NEW CORPORATIONS. — Articles are filed by Frank Sperling, W. S. Mason, Mose Meyer, C. C. Clark, and John L. Ayer, of Portland, for "The Portland and Northern Railway," stock, $10,000, to construct lines as follows: Portland to Springwater, Clackamas county; Milwaukie to Springwater; Sellwood to Springwater; Springwater to Falls on South Fork of Clackamas; roads may be horse, steam or electric. Also by Jesse D. Carr, G. W. Smith, and Ross Trayner, of Linkville, Or., stock, $60,000. "The Carr Canal and Irrigation Co., of Klamath, county."

CAPTURED.—The escaped trusty convict, Edward Whitlock, was recaptured by Deputy Sheriff Waln at 3:30 Thursday in the lower part of the county. Wednesday morning he was within ten minutes walk of the man at one time. Whitlock was weak from exposure in the storms and pretty badly crippled. At one Jones' he had exchanged his prison overalls and rubber coat for a suit throughout. He will be no more encouraged by the confidence of the prison managers, and Deputy Waln rejoices over the $50 reward.

ROAST MELON.—A car of watermelons from Grants Pass arrived at noon for John G. Wright and Squire Farrar. The car had evidently caught fire enroute for Salem. A hole was burned through the side at the door, which being discovered was put out by the train hands. To do this the door had to be broken out and a good many of the melons were smashed and quite a number done brown, some burned black and cooked through. At 2 p. m. the consignees had made an adjustment with the company to stand the loss.

MEETING SUCCESS.—The Keeley Institute for the cure of liquor, opium and tobacco habits, located at 423½ First street, Portland, has never been without patients since the first week of its existence, says the manager, and has now eleven persons under office treatment—three for opium, five for liquor and three for tobacco habits. A failure to cure after a complete course, is unknown. Sufferers and their friends should investigate.

AT MYRTLE CREEK.—Over one hundred men are now employed at the Myrtle Creek mines and about fifty more will be sent out in a day or two. Work on the big ditch is being pushed rapidly and will be completed about October 1st. Dr. Brown brought in about $1200 in gold from there last week.—Eugene Register.

THE STREETS.—The ordinance committee is laboring at the plans and specifications submitted by the citizens for street improvement, and will have it ready for action by next meeting.

SPACE IN PAVILLION.—Parties wishing space in the grand pavilion building at the state fair, will make application early to secure same by calling on or addressing Wm H. Savage, Salem, Superintendent of pavilion. 8 7-d-tf

THE BOISE FATALITY.

A Continuous Theme of Regret—The Drowning as Described by Eye Witnesses.

The unfortunate death in the waves of Miss Nellie Boise continues to be a theme of local regret and the story, coupled with expressions of sorrow, was on every tongue. Judge Boise felt the terrible blow more deeply as time wore on and Thursday he took a train to go to the scene of the disaster and try to do all in his power to recover the body. Nellie was his favorite child. When the judge was striken down at Albany a few years ago with a deadly fever she was by his side day and night and while all the family did all in their power no attentions were so soothing, no nursing so effective and no watcher so tireless and faithful as that of his daughter Nellie. She was the secret pride of his life, the joy of his heart and her death is his great loss.

Thursday evening the Marion Square Lawn Tennis club met, resolved to meet no more this year and beautifully decorated the grounds with floral wreathes. There will be other memorial exercises in her honor.

There is some feeling that the escort of Miss Boise did not make proper effort to rescue Miss Boise. Being the stronger of the two and a good swimmer at first glance it does not seem just that she should have been lost. But the story of all the eyewitnesses is that Mr. Lombard made a heroic effort to save Miss Boise and nearly lost his own life in the effort.

THE STORY OF EYE WITNESSERS.

Marshall Steel, son of James Steel, and cousin of Wille Steel, was at the beach at the time of the drowning, and had been bathing. He was not in the surf at the time.

He describes it thus: "Bathing was considered better at Stout's than at the other place.

