THE BOISE DROWNING.

Terrible Affliction of the Family—Details of the Beach etc. The JOURNAL of Wednesday evening brought the first news of the drowning of Miss Helen Boise at Long Beach, Wa.

THE BEACH where the drowning took place is very wide and almost as shallow as a bay. It is fully four miles out to sea and there is very little possibility of the body being carried out.

Decayed was the elder daughter of circuit Judge R. P. Boise of Salem. She was born on her father's farm in Polk county, and was a graduate with high honors at Willamette university.

The young ladies of the W. R. Corps have arranged to give a social dance at G. A. R. hall on Friday evening of this week. Mary Ellen McBoe, a 17-year old daughter of Samuel and Ellen McBoe at Fall Creek Bridge died August 4th.

Attendant Martindale and his wife who was also an attendant at the asylum are reported to have resigned. He goes into the restaurant business at Portland. E. C. Young and wife, of La Crosse, Wis., are guests of their former townspeople, I. L. Kimber and family, while on a tour of the Pacific coast.

There is a fine opportunity for the street committee and sidewalk and sewer builders to ascertain which way the water runs on Salem streets. At 4 p. m. nearly every street was a running water course, except where great sheets stood at a dead level.

stopped at 3:30 p. m. and for 20 minutes not a wheel moved. Manager Barnes mounted a hack and drove to the electric power house. The main belt had flown off the dynamo and a shock had scared the employes considerably.

At about the third clap of thunder at 4 p. m. a bolt struck in the vicinity of the Capitol engine house. No one was in the building but Capt. Price, who saw a flash in the engine house that made all light as only an electric light can, and a report like a musket was heard.

ARSENIC AND AMMONIA.

Remarkable Contrast in the Effects of Two Poisons on the Complexion. The slow absorption of many poisons changes in some more or less modified form the complexion, but arsenic and ammonia show their effect about as quickly as any.

The effects of ammonia upon the complexion are directly the opposite to that of arsenic. The first symptom of ammonia poisoning which appears among those who work in ammonia factories is a discoloration of the skin of the nose and forehead.

Many people are slowly absorbing ammonia poison without knowing it. The use of ammonia in the manufacture has greatly increased of late, and it is unquestionably used as an adulterant in certain food preparations.

Official analysis have plainly showed its use even in such cheap articles of every day consumption as baking powders. The continued absorption of ammonia in ever minute quantities as an adulterant in food is injurious not merely from its effect upon the complexion, but because it destroys the coating of the stomach and causes dyspepsia and kindred evils.

Prof. Long, of Chicago, is authoritative for the statement that, if to fifty million parts of water there is one part of ammonia, the water is dangerous.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited, and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring-time or, in fact, at any time, and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

Feeling For Felines. The On Lee Co. is moving into new quarters next to the auction store on State, and one of the firm has a pet cat with a litter of half grown kittens.

"He no save," said John, as the old cat went meowing about, and her frightened family answering catcalls from all parts of the building.

"One cat heap good. Two too much," said John as a shade of Oriental regret seemed to creep over his face as he contemplated the numerous feline progeny and their apparent distress. Last seen, he was gathering them all up in a box to move them.

Baby cried, Mother sighed, Doctor prescribed: Castoria!

BAPTIZED IN THE OCEAN.

Swan's Island, though lying in sight of Outer Long Island, Mount Desert, contains one of the happiest and most law abiding communities to be found in all the earth. With a population of but 811 it maintains good schools and two churches, one of which is a modern edifice, handsomely finished inside and out, and having a sweet sounding and costly bell.

For some time there has been a great religious interest manifested; more than half the people there are members of one of the two churches, which are Methodist and Baptist, and on Sunday twenty-seven were baptized in the Atlantic by the Rev. Mr. Dunn, of Waterville, and Rev. Mr. Hall, of Clifton.

Imagine first an island in midocean. Upon one side is a little hamlet, nestled down close by the sea, wherein are two old wharves and a beach of sand, the latter as long perhaps as the platform of the upper station in Lewiston.

Back of the beach is a small bluff as high as a two story house, and on this 400 of the islanders are gathered. The sky is clear, with the wind so brisk as to send the sea gulls sailing swiftly and with constant wing across the sky, while under them and not more than fair gunshot away a school of seals swim and dive for herring. The waves are broken somewhat by an outer point, but they roll in and recede fully twenty feet. Just at the tip of the wet sand there gather the twenty-seven candidates, with friends and a choir to the number of 100.

There has been no preparation for this baptism in the matter of clothing, either for the person to be baptized or the clergy; fifteen stalwart young fishermen dressed in their best, even wearing their watches; twelve women in white summer dresses and low shoes; the ministers in black suits as they came upon the island, and as they stood in the pulpit and preached and prayed. A gospel song floats out upon the air and is hurried away over the heaving sea and over the seals, who lift their heads and listen, and then preacher and fishermen walk out into the green waves.

The song ceases, the baptismal rite is performed, and again the tuneful hymn is heard. The other clergyman is already walking in, and all the while, as the men and women come from out the water, relatives and friends rush about them, crying with excitement and joy, kissing and caressing.

"Yes," said one stalwart fisherman, "the Saviour called me this morning. I thought I would be baptized later over on Mount Desert, but he kept calling, and this morning I took my boat and started for over here. I had heard winds and beat over. I must have sailed twenty miles to get eight, but here I am, and I'm glad I came."

Kissing the Book. The custom of swearing on the Bible comes from the ancient Jews, who at first touched their phylacteries—small cones containing strips of parchment inscribed with texts from the Old Testament—in taking oaths, and later laid their hands on the book of the law, and all the various customs of taking oaths in different countries have a similar origin.

The early Anglo-Saxons regarded stones as sacred to their gods, therefore laid their hands on a pillar of stone. In medieval times it was customary to touch a relic, and this was regarded as giving the oath more sacredness than when sworn upon the missal, or prayer book. Another custom of the same times was swearing by churches. A certain number were mentioned, and the attester was obliged to go to each one, take the ring of the church door in his hand and repeat his oath.

The custom of kissing the cross to attest an oath has been observed in Russia from very early times, and has extended into other countries. According to the laws of the Order of the Garter, in the time of Henry VIII, Knights Templar were required in taking oath to touch the book and kiss the cross. Since the Reformation the taking of oaths by kissing the Bible has not been permitted in Scotland. In other portions of Great Britain it is the common method.—Detroit Free Press.
