THE FRANKLIN MINES.

SEATTLE, May 20.—A special to the Post-Intelligencer from the Franklin mines says that everything is quiet there, although the dead line, guarded by Pinkertons, is maintained. White miners are showing signs of yielding. Several families left town today, selling their shanties which were built on the company's property to the company, which puts negroes in possession at once. An increased force of negroes was put to work this morning and more will be put in tomorrow. A party of white miners went to the house of J. L. Fry, the white engineer of the hoisting engine, who refused to quit work, and assailed his wife verbally, so that she had to take refuge with her husband in the engine house. At Newcastle, the other camp of the Oregon Improvement company, feeling runs very high because a few men have stayed at work at the pumps and engines. Sheriff Woolery and his deputy left Seattle at 7 o'clock and made the run to Newcastle in quick time. When they arrived at Newcastle they boarded a special engine and ran up to Coal creek, where the mines are situated. They remained a short time and started on the return to Newcastle, going at a very slow rate of speed. Suddenly from out of the thick forests which hemmed in the road came the sharp reports of firearms. The flash of every shot was seen by those aboard, who expected to feel the thud of the leaden missiles. Sheriff Woolery thinks the number of shots fired at the train was about twenty, but others place the number at thirty. The last shot was made at the engine just as it pulled into town, where most of the miners were congregated. The shooting is said at the doors of the hoodlum element. The shooting is probably the direct result of the placing of new men at the boilers and pumps in place of those who went out at 6 o'clock. Sheriff Woolery was exasperated at the action of the men who did the shooting. He remained at Newcastle until 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when he returned to Seattle.

ANOTHER CONGRESS.

DENVER, May 20.—North, South and West sank all sectional interest at the first session of the trans-Mississippi congress, which opened here yesterday. When the convention was called to order by Mr. Fishback, chairman of the local organization, fully a thousand delegates were present. Governor Rouse on behalf of the state welcomed the delegates. Chairman Fishback deprecated the sectional bitterness, but warned the convention not to be blinded by the vital question awaiting settlement. Despite developments nine states in the New England corner of the country controlled the wealth of the people. They dominated politics and succeeded in denationalizing silver. At the afternoon session, Mayor Shakespeare, of New Orleans, made a speech in which he referred to the recent events in New Orleans, and said he thanked the people for the manner in which he was upheld in trying to do his duty as an American citizen. It is thought that ex-Governor Anthony, of Kansas, will be elected permanent chairman.

TRAIN WRECK AT TEHACHAPI.

TEHACHAPI, Cal., May 20.—An express train with two engines was wrecked three miles below here by engine 59 violating orders and running into it. Engineer Thomas was badly bruised. Several passengers also received bruises, but no one was seriously hurt. Miss Ida Schloer, of Los Angeles, was thrown against a window and her head badly cut. One Pullman porter received a damaged jaw. One of the tenders was jammed up against the boiler head, and how the engineer and fireman escaped death no one knows. All three engines are complete wrecks. The cars did not leave the track. Two other wrecks have occurred on the same spot. One of them, on the 20th of January, 1888, was a passenger train, bound north, which ran away and jumped the track, demolishing the whole train. The second was one year ago, and was the same train that ran away.

A DANGEROUS DROUGHT HAS PREVAILED IN PARTS OF OHIO AND OTHER EASTERN STATES.

A dangerous drought has prevailed in parts of Ohio and other eastern states. The water in the rivers is so low that the boats are unable to navigate. The crops are withering and the people are suffering from lack of water. The situation is very serious and it is feared that the drought will continue for some time longer.

NATIONAL UNION CONFERENCE.

CINCINNATI, May 20.—A largely attended mass meeting was held last night, the orator of the evening being Senator Pfeiffer, of Kansas. He began by saying these people before him were harbingers of a revolution that will overthrow money and re-establish the authority of the people. It is a movement not to destroy but to create; not to tear down, but to build up; not to destroy the wealth of the rich, but to restore to labor its just reward. Referring to the placard on the balcony of the hall, "Nine million mortgaged homes," Pfeiffer said it told volumes. "What shall we do with the money power? We'll raise up a power among the people, make our own money and use it. (Tremendous applause.) Take the roads! No; we'll build our own. (More applause.) We will fight with ballots and prayer, for the alliance is a great measure taking the place of churches."

Pfeiffer closed by giving the new party a great boom in these words: "Does this mean a new party? (Cries of "yes.") What else are we here for? The prophecy of the hour is that a new party is to be born here and its name is to be the national party."

Powderly addressed the meeting. Among other things he said: "The Knights of Labor will vote the principles of their organization, and when you form a party embodying such principles as have been announced here tonight you will find every Knight of Labor standing at the polls and doing his full duty."