We waded out, and separated. Willie got away from me just as I reached a waist depth, but my feet struck a stick which I mistook for a small log, and fearing injury I returned to the shore.

Hardly had I reached dry sand when I saw every one make a scramble to get ashore, and then I noticed that there was trouble. I only saw Willie once. He was riding on the crest of a breaker and seemed to be very weak. I ran down to the water, but he had disappeared from view.

Ben Lombard worked like a giant to save Miss Boise, but it was an impossibility.

The instant almost that he clasped her a wave with fresh undercurrent came in and tore her from him, and and at the same time dashed Lombard senseless. He was borne to the shore and brought to consciousness.

We were not out any further than usual, and old-timer bathers say they never saw anything that equaled those waves and tows at that place.

It came up like a flash, and in a few moments, which seemed centuries, it was gone."

YOUNG JOHNSON'S STORY.

Master Nallow Johnson, son of W. Carey Johnson, was in the midst of the trouble, and but for the end of a log which was thrown in, he, too, might have drowned.

"I think," said he, "that had Willie been cool he might have saved himself. He stood as good a show as any one else, but he got terribly excited, and fought the waves fiercely. In this way he was soon exhausted. Had he remained self-possessed, I think he could have weathered it through.

"When the terrible waves came in it seemed that the beach was made of quicksand and that our feet were laced in throngs, for one could no more stand steady than he could fly.

WAVE AFTER WAVE.

"The surf came in from the southward and wave followed upon wave. Lombard made a heroic effort to save Miss Boise. Everyone was so excited, including myself, that no one remembers all the incidents connected with the disaster any too clearly. The prevailing idea was to save one's own life, and the life of some one else, if possible. Had the tow kept up a minute longer, there is no telling but all would have perished. "The undertow ceased at a distance of at least 200 feet out, and could they have known this and reserved their strength all could have escaped.

State Treasurer Metschan is in Portland.

Governor Pennoyer was in his office today.

Hon. M. L. Chamberlin has returned from a few weeks spent in the Sound country.

Wm. Wicke has the contract for the painting of the University.

Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Matthews and Mrs. T. H. Barnes are at Newport.

Mrs. A. Coolidge of Colfax, chaperons Miss Anna Thornton and Miss Grace Scriber to Nescowin.

Mrs. B. P. Strong will spend a month with her daughter, Mrs. W. S. Kinney, at Astoria, and at Gearhardt Park.

Mr. Nuruburger, who made all the rustic seats on the asylum lawns has gone to Turner to teach school.

King Hibbard says grain is not damaged by the rain. If the weather should clear by Sunday it will be all right. A week of rainy weather would be disastrous to the biggest crop this valley has ever had.

Senator Coggswell, of Lake county, who was such an efficient representative of all corporation interests in the legislature last winter, is still in the city.

A test was made at 12 m., of the new fire alarms run in from the cannery and woolen mills. They worked with perfect success, and other private lines will be run in to the Capital Engine house.

The first plowing of the season was done by R. R. Ryan Thursday on a tract owned by Hofer Bros. It was sowed to turnips. R. R. Ryan is an enterprising farmer.

Alonzo P. Carr, an old soldier, Co. I. 48th Indiana, died Thursday at the asylum. The G. A. R. conducted his burial.

Nettie Cook of Independence, a sister of Mrs. O. D. Rennie, died Aug. 6. Mr. and Mrs. Rennie attended the funeral.

B. F. Sanders, who works on the works on the Capitol Mills, was hurt by a fall through a hatchway. He is able to be about.

J. C. Caywood has bought a farm near Sweet Home and today went up to look after it.

Salem people from Waterloo and Soda Springs say those are splendid places for summer resorts and that the waters are very fine.

Seth R. Hammer has returned from Soda Springs.

There is some talk that it is to late to make permanent street improvements. It is not to late to make a beginning. The gutters and curbing should go in at least.

Resolutions Upon the Death of Mrs. I. N. Gilbert.

