Summer Resorting in Oregon.

Written for the JOURNAL.

When you make up your mind to have a genuine enjoyable time and take some solid comfort, come to Oregon and take a trip with us to the sea shore. From Salem it is about sixty miles. Whether this makes an allowance for all the multitude of hills and mountains we journey over I do not know, but we made the trip in two days and a half, and took plenty of time at our camping places to cook our meals and rest awhile. Good conveniences for stopping are numerous along the route. I mean natural camping places with plenty of wood and water. We see some fine farming land after leaving Salem. One place which is worthy of especial mention. It is a large tract set out in an orchard of twenty thousand pear trees. They appear to all be of uniform size and shape, set at equal distant apart in rows and are under the best cultivation, and all together it presents a grand picture of horticulture. Then we go through the Indian Reservation, where we saw the civilized red man tilling the soil and reaping the grain with all the improved implements of husbandry. Beyond this is another scope of farming country, extending into the foot hills. Everywhere among the hills where there is any pretension to level spot, the settler has his rough hewn little shanty and enjoys the solitude of his lonely home. Before going far into the mountains we are called to a halt by the keeper of a toll gate and pay one dollar. And as we are going to a place on the coast called Little Nestucca, we look at the guide-board over the gate and drive through. A sulphur spring issues from some rocks by the roadside here furnished with a cup for the traveler's accommodation. I think this long rugged road through the mountains is kept in repair almost exclusively for the pleasure seeker to the coast. The abundant resources of Oregon for a livelihood are so easily appropriated that any enterprising individual finds plenty of time for a few weeks vacation during the warm season; and many avail themselves of the pleasure afforded by a trip to the sea shore. After entering the mountains we begin to enjoy our ride in earnest. There is something new everywhere. The scene is full of novelty and interest to a stranger. Strange plants and flowers and small fruits, and many kinds of shrubbery, like the wild rose, running maple, the thimble berry bush and hundreds of others the botanist could name grow in profusion everywhere. The running black berry vine lies snarled and tangled up over the whole face of the earth. Big fir trees loom away up in the sky and the ground beneath is strewn with cast off cones of last season.

Right here we will stop for dinner. These beautiful tiny streams are numerous among the mountains. They come running swiftly along down from the coolest of springs and go hurrying by to reach the ocean before we do. The water is sweet and pure and so clear that the smallest object can be plainly seen at the bottom. The horses can get a drink here and we can make our coffee. But I am lingering too long, if I do not hurry up I will never get you to the coast; but one wants plenty of time on such a trip and nothing at home to worry about or half our pleasure will be spoiled. After the team is taken care of and a fire is built in some shady spot, against an old big log, and the kettle hung over suspended on a pole, some nice coals pulled out for the frying pan to cook some game or some trout you have caught, then you may anticipate a meal your sharpened appetite will relish better than any civilized dinner you ever ate.

After we had traveled part of the distance over the Coast Range there was a great change in the scenery. A destructive fire had passed over the mountains years before stripping nature of all her loveliest things. A few Alder and Willows were green, growing along some creek between the mountain dips, and plenty of under brush in places; but the bare and jagged rocky sides of the mountains, strewn over with old and bleached tree trunks, some still charred, and some broken are on every side of you. Many of the dead trees are yet standing straight and tall and white like so many ghosts keeping sentinel over the vast solitudes. We ride over and among the same denuded mountains almost to the coast. There is no regularity to the lay of these mountains; they are tumbled up against each other horizontally, diagonally, and vertically: One high summit has built an isosceles triangle with its apex in the sky. Another, higher up, shows a conoid, against that a rhomboid, then a trapezium and when you have once passed by, you are not sure but it is the same place yet. However this is not the case with all the places in this vicinity. There is a road goes winding round the side of a mountain of solid rock, with a road-bed amply sufficient for one team, but the solid high wall on one side of it, and the almost perpendicular descent of several feet, to a river, on the other side, makes it quite impossible for teams to pass each other. It was just our luck to meet "McGinty" right there, three loaded wagons. Each party sat looking at the other a full minute; but they solved the puzzle some way while I, and I walked on.

