"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees. The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expells them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

TWO CITIES COMPARED.

New England Cities Make the Best Showing Because of Public Spirit.

The cities of Worcester, Mass., and Syracuse, N. Y., illustrate generally the differences between New England and Middle states city governments. In 1880 the two cities were nearly equal in population. They are both manufacturing cities, situated in the interior, and surrounded by agricultural communities. In 1880 Syracuse had 92 miles of streets, 17 3-4 miles of which were paved. The annual cost of maintaining these highways was about $35,000. For the same cost Worcester maintained 197 miles of streets, all of which were paved.

The water works of Syracuse were owned by a private corporation, those of Worcester by the city. Syracuse had no parks, unless a small square or two may be thus dignified; Worcester had about thirty-five acres of parks. The drainage system of Worcester was much more elaborate and perfect than that of Syracuse. While it cost Syracuse from $10,000 to $12,000 a year to clean its ninety-two miles of streets, it cost Worcester only $3,300 to clean its 197 miles of streets.

The police force of Worcester was larger and more expensive than that of Syracuse. On an expenditure of $104,696 the New York city maintained eighteen schools, in which were taught about 7,000 pupils; the Massachusetts city maintained thirty-six schools and instructed 9,000 children for $139,722. The fire department of the one consisted of four steam engines, one fire extinguisher, one hook and ladder truck and five hose carriages; that of the other had five steam engines, twelve hose carriages, one extinguisher and three hook and ladder trucks. The annual cost of the first was $31,589, of the second $38,840.

A similar story might be told of almost any two cities taken indiscriminately from New England and from any other section of the country. The abode of the vigilant citizen in the United States is in that part of the country where the town meeting breeds a fine public spirit. Boston, with all its drawbacks and limitations, is governed with a higher regard and a more jealous care for the rights of private citizens than is any other city of its size in the Union.—Henry L. Nelson in Harper's.

The Secret of Keeping One's Temper.

A merchant in Alexandria had a dispute with a fellah, as a peasant is called, about the settlement of an account. The merchant was determined to bring the question to the court, to which the fellah objected. Desiring to make a last effort, the fellah called at the merchant's office one morning and asked the servant if his master was in. The merchant, hearing the inquiry and knowing who it was, called aloud from the office:

"Tell that rascal that I am not in."

The fellah, looking up toward him, calmly said:

"Well, sahib, God put thee in a better mind."

The merchant was struck with the meekness of this reply, and having looked more carefully into the matter he became convinced that the fellah was right and he in the wrong. He sent for the fellah, and after acknowledging his error he said:

"I want to ask you one question. How were you able to bear my abuse with such patience?"

"Sahib," replied the fellah, "I will tell thee. I was naturally as hot and violent as thou art. I knew that to indulge this temper was sinful, and I found that it was imprudent. I observed that men in a passion often speak loud, and I thought that if I could control my voice I should repress my passion. I have therefore made it a rule never to suffer my voice to rise above a certain key, and by carefully observing this rule I have entirely mastered my natural temper."—Philadelphia Times.

Hectic.

It was a cheap little clock, warranted to run three years, but it actually did keep on for six, and then, one morning, suddenly refused to do its duty longer. It was wound, shaken and then given up in despair.

Another series of efforts disclosed the fact that it would start for a moment and then stop.

"There!" said grandma, in one of its active intervals, "I think it's all right now."

"Oh, no, indeed," said Charlie. "It will stop in another minute."

"I don't know about that. It's ticking."

"Yes, but you can tell by the sound that something is the matter. This isn't a good, healthy tick. It's only a sort of a hectic."—Youth's Companion.

The Bargain Was Not Closed.

"He that will not when he may," is likely to repent his indecision for many a long day afterward. A lady who had spent a weary hour in "beating down" the salesman at a Turkish shop in Paris, returned the next day prepared to purchase. "I believe you said twenty francs," she began, taking out her purse. "Ninety, madame!" answered the smiling Turk. "But you came down to twenty!" "Ah, that was yesterday, madame! Everything goes up again in the night!"—Youth's Companion.