Whereas: Our dear friend, Mrs. I. N. Gilbert, has been prematurely removed from our midst by the hand of death, therefore, be it resolved:

1st. That in the untimely death of Mrs. I. N. Gilbert, we have suffered an irreparable loss.

2nd. That as a Sunday School we owe an everlasting debt of gratitude to Mrs. I. N. Gilbert for her earnest, Christian work in behalf of the school from the time of its organization to the very date of her death.

3rd. That we attribute much of our Sunday School's well earned success to Mrs. Gilbert's loyalty to the work of Christ, to her devotion to duty and to her untiring patience amid discouragements.

4th. That we do hereby express our most profound sympathy for all the members of her family so suddenly called to mourn the death of one so dear to them.

5th. That it is the sense of this Sunday School that we do not mourn as those without hope, but on the contrary, we believe that Mrs. I N. Gilbert has gone into a higher state of never ending existence and that she has already heard the welcome plaudit "Well done, thou good and faithful servant" and that she is now sitting at the feet of our dear Savior whom she delighted to serve while here upon the earth.

Newton Beers in his Great Play "Lost in London."

This play is full of pathos and contains many dramatic situations of an exciting character, as well as enough wit and comedy to keep back the tears. The plot is consistent and the dialogue of the highest order.

Mr. Beers is a great actor. He is gifted with a voice of great power, with tones of rare richness; this nature gave him, and by studious application of art, he controls it with masterly power.

In Nellie Armroyd, Miss Randolph is sympathetic to a degree that brings tears to the eyes of many. Maud Carter in "Tiddy" is clever and cute.

The play is most intelligently mounted, the tableaux being very effective and beautiful. At the opera house tonight.

DIED.

BANTA.—At the home on the state fair grounds, near Salem, August 5, 1891, Clarissa L. wife of A. N Banta.

Deceased was born in 1859, and had for many years been a sufferer from consumption. Mr. Banta is superintendent of the fair grounds, and lived with his family in the residence there.

The funeral was conducted at 1 o'clock today from the home, the interment being in the I. O. O. F. cemetery.

BURLEIGH.—At the home of Mrs. Gale, near the corner of Liberty and Court streets, at 6 o'clock p. m., Thursday, Aug. 6, 1891, Eebenezer L. Burleigh, aged about 70 years.

The funeral will be conducted today by the G. A. R. post of this city.

COX.—Effie, wife of Gregg Cox, at Wasco, Gilliam county, Aug. 6, 1891, aged nearly 30 yeays, after an illness of three months, of consumption.

Deceased was a niece of Mrs. J. Q. Wilson, of Salem, and sister of Dr. H. E. Beers, of Wasco, and formerly of Salem. She leaves a husband and two children. The remains were brought to Salem today for burial, beside her mother, at the I. O. O. F. cemetery. Mr. Beers and wife, Mr. Cox and his father and a Mr. Morris, accompanied the remains.

SHIPPING ORANGES IN PARAGUAY.

The two principal ports for shipping oranges are San Lorenzo and San Antonio. We stayed at the latter, a lovely spot on the Paraguay river, with a strand of yellow sand, banks fringed with lilies and in the background trees, some of them forming masses of lilac bloom. The port consists of a square of sand, with the cabin and flag of the custom house, or resguardo, and a short wooden jetty to the right. A roughly traced road leading into the interior past a sort of store or tambo, and to the left a large tent stretched over palm poles, with a lattice floor made of bamboo.

This tent was full of oranges; on the sand outside were other mountains of oranges, and carts drawn by yokes of two or four oxen, preceded by the driver, wearing a long poncho and carrying a bamboo goad, kept groaning and creaking down the slope, and depositing other golden piles along the beach. Under the shady curtain of trees were seated groups of men, women and children, with oranges, bananas, mandioca, parrots, blue jays and monkeys, which they hope to sell, but at the same time make no effort to offer their merchandise, preferring to remain calm and indifferent, sucking mate through silver bombillas.

