TARIFF AND TRUSTS.

The S. F. Chronicle has the following very able editorial on an important topic:

Every free trader in the United States, from Grover Cleveland down, holds it as a cardinal doctrine of his creed that a protective tariff creates and fosters trusts. A dispatch from Vancouver, B. C., on the sugar question, read in connection with the existence of the sugar trust in the United States, should cast at least a suspicion on the correctness of this free trade theory.

This dispatch says that the manager of the Vancouver sugar refinery has declared war upon the American sugar refiners. He says it may seem an uneven fight, for the big San Francisco refiners, with a market, are able to throw away some money to attain their object, but that he is in a position to make the battle warm while it lasts.

The rival refiners can fight their own battles, but the point is here: If a Vancouver refinery can import raw sugar, pay a duty on it about equal to the American duty before the passage of the McKinley bill, and ship the refined product to the United States and pay another small duty, and still do a profitable business, while on the other side of the border American refiners are running on duty-free sugar and also doing a profitable business, is it not clear that a protective tariff has nothing to do with a sugar trust? Is it not clear, too, that the present price of sugar on the Pacific coast, is an anomalous price, kept up by manipulation and combination, and that such combinations, could and would exist whether there were any import duty on sugar or not?

SUGGESTED COMMENT.

The weather in England has been even hotter than the baccarat scandal.

The farmers in Maine and Vermont are planting their potatoes and corn over again, the cold, damp weather having killed the first crop.

American "society" pretends to be outraged at the conduct of the Prince of Wales. Yet it would kiss his foot if he would consent to come to this country and hobnob with it.

The New York Staats Zeitung says: "Almost the last hope of the German grain harvest is gone. It rains in the lowlands, it snows in the mountains, and the outlook is pitiful."

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says the harvest in Hungary will be middling in quality and quantity, and in Austria decidedly inferior to any for the last five years.

Vintages of the Rhine, Moselle and Palatinate, are reported complete failures, owing to the severe and protracted frosts which prevailed during the earlier part of the season.

The Fulgit and the Stars.

Rev. F. M. Shrou, Pastor United Brethren church, Blue Mound, Kan., says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. King's New Discovery has done for me. My lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and well, gaining 25 lbs. in weight."
Arthur Love, Manager Love's Family Pills Combination, writes: "After a thorough trial and convincing evidence, I am confident Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, cures 'em all, and cures when everything else fails. The greatest kindness I can do my many thousands of friends is to urge them to try it." Free trial bottles at Fry's drug store. Regular since 50c. and $1.

Marcus Whitman the Real Pathfinder of Oregon.

J. Edwards in East Oregonian: The history of the early settlement of the Pacific Northwest and the exertions of the pioneer missionaries is a romance. As the result of the Lewis and Clark overland journey to the lower Columbia, five Nez Perce Indians crossed the continent to St. Louis seeking more light about the white man's God and Bible. Their journey was not in vain, for two missionary boards were moved to send missionaries to them. And among the first to respond to the call for missionaries to far-away Oregon was Marcus Whitman, M. D., of Richville, N. Y. He was a man of remarkable energy, courage, tact and versatility of talent. He established a mission in the Walla Walla valley about six miles south of the present city of that name.

He taught, preached, farmed, built grist and sawmills, and attended to the sick.

Being impressed with the value of the country, second only to his desire to ameliorate the condition of the Indians was his desire to secure it to the United States. He made an overland journey to Washington, D. C., in the dead of winter, in order to give an accurate report of the country to the proper officials and bring back with him American settlers. There have been eminent express riders, full of import to families and states. These have carried messages for war and peace, for trade and towering ambition. It would be difficult to find one that for distance, time, heroic daring, peril, suffering, and magnificent consequences could equal Whitman's ride. He reached Washington and appeared before the secretary of state, Daniel Webster. He returned to Oregon leading an emigrant train of 250 wagons and 875 souls. Says U. S. Senator John B. Allen: "To the missionary today are we pre-eminently indebted that the stars and stripes float over Washington, and that it is under the allegiance of this republic and not that of Great Britain; and to Marcus Whitman, more than to any other single man, is our debt of gratitude the greatest." But in 1847 Dr. Whitman and wife, and twelve others were massacred by the savage Indians. The Cayuse Indians followed and all the missionaries were called from the country. Among them were Revs. Cushing Eells and Elkana Walker, of Forest Grove.

In eleven years the country was declared open again, and Mr. Eells started for the scene of the massacre. By the side of the little mound where lies buried the remains of Dr. Whitman, a co-laborer, on his knees before God he made a covenant that he would endeavor to erect a monument to Dr. Whitman in the form of a school of high grade. The fruits of his labors are to be seen today in Whitman college, Walla Walla, the oldest collegiate institution in the state. It has eleven professors and instructors and about 200 students, and is doing most excellent work. It offers all the advantages and has all the privileges of American universities.