Well I almost know you are getting impatient to hear the old ocean roar. We have been hearing it for sometime, so I will stop with these few "way-side gleanings" and have the driver hasten along. Only a few miles from the coast now. The mountains are behind us and among "the hills here people have found room for good farms. We inquire which road leads us to our destination. "To the right, where you see a team toiling slowly up that very high and steep hill, and just over that you will get your first view of the ocean." The first sight of it did not impress us with that degree of enthusiasm we anticipated. No doubt our feelings were something akin to a defeated political aspirant, only we did see what we expected and he did not. At a distance the old ocean was nothing more than a dark rain cloud lying close along the horizon. To see it in its grandeur and might, one must stand upon the shore. There we saw it one afternoon when the tide was out. We walked along the sandy beach where the waters had swept over it only a few hours before, and found a hard, smooth and most delightful promenade. The beach where we were is a vast wilderness of dark colored sand, no pebbles or shells to speak of. We were on the shore again in the forenoon and saw the tide coming in. One never tires watching the far off white caps ride along over the water and break upon the shore, then glide swiftly up over the sandy beach, always pushing a border of briny froth before them, then gently flow back over the slightly inclined plain into the sea again. This is succeeded by another and another, each crested wave higher than the last, and flows farther over the shore. Here I pause, being quite incapable to give you anything like a true conception of the wonderful grandeur and sublimity of the old Pacific. A charm thrown around the visitor to its shore is so irresistible and enduring that they all desire to return again and again. You will have to come to Oregon as I first suggested and make the trip yourself to know how delightful it all is.

Yours Respectfully, J.

Toledo, O., Jan. 10, 1887.
Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—I have been in the general practice of medicine for nearly 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., of Toledo, Ohio. I have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours truly,
L. J. GRUBBS, M. D.,

CHURCH NOTES.

The Congregationalists of Campbell, Santa Clara county, Cal., have arranged to build a church edifice at once.

The Christian church of Santa Barbara has called Rev. A. M. Collins of Shelbyville, Ind., to its pulpit.

Rev. E. H. Byrons, of Oakland, Cal., has joined the Santa Clara Association of Congregational churches and Ministers.

The new Baptist church at Fairhaven, Wash., has finished its parsonage, and is now building its church edifice. Rev. Pierce is pastor.

E. J. Baldwin has given the Presbyterian church of Santa Anita several lots for an edifice, and they propose to build at once.

A Congregational Ministers' Relief Society has been incorporated in Southern California. Rev. D. D. Hill, of Pasadena, is chairman of the board of directors.

Rev. Mr. Bowman, late pastor of the Congregational church at Grass Valley, Cal., is now established in a law business there.

The new Methodist church at Cosmopolis, Wash., of which Rev. C. A. Snelling is pastor, will be dedicated next Sunday, June 7th.

Rev. E. Stillwell, recently from Chicago, if now settled as pastor in connection with the Grace Mission of the First Baptist church, Tacoma, Wash.

The Baptist church of Nest Ferndale, Washington, has called to its pulpit Rev. J. E. Sanders, late of Tacoma, and he has accepted.

Rev. William Roberts, of Sebastopol, was elected president of the Alumni Association of Pacific Theological Seminary, Oakland, Cal., at their late meeting.

Rev. George B. Allen, of Oakland, Cal., late stated supply of the Congregational church at Lorin, has more recently been supplying the Congregational church at Martinez.

Rev. W. S. Utter began his pastorate of the Christian or Disciple church at San Bernardino, under auspicious circumstances.

Rev. Father Ali Saab, a Catholic priest from the province of Lebanon, in the northern part of Palestine, has been the guest of the Catholic clergy of Virginia, Nev., for some time past. He is a Maronite priest of the Syrian rite, and pastor of the parish of Duma, 120 miles from Jerusalem.

Rev. Father McNaboe, of Alameda, who has for a long time been severely and dangerously ill, has so far recovered that he is able to resume his pastoral labors to some extent, and his complete recovery is now confidently expected.

The beautiful and commodious new Baptist church at Victoria, B. C., was opened last Sunday, and $4000 was contributed toward the building debt. The edifice seats in the main audience-room 1500, and is built on what is called the "combination plan," similar to the Eighth-avenue Methodist church, Oakland.

Rev. B. N. L. Davis, pastor of the Baptist church at Mount Vernon, Skagit county, Wash., who died recently, was one of the pioneer ministers of the state, and for five years was the only minister in the country.

