Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

FROM MONMOUTH.

Born—Tuesday, Mar. 31st, to Prof. and Mrs. Dunn, a daughter.

Prof. Powell went to Albany last week to attend the Linn county teachers' institute which was held at that place.

The members of the Athletic association gave an entertainment at Independence, Saturday evening, the 4th. The proceeds were very satisfactory.

The O. S. N. S. cadets company A, have received rifles. Capt. Baily is laboring diligently to teach them the manual of arms.

Several business rooms are being fitted up at the present. One is for a harness shop and another will be used as a paint shop.

Mr. E. E. Edmonds, teacher of penmanship, also a member of the senior class of the Normal, read a very beneficial paper in the chapel several mornings ago. Subject, "How to Teach Writing in the Public Schools." The subject was well handled and presented in a practical way.

A meeting of the citizens was called to arrange to pay the indebtness of the Normal by June 1st Results have been very satisfactory and the debt will be paid before that time. The school will then be turned over to the state.

NOT YET FOUND.—The body of the unfortunate pioneer, Samuel Colver, who lost his life in Southern Oregon, had not been found at last accounts, although there can be no doubt that he was exhausted and perished not very far from where his horse was found dead in the treacherous pot-hole near the lake. Colver's leg was broken, and he was only able to walk with the assistance of crutches, and there is small hope of his being able to escape from such a situation, although for a time his friends entertained the idea that the indomitable energy that characterized his earlier years might have carried him safely through. "Uncle Sam" Colver has suffered a similar fate to Col. Nesmith and Capt. Aukney. The three were prominent men in pioneer days, and men with ability, yet in their old days became feeble in mind.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankiad are almost unlimited, and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring-time or, in fact, at any time, and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

NOTICE OF CHANGE.

The blacksmith firm of Holm & Frederick, corner of Commercial and Chemeketa streets, have sold out their business to Geo. D. Sprague and Wm. Kilgers, who will hereafter conduct the business. These men have recently come from Iowa and will be found excellent tradesmen in every respect. The undersigned has bought all the accounts due the old firm and will pay all debts of the same. A Michigan Central Railroad Employe Wins His Case, after Seven Years Contest.

While employed as agent of the Michigan Central Railroad Company, at Augusta, Mich., my kidneys became diseased, and from an impoverished and impure state of the blood, my general health was entirely undermined. I consulted the leading physicians of this city and Ann Arbor, and all pronounced my case Bright's disease. In October last, I began taking Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, and am to-day a well man. It affords me pleasure to render suffering humanity any good that I can, and I wish to say that it is the greatest blood, kidney and liver medicine in the world.

SACRED MONKEYS OF INDIA.

They Have Things All Their Own Way and Cut Up Some Queer Capers.

An English gentleman who has lived many years in India tells some queer stories about the sacred monkeys that are a great nuisance in some parts of that country. No one is allowed to molest them. They run about the streets, help themselves to whatever they please at the shops, rob orchards and gardens and play havoc generally. To thrash them is regarded as a misdemeanor, and to shoot a monkey might cause a second mutiny.

The gentleman had a garden where grew delicious fruits. The sacred monkeys easily scaled the walls and helped themselves. They were not content with simply eating, but amused themselves with throwing half munched fruit at each other. To shoot these pests was out of the question, and to hit them with stones was impossible, as they easily dodged any missile that might be thrown at them. An idea struck the Englishman one day, and he at once proceeded to carry it into effect, with great success.

He got a large basket of the largest potatoes that were to be found and had them boiled. When they were scalding hot he had basket and potatoes placed under one of the trees. The monkeys were watching these movements from the trees. Presently every monkey seized a hot potato, and then followed the most unearthly screeches and chatterings. A monkey will never let go any article of food that he once gets hold of, even if he has to die, and these monkeys, true to their nature, would not drop the hot potatoes.

They held them in one hand and then in the other, and then they would take a bite and scald their mouths, and roll in the dust, writhing with pain, but never letting the potatoes once out of their grasp. They ate up the potatoes, and then disappeared over the walls and never returned.

