A FRESH OUTBREAK OF SECTIONALISM.

Washington Post, Ind.: Gen. Bradley T. Johnson is a confederate veteran who seems to lack the candor, breath and conciliatory spirit which is the notable and honorable characteristic of the great body of confederate survivors. Chosen to render tribute to the Southern dead, he chooses to malign the soldiers of the North. To extol the one he traduces the other. Twenty-five years after he has delivered up his sword, in honorable surrender to an honorable foe, he converts a day of sacred memories to the occasion of a rash and vindictive speech, still breathing of sectional hate. At the unveiling of the monument to the confederate dead, at Fredericksburg, Gen. Johnson is reported as saying: "The war (on the part of the North) was a scheme of contractors, who drained the national purse and kept the turmoil raging until the drainage was complete. "The idea is dimly pressing itself upon the Northern mind that we tried to avoid war, did not want war, but that war was brought on, waged and continued for the purpose of keeping a faction in power, and enabling the controllers of the faction to make a profit out of it. "It was not a patriotic war to preserve the union, but a contractors' war to secure the men in power permanent control in government. "Pensions and bounties are the degrading consequences of the mercenary motives which brought it on. "Victory has been the source of unmitigated evils to them, while defeat has developed enormous good in character and in conduct with us. Men will not do honor to that which they despise. "The federal revolution sought to concentrate all political power in the government. They have succeeded, having overthrown a constitution with limitations and guarantees, and instituted one of absolute power controlled ostensibly by popular will, but in fact directed by a heartless plutocracy for its own benefit. "The reason why the confederates are respected, as I understand it, is that honorable and high minded men and women respect those who possess the same qualities, and as the high ideals and noble conduct of the confederates are more and more understood, they will attract the admiration, the love and respect of all noble people. "All that Gen. Johnson has to say in honor of the South, of the heroism of the Southern soldier and the Southern women, the magnanimous spirit of the North recognizes his right and privilege to say. But when on such an occasion as that at Fredericksburg, Gen. Johnson rises to utter such malignant slander of heroic men, living and dead, the fraternal spirit of North and South alike speaks in indignant rebuke.

Chronicle: A Portland, Ore., free trade paper says that "the only reciprocity that will benefit the American farmer is reciprocity with European countries—England, France and Germany—that want to buy and will buy, if allowed, our agricultural surplus." We had a lurking idea that no American was placing any obstacle in the way of the foreigner buying as much of our agricultural products as he desired, and we feel quite convinced that whenever we can undersell our rivals we will patronize us. If our contemporary is silly enough to imagine that the additional purchase by the United States of a couple of hundred million dollars' worth of English manufactured goods annually would insure an increased market for American wheat, he should take a few lessons in practical political economy, which teaches that low prices and not sentimental govern in these matters. Besides, it would be difficult for even a Portland free trader to explain what advantage the American farmer would derive if the American workmen employed in producing the couple of hundred millions of manufactures which he proposes we should take from England rather than produce ourselves, should be deprived of their ability to purchase wheat and should turn to and become agricultural producers. It was easy to understand why Gladstone should have glowed with this idea, for, from the English standpoint, increased competition in the production of food and raw materials is a thing of beauty and would be a joy forever, but why the American farmer should be expected to euthese is something beyond our comprehension.

CHURCH NOTES. The United Presbyterian church of Shedd, Ore., Rev. John A. Griffin pastor, are building a neat church edifice at a cost of $2000. It will be completed early in next month. Rev. T. G. Watson has resigned pastoral charge of the first Presbyterian church in Spokane, Wash., and after a few weeks spent in visiting Oregon and British Columbia proposes to go to California and make it his future home. Rev. J. M. Warren has resigned pastoral charge of the Presbyterian church at Ballard, Wash., and the pulpit will be supplied for the present by Rev. Mr. Head, of Fremont. Rev. B. Parsons has resigned the pastorate of the Second Presbyterian

SUGGESTED COMMENT.

The giant male and female hippopotami are en route for Salem.

Newspapers are seldom guilty of rewarding ingratitude at their own expense.

The states picnic at Salem will be a very healthy young celebration before you know it.

There is a fine stand of newspapers in Oregon that are preparing to give up the ghost.

There is a great deal of fine land for building lots at Astoria—when the tide is out.

The secretary of the treasury continues to maintain the price of silver. Yesterday 333,000 ounces were purchased at an average of 98.34 cents, the market price being 98 cents. A premium of .34 cents an ounce was paid above the market price.

