

"I bought this broad-brimmed hat to keep the light out of my eyes," she said confidently. "Nothing can do that," he answered gallantly, and the world revolved on its regular twenty-four-hour day system just as usual.—Detroit Free Press.

Wearily husband (Sunday morning): How long has that confounded bell been ringing? Wife: Since six. Husband: Well, I guess I'll go to church this morning and see if I can't get a little sleep.—Life.

"I despise a hypocrite." "So do I." "Now, take Johnson, for example; he is the biggest hypocrite on earth." "But you appear to be his best friend." "O yes, I try to appear friendly toward him. It pays better in the end."—Life.

At a reception.—"Oh, Count! delighted. I haven't seen you, I think, since you were four weeks old. But how you have changed!"—Fillegende Blatter.

"Henry, if you truly love me you must prove it in some way." "Nothing easier, my love. The river here is very swift and deep. Jump in and you shall see how quickly I will have you out again."—Fillegende Blatter.

Mrs. S.—They say a man never marries his first love. Her hubby.—He can't; it would be polygamy.—Life.

He—Now, really, don't you think I am a spoiled young man? She—Oh, no; you are still quite fresh.

Young man (at race course)—What is the object of all this? Old stager.—To improve the breed of horses, sir—to improve the breed of horses. Come, let's take a drink, and then I'll give you some pointers on how to bet.—New York Weekly.

Mrs. Newwood (handing tramp several biscuits)—Here, my poor man, are some of my home-made biscuits. You will find the same as ax in the woodshed. Tramp—Are they as bad as that, mum?—Brooklyn Life.

"Now, cook, just you look here! Look at that piece of bacon I've just given your mistress! It's the thickest and worst cut I ever saw in my life!—and this piece I'm just going to take myself is only a little better."—Punch.

At the Zoo.—She—"Is that a rattlesnake?" Attendant—"Yes, marm." "How many rattles has he?" "Fifteen and a button." "May I make him rattle?" "Certainly, marm." "What must I do?" "You touch the button and he will do the rest."—Arkansas Traveller.

Biggest Horse in the World. Valley City, North Dakota, thinks it has the largest horse in the world. He is owned by C. J. Hamlin, and is a sorrel broncho. He measures 19 hands high, or six feet four inches from the floor to his withers. He has a foreleg of three and one-half feet, and in length he measures 13 feet from head to base of tail, or over 17 feet from tip of nose to tip of tail. A small broncho at the barn was brought and led under the giant's belly, and a man, six foot high, standing on tip toe, can just touch the base of the ear, with head in natural position. Mr. Hamlin bought him in a drove from the west and has offered him for sale several times, but his mate was not to be found and he could be sold.

A Sea Sick Passenger. On the ocean, there is little about a storm. He is positively indifferent whether he is overboard or not. But, at night, in a Wagonload of Dr. Price's Little Liver Pills, he feels renewed interest in his personal safety. This fine curative neutralizes the brackish water—often compulsory drink on shipboard. The peripatetic imprints which give rise to disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. To the mariner, coast, the Western passenger and miner, the Little Liver Pills are a source of protection against malaria, when its seeds are latent in air and water. To the effect of overwork, mental or manual, it is a most reliable antidote, and to the debilitated and nervous, it affords great relief and vigor.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is today enjoying good health. If you have any Throat, Lung or Chest Trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Fry's Drugstore.

Capital and Labor.

"Capital," says his Holiness the Pope, "is powerless without work and work without capital." His Holiness does not claim infallibility in matters of political economy, as is very fortunate in this case, for it is thereby made less disagreeable to point out the fact that the only real capital men have is work, labor, or whatever they choose to call the nervous and muscular action that produces. The whole earth is material for labor, but it only becomes capital when labor is put into it.

There are many representatives of capital; much that is capital in its possibilities, but it never actually becomes capital until work is put into it. When a man works a day and gets a dollar, the day's work is his capital; the dollar merely represents it and has no other capitalistic value than that we imagine into it in making it stand for a day's work already done, so that we can exchange it for another day's work or something else representing it. A piece of limestone in a hillside is not capital, but when we put work into it enough to dig it out and transport it to an iron furnace it is capital because it holds work.

The Ciceronian Latin of his Holiness is not infallible in dealing with the political economy of the Nineteenth Century, but he is eminently right in concluding that there is no real conflict between capital and work. Work is capital. They are one and the same thing. The conflict between those who earn and those who try to take without earning. There is no conflict of labor and capital.—St. Louis Republic.

Horse Jockeying.

The owner of a boarding stable in Detroit advertised a horse for sale. Early the next morning a man appeared and asked to see the engine.

"See here," said the owner as he squared off at him. "I like to have a fair understanding about things. Now, then, it is for you or some one else?" "Some one else." "Do you know all about a horse or nothing at all?" "I know every crook and turn about a horse, sir." "Oh, you do. All right. Now we understand each other, and I'll show you the beast." In ten minutes a sale had been effected and the animal was being led away. "Why did you care whether he was green or posted?" inquired a man who stood by. "Made a great deal of difference to me," replied the owner. "The horse is spavined, pigeon-toed and weak in the back. Had been an amateur. I should have felt bound to tell him." "But he knew all about a horse." Exactly, and therefore knew nothing. Easiest sale I ever made to anyone.

"I Could Move the World"

"I had something to rest my liver on," said Archibald. Large bodies move or are moved slowly. But it is impossible to move a difficult task to render those small bodies, the kidneys, active when they are not so. Don't try to do this with unmediated alcoholic stimulants. The experts are unanimous. The sure, safe means is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which affords just the right amount of stimulus without overdoing the matter. Continued inactivity of either the kidneys or bladder, it should never be lost sight of, are attended with grave results. Diabetes, rheumatism, and other ailments which have their origin in inaction of the kidneys. To overcome this is an easy matter at the outset. Not so later. Now is the time to take a kind. Irregularity of the bowels, stomach and liver, rheumatism and malaria are remedied by the Bitters.
