PROBABLY MURDER.

District Attorney Bingham Concludes That a Crime Was Committed.

Prosecuting Attorney Bingham returned last night from Newberg where he was investigating into a fire which was probably set to conceal a murder.

In the burning ruins of an old vacant house on the river bank between Champoug and Newberg, as reported in the JOURNAL dispatches at the time, a dead body was found July 18, in the morning. The trunk only remained, the limbs being consumed by the fire and the skull bare of flesh, only two teeth remaining.

A Waterbury watch found on the body and a strip of dark clothing are the only means of identification. Public prosecutor's attention was called to a wound in the back which had evidently been made several days previous to the fire, as it was full of maggots and decayed.

The officer's investigation results in the conclusion that the wound in the back was a stab from a knife.

PERSONS SUSPECTED. Several persons were suspected of the crime. Straw and shavings had been carried from a shed near by and an old Irishman by name of Mike Mullen, who came up on the Alwood the night of the 15th and again left Salem July 18th, has been searched for in vain.

A Russian peddler who was seen near the house the Wednesday before also disappeared according to the habit of his craft.

One McCully, who has spent a year in the pen for trying to club a man to death for his money in Linn county, is now under arrest, and bound over after a preliminary hearing at Newberg. The coroner's jury also found that the body was that of an unknown man murdered by some person unknown.

Photographs by new Process. About one month ago we advertised the new process aristotype pictures, which we then tried, but owing to the inferior quality of the aristotype paper obtainable, we abandoned the use of it until such time as we can get good paper. We quote below from a letter received from our stock holder:

St. Louis, June 30, 1914. To the trade: We quote the following from the American Aristotype Co.:

"Jamestown, N. Y., June 20, 1914. Mr. H. A. H-ytt, 8th and Locust Sts., St. Louis, Mo., Dear Sir:—Our product still contains a slight excess of dirt, and while this prevents the use of it until such time as we can get good paper. We quote below from a letter received from our stock holder:

For a few days, therefore, until our paper runs fully up to standard, we shall put our entire product under the brand of 'seconds', and give the fraternity the benefit of the difference in price. You may recommend this paper as fully up to standard in every particular, with exception of a slightly increased percentage of dirt.

We shall cut in all sizes. Respectfully, AMERICAN ARISTOTYPE CO."

The above is the result of the enlargement of the factory at Jamestown, N. Y. Just as soon as the output of paper is of first quality, we shall resume the making of aristotype pictures.

THE SALEM-SEATTLE GAME.

Great Crowds Will Witness the Most Exciting Game of the Season.

Let our city turn out tomorrow and demonstrate that league baseball can be well supported at Salem. The game will be called at 3 p. m.

The crowds are coming from every direction and Wednesday will be the biggest ball day Salem has ever witnessed. There will be a grand parade with the band from the Willamette hotel at 1:30.

The Salem boys are in the best condition for playing they have ever been. The Seattle league team play at Portland today and will come up to Salem on the 11 a. m. train, the full team just as they play in all the great Northwest league games.

The batting order of the Salems will be as follows: Kelly, 3b; Stanley, c; Collett, 2b; Osborne, cf; Smith, rf; Leveyque, p; Booth, 1b; Lavan, ss; Mellen, lf; Jacobs, sub.

This is the best team Salem has ever had. The Seattle club will probably bat in its regular order.

Bets in small sums are even, while a number of large bets are out giving Seattle 3 to 1. Home people are backing Salem well.

Salem has now an opportunity to demonstrate that she can support a league baseball team. As the second city of Oregon, with a friendly feeling on part of all the surrounding country and with good railroad and steamboat facilities there is no good reason why with proper management the present Salem club might not be strengthened into a league club.

It will not be of the least consequence that the Salems may be defeated by the Seattles, (tho' we do not believe they will) the duty of Salem people is to show that our city can support a league club. The best way to do this is give good support to a league game.

Have you seen New York Park and the many new cottages built there this season? If not, call on the Globe Real Estate company and they will give you a drive through this popular Annex, and if you wish to buy a lot there they will sell you one for $100 and $125 per lot on easy terms.

