"August Flower"

"I inherit some tendency to Dyspepsia from my mother. I suffered two years in this way; consulted a number of doctors. They did me no good. I then used Relieved in your August Flower and it was just two days when I felt great relief. I soon got so that I could sleep and eat, and I felt that I was well. That was three years ago, and I am still first-class. I am never Two Days. without a bottle, and if I feel constipated the least particle a dose or two of August Flower does the work. The beauty of the medicine is, that you can stop the use of it without any bad effects on the system. Constipation While I was sick I felt everything it seemed to me a man could feel. I was of all men most miserable. I can say, in conclusion, that I believe August Flower will cure anyone of indigestion, if taken Life of Misery with judgment. A. M. Weed, 229 Bellefontaine St., Indianapolis, Ind." ❁

An Old Trick in a New Dress.

Two cyclers were resting their weary limbs on West Jackson street. Their safeties leaned against a contiguous horse post and the recumbent wheelmen lolled on the grass and puffed the invincible cigarette. Into the midst of this picturesque group strolled a wanderer, a weather beaten, bearded tramp. Eyeing the bicycles with a wistful gaze, he said:

"Them things hard to ride?"

"Not at all," was the reply.

"Think mebbe I could straddle one of 'em," soliloquized the gentleman of infinite leisure, and added: "Say, do you think I could ride it?"

"Get on and try."

Selecting a wheel the tramp climbed on, lost his balance and fell off, while the two cyclers roared with laughter, and a crowd began to gather. Again he vainly attempted to mount, and again came a roar of laughter.

"I say," he pleaded, "won't one of yous hold the outfit till I get on?"

The accommodating joker complied, and the tramp got under way while the assembled audience prepared for more laughter. One foot came down, then the other. Again the pedals made the circuit, and the wheelman applauded:

"Good boy; keep it up, keep it up!"

And the tramp did. There was a sudden bending of the back, a swift spurt, and the astonished young man gazed on the wanderer going down West Jackson street with the speed of the wind.

One safety bore a double load returning home that night, for the tramp did not return.—Chicago News.

Learning to Use Pockets.

One of the graduates at West Point says: "I am now trying to relearn the use of pockets. For five years I have been without that pleasant domestic feature in my trousers, and I am glad to find that they are still in vogue. Very few people are familiar with the binding nature of the routine at the government school. In my course there I have been away from the Point once on a two or three days' leave. Yet I have not found the restraint irksome. The work is hard but pleasant, and one must be hard to please who cannot find a congenial set of friends there.

"Before taking my leave of absence, granted for six weeks after graduation, I selected a certain number of posts of those submitted to me—three selections were allowed me—and ran my chances on getting the one of the three I most cared for. The government always sends the new men west, but does not summarily dismiss them to some wilderness without consulting their preferences in the matter.

"For instance, out of the available posts submitted to me I chose one on the coast, one in Colorado and one in Kansas. According to the vacancies which may exist I am sent to one of these three. Naturally the posts with the best reputation for life are pitched on by the vast majority. There may be but a vacancy or two to fill. A man's standing at the completion of his course has a great deal to do with his getting the best."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Sewage of Paris.

Paris, like all other great cities, has been much concerned with the question how to dispose of sewage. At present most of the outflow of the collecteurs pours into the Seine, to its serious pollution. But some years ago the municipality purchased several thousands of acres of land in the plain of Gennevilliers, a few miles down the river, and began the experiment of a sewage farm. The project has been an unqualified success.

An extension from the Pere-Lachaise-St. Denis collecteur carries a large quantity of sewage to the farm, where it is used by irrigation as a fertilizer, with the best of results in every way. At present one-fifth or more of the total sewage effluent of Paris is used on the land at Gennevilliers, and in due time the whole quantity can be diverted from the river to this and other tracts of land which have been selected as suitable for the purpose.—Dr. Albert Shaw in Century.

McKinnon's Old Soldier Story.

Napoleon met an old soldier who had lost an arm. "My friend, how did you lose that arm?"

"Fighting for you, sire."

Napoleon, moved, responded with a handful of coins.

"Sire," said the veteran eagerly, "what would you give if I had lost the other too?"

"I would give you the Cross of the Legion of Honor."

"With your own hand?"

"With my own hand."

Quick as thought the old soldier drew his sword and slashed off his remaining arm at the shoulder.

Very affecting! But then the question arises, how did he manage to do it?—Pall Mall Budget.

"Stand Up," Marshall P. Wilder.

Of course you know Maze Edwards. He used to be treasurer in the Fifth Avenue box office, and is a very little man, like myself. One day as I went in to get some tickets he was standing at the window selling, his head just coming up to the ledge of the window. Mine just came up to the edge outside, and in my naturally deep voice I opened up and said, "Give me two seats in C, please."

"Stand up!" he called angrily, thinking I was a tall man who had stooped down to guy him.

"Stand up yourself!" I answered quickly, at which, recognizing the joke, we both laughed heartily.—Marshall P. Wilder.

How's Your Liver?

A very unnecessary question to ask a man whose skin and eyeballs are saffron-tinted. Of course his tongue, too, is furred, bowels constipated, head bothered with aches, right side region plagued with constant uneasy sensations. These you may take for granted, although he may not particularize them, because they are among the invariable accompaniments of liver trouble. Are they chronic? If so, you may be sure he does not, as he ought to do, take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the leading regulator of livers that are out of order. I commend it to him as highly as you please, you can't say a word too much in its behalf for its headaches, constipation, nausea, dyspepsia and the yellow hue of the skin specially depart when that remedy is resorted to. Malaria, the emanation and la grippe are also among its ladies which it remedies and prevents. A wineglassful three times a day confers appetite and digestion.
