After a minute or so of close reflection, during which he bit his nails in fla most agitated and excited manner, Mr. McParson prepared to put his idea into effect. He had heard that the sleeping fancies of people in the young lady's state might sometimes be shaped or modified by external circumstances And he now intended to make a des perate effort to influence his slumbering companion through these means.

His first experiment was to rap sharply with his knuckles on the door of the compartment, anxiously watching the sleeper's face as he did so. With a thrill of excitement, almost of triumph, he saw her lips move, and heard her drowsily murmur, "Come in."

This preliminary success stimulated him to persevere with his intention.