The meeting dispersed, cheering again and again for Powderly and the Knights of Labor.

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 20.—The national conference resumed its session this morning. After the opening exercises, reports from committees on arrangements and credentials helped to kill time pending the exciting developments that many look for when the platform committee is ready to report. The credentials committee announced that any delegates representing several organizations could only cast one vote. This created quite a sensation. Total number of delegates reported was 1417. The report was unanimously adopted. A terrific uproar was suddenly caused at this point by Grover, of Wisconsin, starting a harangue in opposition to organizing a new party. Yells of "Sit down," "Put him out!" and similar shouts from the floor and gallery had no effect. The chairman pounded wildly with his hammer, and finally the Wisconsin man was hauled down by the sergeant-at-arms.

When order was restored, Mrs. Helen Gougar, of Indiana, was given an opportunity to express her sympathy with the movement, and pleaded for a prohibition plank in the convention platform. Mrs. Gougar denounced the banquet to be given tonight, declaring that the brewers were backing it.

UNITED STATES SENATOR PFEIFFER WAS INTRODUCED AS PERMANENT CHAIRMAN.

The assemblage before him, he proclaimed, was one of the most important ever convened on American soil. They had before them a power that was crushing people, not only in America, but in all the world. The money power must be deposed. There was now no such thing as stopping the avalanche.

AFRAID OF THE CHARLESTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—A Washington special to the Evening Post says: "The United States government has instructed Admiral Brown to demand the surrender of the Etata when she arrives at any port of Call in the hands of the insurgents. FRUIT GROWERS.

A Review of The Prospects and What is Necessary.

HORTICULTURAL FACTS.

A Drive on the "Garden Road", and visit to the various "truck farms" within three miles of this office, will afford considerable instruction to a person who is inclined towards horticultural studies. After passing the railroads about a half a mile, the prairie has a higher roll and the soil is evidently better for all purposes, with only the disadvantage of liability to frost. All this spring no frost has troubled vegetation on the hills bordering the Willamette, south of Salem, but frost, though not seeming to be at all severe on the prairie, has left its marks on vegetation dipping the young heads of raspberry plants and other tender vegetation, without doing much harm. On the N. N. Gilbert place now owned by Mr. John G. Wright, there is an apple orchard probably forty years old, that began to yield about 1855 when three years old, 100 trees as Mr. Gilbert then said gave him that year a return of $600. That was a time when the earth was very prolific and apples sold for $12 to $15 a bushel. The same trees bore an enormous crop of fruit last year but the other day they stood bare and fruitless, when all surrounding vegetation was luxuriant and prolific. This is supposed to be caused by frost that scalded the young growth just as it was putting forth. They will, no doubt, put out another growth, of which there is signs already. Such old trees being affected, this is something unheard of in Oregon. On the truck farm of Mr. Savage, adjoining this orchard, which covers some ninety acres, one interested can find much to learn. He has now five men at work and does the work of two ordinary men himself. He is enterprising & manages to secure the best new varieties and keep up with the times. He says the horticultural literature sent him from the East show how different the conditions are on the Pacific. The seedsman, J. H. Gregory, of Marblehead, Mass., for instance says to grow good onion plow up sod land and plant on it. That is the way to do, as far west as in Nebraska, but Mr. Savage says it don't work well here, and he finds it best to plant onions on the oldest land he has.

Mr. Savage has some fine three-year-old Italian prunes growing in his berry patch, and the conundrum he propounds to visitors is: Why do the three rows on the west show trees twice as large as the three rows on the east? All were planted on similar land and have had the same care and cultivation, but the difference in growth is very marked. The puzzle seemed unanswerable until we noticed that the larger trees were planted among gooseberries, while the smaller ones grew among raspberry vines. Mr. Savage said this could be the sole reason for the difference; that the raspberry starved the prunes by absorbing the constituents of soil needed for the prunes, while the gooseberries did not. After having followed gardening and horticulture for many years, Mr. Savage finds that "every day brings something new" to be learned by a tree worker.

The necessity of pruning fruit trees and when to do it, is shown by the experience of a Salem gentleman who has a number of pear trees, that bore last year and bloomed heavily this. They had made very heavy growth and carried entirely too much wood, as he knew from experience. Part of them he pruned off fully half the wood of the trees. Being busily occupied otherwise he neglected pruning the rest, intending to do it soon, but when he tried it the other day, he found no bloom set to pears and will get no fruit, while those pruned early are well loaded. It is impossible for trees having too much top, or bearing too much fruit, to thrive. They should be cut back well and the fruit trained to what can be large and fine fruit.

A UNIQUE WOMAN'S CLUB.

Composed of Wives and Mothers—It Discusses Practical Questions.