Bishop Mora, of Los Angeles, visited Tia Juana, Mexico, on the 19th and 20th of May, and assisted by Rev. Fathers Curran and Garcia, confirmed 200 persons. Many of those who presented themselves for confirmation, it is stated, had not seen a Bishop for years.

At a business meeting of the Woodland Congregational church, Cal., recently held, Rev. F. J. Culver, formerly of San Francisco, and more recently of Portland, Or., was called to become the permanent pastor, and he has signified his acceptance. Previous to his installation, he will spend two months in Pasadena for needed rest and recreation.

The fair held last week at Armory Hall, Los Angeles, for the benefit of the Church of Our Lady of Angels proved a very interesting affair. The ancient Indian and Spanish dances introduced were a unique attraction. In one of the booths were fourteen paintings, made by Indians, and an old bench on which all the Spanish padres have sat.

The new and beautiful Presbyterian church at Santa Rosa, of which Rev. C. B. Pitblado, is pastor, was dedicated last Sunday. The auditorium and Sunday school room may be thrown into one and will seat 900. A card collection of about $1800 was taken. The other city pastors assisted.

MISCELLANY.

A STRANGE DISEASE.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 6.—Mrs. Sarah Neas, who lives near Caney Branch, Tenn., affords a strange case of bone exfoliation. Dr. Bates, of Caney Branch, explained the woman's peculiar disease at a recent meeting of the North Carolina Medical association in this city. He brought a small satchel of bones with which to substantiate his assertion. In this case of bone exfoliation he says one side of the woman's body only is affected. She is 71 years old, of average height and weighs 120 pounds. Except the disease mentioned she is in good health. About twenty-one years ago she scorched the end of her index finger on her left hand, and on the same evening cut the same finger on a piece of china. The night following, the wound gave great pain, so much that she walked the floor all night. The following morning the finger was very much swollen, and the cuticle protruded from the end of the finger. This was cut off with scissors. The operation left exposed three yellow pimples, which contained all the pus that ever gathered in the finger. She suffered incessant pain for two months, at which time exfoliation began. It first commenced in the phalanges of the fingers, and as the disease progressed the forearm became involved; first the phalanges, then the metacarpus, carpus, radius, ulna, and of recent years the scapula and inferior maxillary have been involved. The humerus has not been affected. About ten minutes before exfoliation takes place the patient is seized with intense pain, which continues until the bone is expelled. On one occasion the doctor was called to see her, and on her arrival he found a bone in her throat. He removed it, and was told that she had swallowed two bones previous to his arrival. While sitting and talking a bone about one inch long came from her left ear. The number of bones expelled in places up to the present time is 526. The patient has been a woman of good constitution otherwise, and during her life has taken very little mercury.

NEW INVENTION.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—In an interview, A. T. Hatch, the well known fruit grower said: "Experiments are now in progress in this city, which, if they prove successful as they promise to do, will give the fruit industry a boom such as it has never known. A local chemist, who has been experimenting for a long time, has hit upon a gas which it is claimed will preserve fruit in its natural state for an indefinite period of time, at the same time preserving both the appearance and flavor of the fruit, just as it comes from the tree. A short time ago I was shown a sample of cherries that had been preserved in this way for six months, and they were in a perfect state of preservation every way. Even an expert could not have detected that they were not fresh from the orchard. Other experiments are now in progress, and a number of fruit growers, myself among the number, have advanced money to carry them on. The gas is easy to manufacture, costs little or nothing, and no difficulty is experienced in handling it."

A PENSION FRAUD.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The quiet investigation that Acting Secretary Chandler is making regarding the Washington career of William Barker, chief of division of the pension office, shows the extreme measures taken by Bussey and Raum, in their alleged investigation, to shield the major and cover up his questionable acts. The major is many hundred dollars in debt. Since coming here he has borrowed on every hand. All was fish that came to his net. Messengers, and every grade of clerks, male and female, he has solicited and received loans from, "just for a few days." Few of these loans have ever been repaid. To one gentleman, to whom he is indebted in the sum of $200, and who says he has asked Barker scores of times for money due, that gentleman has told him he did not think he should crowd him as he (Barker) had got a friend of the money lender appointed as messenger in the pension office. Another party holds