The Englishman once witnessed a pathetic as well as heroic scene in one of the city squares, in which the sacred monkeys were the actors. He saw a number of monkeys seated and standing in a large circle, and a female monkey hugging and wailing over the dead body of her baby, that had just been killed by a cobra's bite. The other females were trying to console her by caresses, while the males appeared to be in earnest consultation among themselves. In the center of the circle was the large cobra that had inflicted the fatal bite, coiled and with head erect, watching the enemies by whom he was surrounded.

Suddenly a young and athletic male monkey sprang into the arena. He carefully approached the cobra, which prepared itself to strike. The monkey made a few passes, and just as the snake was about to dart its head he sprang to one side, and then over the cobra. This was repeated so often and with such astounding rapidity that the cobra became bewildered, when the monkey seized the snake by the neck and proceeded to crush its head to a jelly by rubbing it on the ground with all its might. The snake tried to free itself by coiling around the monkey's neck; but in vain; its struggles became weaker and weaker until life was extinct. When the snake's head had been reduced to a shapeless mass the simian hero dropped the cobra and executed a series of hops and somersaults.

Up to that moment the other monkeys had maintained the most anxious silence, watching every movement of the combatants with eager interest. The snake's death, however, was the signal for the most joyous chatterings and gambols. They took hold of the conqueror of the snake, patted him on the head, scratched his back, danced around him and gave every manifestation of their great appreciation of his valorous achievement. The poor mother carried about her dead babe for two days longer.—Chicago Tribune.

The Care of Books.

Children should early be taught care of a book. A very little child can understand that a book must not be thrown on the floor or torn or bent backward or maltreated in the fifty small ways in which children are permitted to abuse books. Such habits in children are due quite as much to ignorance as carelessness on the part of parents. Those who have no interest or affection for books themselves are not likely to expect it from their children. A reverence for books is part of the love one bears them, and people who have been brought up in an atmosphere of books, or who spend much time in reading or study, will naturally handle a book respectfully themselves, and insist that their children shall do likewise.

There is much negligence shown in the matter of returning borrowed books, and this often by persons of whom one would expect better things. For months after a book is read it is allowed to lie about the house, and no especial effort is made to return it to its owner. That a book should be returned as soon as read, just as particularly as one would return a tool after using it or a garment after wearing it, would appear to go without saying. Yet it is not always the case.

And it is right to insist that our children shall be as exact in this respect; that they shall, after borrowing a book, cover it neatly if it be a nicely bound one, treat it carefully while in their possession and return it promptly when finished. This is not only simple justice to the owner, but such teaching will go far toward making a child particular about the property of others.—Harper's Bazar.

For Service Rifles.

An ingenious invention has recently appeared for enabling shooting practice to be made with service rifles in many cases where no range exists, and where it is only possible to fire with some device of this kind. An ordinary cartridge case is employed to hold a miniature cartridge and bullet in its mouth, which together occupy the position of the service bullet, the part occupied by the service charge being filled up by a chamber containing a piston, which is struck by the regular breech block piston on firing, and so carries its blow to the miniature cartridge. Cartridges with different charges are made for ranges from 25 to 300 yards.—New York Times.

The Real Question.

In all the discussion that has arisen about the proposed shortening of the college course, the advocates of either side have limited themselves to a single point at issue: Will the student be able to learn enough in three years to qualify him for the duties of life? This is all very well, but there are other questions more important. Will three years be sufficient to make a football player of a man—an oarsman, a crack pitcher, catcher or first baseman? The fact that all this side of the question has been entirely overlooked shows how set and narrow is the mind of the average educator of today.—Illustrated American.

The equivalent, in English money, of $2,500 was once offered by an old lady in London for the return of a favorite cat which had strayed or been stolen. People called her a "crank," and perhaps she was. It is unfortunate that one of the gentler sex should ever gain this title, yet many do. It is however, frequently not their fault. Often functional derangements will apparently change a woman's entire nature. Don't blame such sufferers if they are "cranky," but tell them to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is an infallible remedy for "female weaknesses."

"Favorite Prescription" has cured thousands of poor, bed-ridden suffering women of "female weakness," painful irregularities, ulcerations, organic displacements and kindred ailments too numerous to mention. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will, in every case, give satisfaction or the price ($1.00) will be refunded.