S. F. Chronicle: The premium on gold in Argentina has been as high as 343 per cent. According to the assumption of some monetarists this discouraging state of affairs must be due to the failure of the Argentinians to appropriately recognize the efficacy of the single gold standard by legislative enactment. According to this astute class of financiers such a recognition would have kept Argentine well supplied with gold. At least, we have a right to assume that this is their idea, for they tell us that the recognition of bimetalism would be sure to drive all the gold out of our country.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer has an article on government ownership of railroads, in which it figures out that the United States could buy the entire system at the outside valuation of the owners, pay interest on the amount of the purchase at the rate of 3 per cent per annum and still make a profit of $150,000,000 a year even if there should be no increase of the present rate of traffic. The Post-Intelligencer, after stating the case, says that "healthy public sentiment is against government ownership," but adds, "conditions may arise that will create an irresistible demand for it." Many persons would argue that it is not a healthy public sentiment which shrinks from adopting a remedy until irresistibly driven to it. If the abuses are as great as the Post-Intelligencer assumes them to be, instead of being necessary for it to tell its readers that "it can do no harm to study the question," it ought to earnestly advise them to make it their duty to study it thoroughly.—S. F. Chronicle.

Rev. J. D. Foster has accepted a call to the pulpit of the Congregational church in Lorin, of which Rev. George B. Allen was lately pastor, and has already entered upon his duties. The Presbyterian and Congregational churches of San Mateo have united in a series of evangelistic services under the direction of Rev. W. N. Meserve. A life-size, full-length standing portrait in oil of the late Archbishop Alemany of San Francisco, has been added to the collection in the Bishops' Memorial hall, Notre Dame, Paris. The forthcoming Year Book gives 4,823 Congregational churches in the United States; gain since last year, 134. Members, 595,782; gain 14,797. Young People's Societies Christian Endeavor, 2,560; members, 122,706. The new Catholic church now being built in Niles is of the Gothic style of architecture, to cost $4000, and will, it is said, when finished present a very neat and attractive appearance. Rev. Father Caraher of Mission San Jose will have charge of the new parish. The edifice will be ready for dedication early in the fall. Archbishop Riordan is about to erect on a tract of land purchased for the purpose some time ago in Marin county, a large and handsome stone structure, to be used as an ecclesiastical seminary for the training of youths of this archdiocese for the priesthood. The grounds consist of 600 acres in the heart of the county, bordering on the North Pacific railroad, between Rose station and Green Brae. The building will be a substantial one of stone and will cost about $30,000.

The forthcoming Year Book gives 4,823 Congregational churches in the United States; gain since last year, 134. Members, 595,782; gain 14,797. Young People's Societies Christian Endeavor, 2,560; members, 122,706. The new Catholic church now being built in Niles is of the Gothic style of architecture, to cost $4000, and will, it is said, when finished present a very neat and attractive appearance. Rev. Father Caraher of Mission San Jose will have charge of the new parish. The edifice will be ready for dedication early in the fall. Archbishop Riordan is about to erect on a tract of land purchased for the purpose some time ago in Marin county, a large and handsome stone structure, to be used as an ecclesiastical seminary for the training of youths of this archdiocese for the priesthood. The grounds consist of 600 acres in the heart of the county, bordering on the North Pacific railroad, between Rose station and Green Brae. The building will be a substantial one of stone and will cost about $30,000.

Rev. J. F. Bacon, late pastor of the Congregational church at Ferris, has accepted a call to the Second Congregational church in Oakland. Thomas Hendry, a recent graduate of the Pacific Theological seminary, Oakland, has received a unanimous call from the Congregational church at Rio Vista. The seating capacity of the First Swedish Congregational church on Jessie street, San Francisco, now being enlarged, will be about doubled. Rev. C. Anderson is the pastor, and to his labors the prosperity of the society is largely due. Rev. E. Franson, whose efforts in the eastern states resulted in sending fifty Swedish missionaries to China, has been in San Francisco engaged in evangelical labors. Bishop B. T. Roberts, of the Free Methodist church, held a successful conference recently in Ione, Cal. He has since returned to his home in Seattle, Wash. Rev. John Kirby, pastor of the First Methodist church, Alameda, has been granted a month's vacation with money to pay his traveling and other expenses while recuperating from his faithful labors. Grace Methodist church, San Francisco, has completed, furnished and paid for a beautiful and commodious parsonage for its pastor, Dr. McClish. Rev. S. D. Simonds, a pioneer Methodist preacher, and his wife were given a handsome reception recently at the parlors of the Powell street church, San Francisco, of which he was the first pastor. A purse of $125 was given him. Rev. J. D. Foster has accepted a call to the pulpit of the Congregational church in Lorin, of which Rev. George B. Allen was lately pastor, and has already entered upon his duties.
