ITALIANS IN NEW FIELDS.

They Find Profit in a Weed That Most Farmers Deem a Nuisance.

Persons who travel down the Brooklyn boulevard in the direction of Coney Island of an afternoon will usually have their attention attracted by parties of Italians—men, women, boys and girls—loaded down with huge bundles. Some of them are puzzled by the sight. There are certainly no treasures in the way of rags, choice garbage and the like to attract such an army of expert scavengers. What, then, is it that these big bundles are made up of? This was the question that suggested itself to a man the other day, and he proceeded to investigate forthwith.

He found a new reason to wonder at the seeming intuition that leads an Italian in this country to earn his bread in ways and through means that our other adopted citizens never think of. Now he knows that down on the flat, low meadows that go to make up the town of Flatbush and on down to Gravesend the dandelion grows in such profusion that it is alleged to be a nuisance. The farmers down there go out in the morning and sow seed, and in the afternoon the energetic dandelion comes up and scatters the seed and reigns in its stead. Ordinary plants have no show against the vigorous, prolific weed. Therefore they hate it and wage war against it and see nothing but evil in its open yellow face.

One day a party of Italians, or it may have been only one, for that matter, was exploring this region of dandelions, and saw much in it to admire. The sequel has proved that he saw money in it. From that day Italians all the way from Mulberry bend might be seen far down on the Coney Island road every morning before sunrise eagerly plucking dandelions. The farmer saw it and chuckled. In the warm spring afternoons when he saw Italians of all ages and both sexes staggering up the dusty road under great bags loaded with the weeds he hated, actually carrying them away from his farm at their own expense, he more than chuckled. He laughed.

Now, that farmer was not wise in his day. He knew that the leaves of the dandelion plant when young are good to cook with pork or corned beef, and then to eat. The Italians who in these days are gathering these weeds by the cart load probably knew this, too. But they knew more. They knew that during the dandelion season, which extends from April until August or thereabouts, there are men in New York city who will pay good money for those same weeds; that these weeds are afterward turned into patent medicines, into food for silk worms and put to other uses, while its root is used in some cases as a substitute for coffee—a bad substitute, perhaps, but one that is used nevertheless.

And so it is that an army of Italians forsake New York every day and delve in the fields outside Brooklyn, while the Long Island farmer marvels. But when you come to consider the whole matter there is not so much to marvel at unless it be the mental faculty of the farmer and the marvelous faculty of the Italian for discovering new and profitable forms of labor.—New York Recorder.

An Indian's Haunted Grave.

On the shore of Oneida lake is an Indian's grave where at times light makes its appearance. It is described as a ball of fire about the size of a large orange, and sways to and fro in the air about twenty feet from the ground, confining its irregular movements within a space about 100 feet square. People have attempted to go near enough to solve the mystery, but it would suddenly disappear before they could reach it.

A very peculiar story is told by the neighbors near the spot. They claim that many years ago the locality was a part of an Indian reservation. A man of the name of Belknap frequently dreamed that there was a crock in the Indian cemetery containing immense treasures, and that if he was there at the hour when graveyards yawned he could secure it.

These dreams were repeated so often that they had a strong effect, and he went there with pick and shovel, according to instructions, but he failed to turn round three times when he found the crock, as the dream directed. He stooped to pick it up, but was stunned by a flash of lightning, and the crock disappeared. Since that time the spot has been haunted by the mysterious light.—Oneida Mail.

Text and Comment.

A family of devout Scotch people were very exemplary in their observance of religious duties, and were accustomed to read a portion of the Scriptures every morning and evening before offering prayer. One morning the head of this family happened to read the chapter in which an account is given of Sanson catching 300 foxes. When it was finished the old gentleman's wife interrupted him by saying, "John, I'm sure that canna be true, for our Isaac was as good a fox hunter as there ever was in the country, and he never caught but about twenty." "Hoosh, Janet!" said he; "ye mauna always tak' the Scriptures just as it reads. Perhaps in the 300 there might ha' been eighteen or maybe twenty that were real foxes. The rest were all stunks and woodchucks."—Boston Gazette.