It Was a Woman Did It.

Lady Brooks in England has won the sobriquet of "the babbling Brooke." It was through this woman that the baccarat scandal was made public. She has for years been an intimate friend of the Prince of Wales, and it was this intimacy which resulted in the estrangement of Lord Brooke and his wife. It happened that the prince was invited to Welbeck Abbey, the county seat of the Duke of Portland. Among the guests whom the heir apparent desired to have invited to meet him was Lady Brooke. The proud Duchess of Portland when the list was brought to her refused to allow the notorious beauty of the prince's fast set to be invited to the Abbey, and so informed his majesty of Wales. The result was that the Prince of Wales did not go to Welbeck Abbey, but went to Tranby Croft instead, where Lady Brooke was a very welcome guest. From the prince our lady of the platonic love learned the story of the cheating at cards.

A beautiful woman cannot always be relied upon to keep so grave a secret. She bubbled it to others and soon the whole disgraceful affair at Tranby Croft became a public scandal. Lady Brooke is a professional beauty and probably enjoys the new notoriety that she has achieved. But the aged Earl of Warwick whose son and heir is the unfortunate Lord Brooke, has, it is said, been crushed by the new scandal.

This is why his lordship will probably ask to be divorced from the babbling woman who has many times before disgraced his name. If the suit is brought the Prince of Wales will be made a co-respondent. The baccarat scandal has only given new force to the saying that in every case there is a woman; from Trejan war to Tranby Croft's gilded gambling halls.—Ex.

ARRESTED FOR ARSON.

LOS ANGELES, June 26.—W. R. Huff, proprietor of the Pacific Slope restaurant, which was in the Solomon block on Spring street, which was burned after 12 o'clock Monday morning, causing a loss of $30,000, was arrested on a charge of arson, and locked up in default of $5000 bail. Fire broke out in the restaurant just a week before at the same place, but it was extinguished before any damage was done. When the second fire occurred suspicion was aroused, and Huff's arrest followed. The police say they have a strong case against him. Huff formerly resided at Lower Lake, Lak county, where he ran a hotel, which burned last December. It was insured for $1000, and Huff received $300 for his loss. He was insured here for $1700, and had but $500 or $600 in his place. The insurance people will vigorously prosecute the case. COMMISSIONER QUINTON'S MURDERERS.

LONDON, June 26.—It is said that the government is strongly disposed to deal leniently with the jubra, or regent of manipur, now under sentence of death for rebellion against the British government. The government is satisfied that the jubra had nothing to do with the treacherous murders of the British officers, and it is possible that his sentence may be commuted to exile to the Andaman islands or some other penal colony. As for the senapati, brother of the jubra, his execution is certain, as well as that of the tungal general, who first ordered the murders.

DO NOT NEED THEM.

BERLIN, June 26.—The German authorities are doing their utmost precautions to prevent the spread of infectious diseases from the Russian Jews who are flocking through the country, and visitors for this reason are no longer permitted to enter the vaults at Charlottenburg, where the exiles are permitted to rest, while the fugitives are hurried forward as rapidly as possible to their ports of departure for New York.

VILLARD ALL RIGHT.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Mr. Henry Villard, with his family, sailed from Bremen for New York on the steamer Havell last Tuesday morning. Officers of the North American company deny that Mr. Villard's return to this country is rendered necessary by any financial disturbance in that company. They say that the company is not in distress, but, on the other hand, has a glorious future in store. The recent contract made with Thomas A. Edison is regarded as a very valuable asset. It is sweeping in its character and makes the company a full partner with Edison in all his inventions pertaining to electrical railways, now existing and to come. In addition to this, the company is under contract to supply Cincinnati with a full electric light system, and it has almost completed the transformation of the entire horse railway system in Milwaukee into an electric railway on the trolley plan.

THE BOY FOUND.

CINCINNATI, June 26.—Detectives have, after a year's search, located the 7-year-old son of Patrick Conway, a well-to-do resident of Springfield, Ky. The boy was kidnapped a year ago by enemies of Mr. Conway. He employed detectives to search for him, and spared no expense in trying to find his child. The detectives traced him to San Francisco, and from there to Australia. They must have passed the kidnapers on the way, for by the time they reached Australia they had retraced their course to this country. Steadily they followed the trail, which led them back to San Francisco, then across the continent to New York. From there the boy and his kidnapers took a steamer for Ireland, and it was only yesterday that the father received word that the boy had been found in a sennary in Ireland. Mr. Conway will take immediate measures to have the boy brought back home.

A NAVAL HERO.

LONDON, June 26.—Among the German visitors to England to see the naval exhibition is Vice-Admiral Koenig, commander at Kiel, whom Americans will remember as having been the hero of a naval fight in the Gulf of Mexico in 1870, when with the German gunboat Meteor he
