THE FUNERAL CORTEGE.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 20.—The Sherman funeral train arrived here this morning. It met with an ovation all along the line. The train ran into an open switch at Mansfield, but was only delayed five minutes. But for the fact that the train was running slowly, a collision would have occurred.

WHEN THE TRAIN ARRIVED IN THIS CITY, BELLS TOLLED AND MINUTE GUNS FIRED, AND FLAGS DROOPEL IN THE CITY AT HALF MAST. AT THE DEPOT THERE WAS A LARGE CROWD. THE DEPARTURE FROM PITTSBURG WAS AT 7:10.

REAR'S SNOW STORM.

FAITH CURE CRAZE.

It has spread into the churches and schools, and children are overcome with trances and sing "faith cure" hymns during school hours. Rev. Mr. Auxier, the faith cure evangelist, claims he has had a revelation from God. There were numerous persons lying in a trance at a public meeting of the faith cure. A public meeting of the faith cure was held to stop this excitement and such matters down.

WON'T BE RECONSTRUCTED.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 20.—With the announcement of the death of Gen. Sherman, the Charlotte, Daily News printed the following editorial: "The south has no cause for lamentation, no tears over the death of William Tecumseh Sherman. He was her fiercest, most cruel despoiler and most unrelenting enemy. The tie that binds her memories to the saddest events of all her history is thus loosened by the hand of death. The south forgives, but can never forget. He passed to his final reckoning and we war not with the dead. Gen. Sherman was a great man, though he achieved his greatness through the most atrocious means and by the most despicable methods. When Atlanta was shelled and Columbia was burned and sacked, the good people of the north one and all stood aghast and cried mercy for the defenseless women and children of the south. It was Sherman alone who hissed on the dogs of war. This is a leaf in the memory of that great conflict which no time nor generation can efface. May that peace which he refused to the minds and hearts of the people of this fair land be to his ashes."

PARAGRAPHS.

KILL S. B. NO. 105.

The House Should Reconsider and Kill an Obnoxious Labor Bill.

The present labor law in Oregon is considered a blue law by all the labor organizations. But senate bill No. 105 passed by the house this morning makes it bluer still. It is a bill, as Representative Jennings well said, to kill every labor organization in Oregon and render any action by those bodies to secure redress of their grievances impossible. If this bill is not reconsidered by the house, every democrat and republican who voted for it will find his political path in future strewn with the prickliest thorns he ever trod upon. Representative Thompson has moved a reconsideration. He is a democrat, but other democrats will very likely oppose reconsideration, as they desire the responsibility to rest upon the republican majority. No politics should enter into this matter, but the bill should be killed upon its own demerits. The tendency of labor organizations at the present time is away from violence and towards moral persuasion and intelligent influences. The house should further discuss this bill and defeat it. When leading and far-seeing republicans like Reps. Minto, Paquet and Geer speak and vote against such a bill, other republicans can afford to pause and consider the wishes of every labor union in Oregon that it be not passed. These men are voters. They express their sentiments at the polls. They employ no lobby to do their work. They work on election day and abide the consequences. They are intelligent mechanics, law-abiding citizens and support law and order. They have as good a right to organize as capital has, and are battling to better the conditions of laboring classes as best they know to do. They believe the legislature should do its work and not a third house, and the only way in which they express their objections is through printed matter. This bill is a blow at this freedom of expression and should be killed on that principle alone.

Generals Who Never Lost a Battle.

Colonel Owings, of Olympia, is in error when he says that General Sherman never lost a battle. The only great modern general that never lost a battle were Cromwell and Marlborough. With these exceptions all the great captains, from Turenne down to Grant have lost battles. Sherman was beaten with a loss of 2,000 men at Chickasaw Bluffs, which he assaulted Decem-ber 29, 1862. He was badly repulsed at Kennesaw Mountain, June 27, 1864, where the attacking force lost 3000 killed and wounded within an hour. He certainly was badly beaten at Shiloh the first day, where he was in full command of the whole field from daylight and until Grant's arrival at the front about four hours after the battle began. Sherman, who posted the troops, commanded the front line and the whole army, and suffered himself to be surprised in the absence of Grant, must share with him the responsibility for our defeat at Shiloh the first day. The victory the second day was won by Buell, whose troops did the important work under his own eye and orders.

STATE NOTES.

The cattle interests of this city are constantly growing in importance. Mr. Saltmarsh ships cattle of all kinds throughout the northwest, and the beef and mutton of The Dalles and vicinity have an enviable reputation all over the coast.

Gen. Sherman visited Oregon in 1853, and received a cordial welcome from our citizens.

W. N. Sanders, an old pioneer and Indian war veteran, living at Grant's Pass, on Wednesday tried to shoot his wife, but failing in this, fatally shot himself. He had been married but eight months and was 60 years old. Matrimony was evidently too great a burden.

The Baker City Democrat of Wednesday says: There was a heavy snow fall yesterday morning and it was general throughout the valley. In the mountains the precipitation was much heavier and added materially to the great depth already attained. There is more snow in the mountains at present than there has been for several years.

Pendleton small boys, says the East Oregonian, have devised a new plan of amusement. They wrap themselves in guay sacks, and thus protected, slide down the roof of a house onto a shed, and from that tumble to the ground at the imminent risk of their lives.

There are several cases of diphtheria at Warrens, Umatilla county. A case of books, which was packed up twelve years ago in the household, where there were several cases of diphtheria at the time, was