The "Wife, Wife and Mothers' club," composed of young matrons and mothers, met on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. H. Lunn, on the corner of Third and Commercial streets, and it is a very profitable club. Some of the members of the girls' club graduated into wifehood, and, forgetting the privileges of the girls' club, they entered here as members of a special branch for wives. Once the organization was formed and its friends and relatives, until now there is a society of about thirty members, with Mrs. James M. Cunningham as president and Mrs. Benjamin Morrison as treasurer. "Choosing and Furnishing a Home," "Best and Easiest Way of Keeping House," "House Cleaning and Its Aid," "How to Dress, Amuse and Train Children," "Make a Home Pleasant for Both Husband and Wife," and "How to Be Neighboring Without Being Gossipy." A woman physician has been hired to talk on "Babies and Their Needs," "Emergencies and How to Meet Them," "The Medical Box and Its Contents," "A Trained Nurse has given practical lessons in the care of the sick, the making of beds for invalids, the bandaging of simple wounds that are not serious enough to need the doctor's attention, and the preparation of simple medicines. A professional cook has instructed them in the mysteries of her art, from marketing to dessert. A dressmaker has taught them how to cut children's clothes, and at the last meeting a kindergarten teacher was shown how to make simple toys for the little ones."

This club is in no sense a charity, but, on the contrary, is self supporting, self governing and co-operative, and meets the expenses of all its professional teachers; and it is not a party-club, for the mother's-club takes the baby with her, and a committee of ladies take charge of it for her in one of the big sunny rooms of the club house, which give her entire attention to the discussion of the day.

Miss Dodge helped organize the club, but she is neither an officer nor a member, and says the only reason she is allowed to come at all is because she makes herself useful. It is most that the mothers themselves haven't quite courage to ask the teacher: "What would you do with a child that kicks and screams?" "Do you believe in breaking a child's will?" and "What do you believe in doing when he won't eat his breakfast?" and perhaps it may interest mothers not fortunate enough to belong to such a nice club to hear what the sweet faced teacher said.

"When a child kicks and screams," she answered, "because he can't have the looking glass, I should go away and leave him alone to kick his ugliness out. He wants you to punish him, to war with him, to fuss over him. He is full of fight, and wants some one to fight with him. Leave him alone, and he won't kick long with no one to see him. Then when he is all over it, he will be acting so, but do not punish him in the time of it, and, above all, never give him the looking glass or anything else he is kicking for. Leave him alone, and he will be all right. I do not believe it is ever done. Mothers that succeed after a battle royal in making a child give up, haven't broken his will at all when he yields, but just exhausted him physically, and he gives up because he is tired out, and he will be all right for a while, but he will pick up the reins for paper, or play he is the garbage man, and must pick up all the toys, and he will pick it up without thinking much about it. But remember, do not pick it up yourself if it stays there two days, or you spoil the child."—New York Sun.

More About Aluminum.

An indifferent observer might be led to think that the uses of aluminum have apparently prospered themselves that the man of the Twentieth century will not only discard every other motive power but that of electricity for all the purposes of life, but that one material likewise will serve him for every purpose, his lanterns, engines, ships, vehicles and utensils, if not his clothing, will all be of aluminum. But it will be found, as in many similar cases, that the popular estimate of the capabilities of the metal is formed without sufficient knowledge of its properties. That it has great utility is not to be disputed, but thus far aluminum bronze, consisting of ninety parts copper and ten parts aluminum, has been found of more practical value relative to its cost, and it has been further ascertained that a very slight addition of copper greatly increases the tensile strength of the alloy, with but trifling increase of the weight. Meanwhile, we are almost daily informed of new methods of extracting aluminum from clay, at such reduced expense that if the calculations of the inventors are realized, it ought speedily to become a cheap and common instead of a rare and costly metal. It is still quoted at about $50 per pound, but a leading producer of aluminum recently made public a very close and detailed estimate, showing that even in the present state of the art, the actual first cost of the metal, if the business were conducted on a sufficiently large scale, might be brought as low as twenty cents per pound.—Mechanical News.

Improved Bicycle Treadle.

A bicycle treadle has been designed to lighten the labor of running a machine, and especially to facilitate the work of climbing. The treadle increases the leverage on the crank arms on the downward stroke, a point which the bicyclist will not be slow to appreciate. The operator is also by this arrangement enabled to press downward with greater force upon the forward outer footrest, the leverage being increased by the distance from the crank spindle to the outer footrest bar. By this improvement the rider can more easily overcome a descent, and should the pedal be accidentally dropped its increased length facilitates its recovery.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

On His Date.

A man in Covington, Ky., has just paid a fine of fifteen dollars for firing a small cannon on the 7th of April in honor of the anniversary of George Washington. He had forgotten the date, but the court held that a practice of firing a cannon on the 7th of April was established by the fact that he had fired it on that date the year before.
