pipes were only 1 1/2 inches in diameter while the new pipes are four inches. This change will have a good effect on the lighting of many of the larger buildings that use gas for an illuminating material.