The steamship is moored alongside, and a long gangway of planks is laid on high trestles from the paddle box to the shore; then, when all is ready, about sixty women and girls and ten men set to work, some to carry baskets full of oranges, others to hand the baskets from beside the paddle box to the upper deck, others to pass the baskets on from this point to the corral or inclosure that has been built behind the pilot house, and others still to pass down the empty baskets. The carrying is all done by women, who form a procession passing continuously up and and down the gangway, and generally at a run.

They are Paraguayans, Guaranis and other Indians and mulattoes of various shades, clad in white, rose, scarlet, yellow and other bright colored Manchester cotton stuffs; all are barefooted, and most of them are without beauty, but gay and ready to laugh and scream without pretext, merely for the sake of being lively and making a noise. They are like birds and monkeys. Hour after hour this operation goes on. Women and young girls alike have cigars in their mouths in the usual Paraguayan fashion.

The rapid movement of brightly clad figures passing in opposite directions, with the glare of the yellow mountains of oranges and of the dazzling white tent on the shore, ends by hypnotizing one, and yet the scene is so original that one continues to watch it in spite of one's self. For that matter, there is nothing else to do. The village, buried in orange trees, is soon visited; to walk for any distance along the river is rendered difficult by the overhanging trees, and so one remains leaning over the rail, and watching the women and girls toiling, while the men—husbands, fathers or brothers—loaf on the shore, smoke or play cards, according to the custom of Paraguay, where the women do the work while the men enjoy life.

The steamer was supposed to take 250,000 oranges, but there being no means of control it is probable that, in order to allow for loss, the shipper put on board at least 300,000. These oranges, of fine flavor and aspect, are worth one Paraguayan dollar a thousand at San Antonio. The women, who carry the baskets on their heads, are paid eighty centavos a day, and the harvest of the fruit lasts eight months, beginning at the end of May. The freight from Paraguay to Campana, and from Campana by schooner to La Boca, together with the loss from putrefaction and rough handling during the journey, brings the retail price of a good orange in Buenos Ayres to about two cents.—Theodore Child in Harper's.

Abusing a Kicker.

It may be true that people have a certain sort of dread of a "kicker," and they may occasionally grant him favors rather than engage in a quarrel, but in the long run the "kicker" is not a successful man. The people finally get even with him. We have noticed that the best business men, and the men who make a great success of anything, are not "kickers." It is not a good business policy to quarrel over everything.

There is fault enough to be found, but it is not good policy to be always grumbling and complaining. There are occasions when it becomes a man's duty to "kick," and "kick" hard, but these are rare. As a rule people are disposed to grant a man his rights. If it would do any good to "kick" for rain during a drouth we should believe in it, but the facts seem to be that "kicking" generally gives a man a bad temper and nothing else.—Atchison Globe.

A Queer Suit.

Here is a queer case for an action. A man was insane and determined to throw himself out of the window of the asylum. He made several attempts, and was prevented by the servants. Put in a new apartment he tried it again, jumped out of the window, fell on the lawn, injured himself seriously, but, strange to say, the shock cured his mental disorder. At once he sued the officers of the asylum for negligence. The plaintiff was non-suited. There is a delightful legal quibble about this, for the pros and cons are many.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Woe to the Conquered.

The Romans cried "Vae Victis!" "Woe to the conquered!" at their triumphs. To-day many of us are being conquered—our peace, our rest and daily appetite wrested from us by that invader of the stomach, dyspepsia. Succor we sue for from a hundred sources. Temporary relief we sometimes obtain. But a hearty meal, the simplest indiscretion in diet, and the Proteian imp returns with redoubled vigor to torment us. A persistent use of the great anti-dyspeptic and regulating tonic, Hostetters Stomach Bitters, is best calculated to drive into permanent banishment every form of indigestion, temporary or chronic. No less efficacious is it for malaria, biliousness, constipation, rheumatism, kidney and bladder ailments. This remedy of specific utility and many uses overcomes them all. 'Tis a safeguard, too, against the effects of temperature apt to revive an attack of "La Grippe."