CALIFORNIA FRUIT.

No Reason Why It Should Not Be Imported From Europe.

The fruit canning season opened a few days ago, and the members of the now canning combine are cogitating over their prospects. A few facts are patent to all. The fruit crop is large and the quantity of canned fruit put up this year will be larger than last year, if the prices offered by canners are sufficient to call it out.

By the time the whole fruit crop is picked, in the east and on this coast, jobbers will be able to reckon it up with some approach to accuracy and to determine what they can afford to pay for canned fruit. Of course there is a price at which they will take our whole product. People will eat all the canned fruit that is offered if it is cheap enough.

But when the markets are glutted consumers grow fastidious.

The competition which we are about to witness will prove beneficial if it awakens our fruit growers to the knowledge that the peaches grown in New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware are excellent, and if our canned peaches are to conquer the market of the great valleys they must be at least equal if not better goods than the process of Chicago can get from New York or Philadelphia. It is wasting time and money to ship inferior goods.

Of two fruits we have a practical monopoly. One of these is apricots, which are not grown in commercial quantities in the east. In this state we raise them in carload lots, and there is no fruit which is more luscious or more wholesome when it is properly canned. Whether the business of canning them has reached perfection, or whether, in consequence of the absence of competition, it is carelessly conducted, persons not in the trade are not able to judge.

But one thing experience teaches—when canned apricots are dear or are inferior in quality people consume canned peaches instead. It rests with the canners to decide whether we shall receive the full benefit of a market of which we now enjoy a monopoly.

The prune is another fruit in which we have no eastern competition. It is impossible to convert the eastern plum into a dried prune that will sell. Our plums are naturally suited for drying.

Between the California prune and the German or French prune it is sometimes hard to choose. The European fruit has generally a fine flavor, but the California fruit is so much larger and better looking that quite often it sells for more money in New York and Chicago. The prune promises to be quite as profitable a fruit to raise in this state as the apricot.

We shall this year have something like 5,000,000 pounds of prunes available for export, which is equivalent to 25,000,000 pounds of plums; the prunes are now worth about ten cents a pound, or two cents for the green fruit, but California prunes were wanted last year at fifteen cents at Chicago, and they have sold as high as twenty cents. Very few of our horticultural products sell as high as this.

In fruit, as in everything else, it is quality that tells. It is the best goods that bring in money; second class goods frequently net a loss. California is fitted to become the orchard of the world. But it will not become so until human ingenuity and human skill are enlisted in helping nature. There is a vague idea, especially among newcomers to this state, that fruit grows itself, and that any man can be a fruit grower. No person of common sense imagines that he can make a boot without apprenticeship, but there are lots of people who imagine that they can become successful horticulturists without study, observation or labor.—San Francisco Call.

King and Telegrapher. A sudden favorable turn of fortune does not always alienate the lucky individual from his habitual occupations. This more or less wise saw is applicable to the cause of the present king of Segon, who was put on the throne of his black kingdom by Colonel Archinard, when his royal predecessor, Ahmadou, took to flight for his safety.

Madamba, the present monarch, is a native of the country over which he at present rules, but was formerly controller of telegraphs at Senegal. Before accepting his royal state he made it a condition that his name should continue to be inscribed on the list of telegraph servitors, and that his situation of king should be considered as subservient to that of his original employment.

Madamba must have learned, either by intuition or from acute observation, that the lot of a monarch is less certain in these days than the position of an officer in the service of the "Postes et Telegraphes," and so preferred to keep in reserve what might one day prove to be a happy issue out of all his afflictions.

He has, no doubt, constantly one eye on his throne and the other one of memory on the office of his former telegraphic exploits. Should the future bring about for Madamba that change which is in the modern order of things, he may return to the tick tick of his former days, with the right to add to his title of preference that of "ex-king of Segon."

Politeness in telegraph offices, although once seriously complained of by M. Guy de Maupassant, is generally the rule, even with the ordinary employes; but should Madamba I of Segon ever return to his Senegalian business his clients may expect to be treated in right royal fashion by a man who never lost sight of business, even when promoted to the honors of an African throne.—Gallegani's Messenger.
