Wednesday morning about half past 10 Private Kemper, of Co. D, Fourteenth infantry, while walking in his post as sentry in front of the guard house of the barracks, at Vancouver, Wash., deliberately unfixed his bayonet, loaded his gun, and placing the muzzle to his eye, blew the roof of his head completely off. Some time ago Kemper was discharged and intended going East to visit his wife, who resides in Baltimore, but while in Portland was drugged and robbed of everything he had, so he returned to Vancouver and re-enlisted. He was a man who at times drank a little too freely.

THE HOLY THORN OF GLASTONBURY

An Account of a Tree Which Formerly Was Said to Grow in England.

The legend of the holy thorn of Glastonbury is very old, and, until very recent times, was quite generally believed in, in spite of its absurdities. The original legend was that St. Joseph of Arimathea landed not far from Glastonbury, England, and that he and his companions went to a hill near the town and there rested for a few hours. Upon making the halt St. Joseph is said to have thrust his staff, a dry hawthorn stick, into the ground, and that it grew and blossomed, being constantly in bud or full bloom.

The first account of this miraculous tree found in print bears date of 1722. This states that the tree had a double trunk in the days of Queen Elizabeth, but that during her reign a Puritan, taking offense at the tree's observance of Christmas (for it is said to always bloom, no odds how cold the weather, on Jan. 6, "Old Christmas"), hewed down the largest of the trunks. For this act of desecration the Puritan was punished by accidentally cutting one of his legs and by the loss of one eye, which was injured by a chip from the sacred thorn.

Although the tree had been felled to the ground, it still adhered to the stump by a bit of bark, and for thirty years the fallen part continued to flourish just as the standing branch did, and to always bloom at Christmas time. Finally the trunk, which remained standing, was cut down by a military saint in the time of King Charles I, and after that time the people of the vicinity did a thriving business in the sale of young shoots that sprang up at the base of the sacred tree.

For a century or more thorn trees continued to be shown in that neighborhood, each claiming to be the main shoot of the original Glastonbury thorn.

There is a curious story told in a British magazine of January, 1753. The change of the calendar from old to new style had just been made. A number of people visited the tree on Christmas day, new style, but it showed no signs of blooming. Therefore it was watched on Jan. 6, the Christmas of old style, when it was seen to bloom as usual.

In a work on British plants and trees, published in 1818, I find the following in regard to the winter blooming thorn tree of Glastonbury: "It does not now grow within the Abbey of Glastonbury, but in a lane beyond the churchyard on the other side of the street, by the side of a pit. It appears to be a very old tree. It has been reported to have no thorns, but that I found to be a mistake. It has them, like other hawthorns, but which also in large trees are but few. It blossoms twice a year. The winter blooms, which are individually about the size of a sixpence, appear about Christmas, or sooner if the weather be severe."—St. Louis Republic.

Earth's Nearest Neighbor.

Years ago it was supposed that Sirius was nearer the earth than any other star, and its light required over three years to reach us. Now, however, Alpha Centauri, a comparatively insignificant star of the southern heavens, is known to be our nearest neighbor, and Sirius is so far removed that the human mind fails to grasp the distance when expressed in miles.

The fact that light requires from seventeen to twenty years to cross the space between our little earth and this giant orb is scarcely more easy to comprehend. If one would appreciate the magnificence of this most brilliant of suns he should not think it as near, but rather let his mind make the vain attempt to follow a ray of light thither as it travels on, unwearied, day and night, at the rate of 180,000 miles a second for twenty years.—Boston Herald.

Waking Sleepers.

Of Dr. Francis Pringle's people it is narrated that some of his rural parishioners, whose week day employments were in the open field, being unused to a sedentary habit, would occasionally fall asleep during the sermon. For this offense his manner of reproof was somewhat original. After patiently permitting them to enjoy their nap for about ten minutes, or for such length of time as he deemed sufficient to refresh them, without saying one word or for a moment losing the calm and benevolent expression of his countenance, or making the least pause in his discourse, he would bring down a volume of David's Psalms on the big Bible that lay closed before him with such prodigious force that the crack resembled the report of a musket, and in an instant "murdered sleep."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Dogs as Military Messengers.

The successful experiments which have been made abroad with dogs as military messengers has caused the German authorities to employ them in yet another capacity on the field of glory. There are at the present moment a number of shepherds' dogs in training for finding the wounded on the battlefield, as formerly the St. Bernards were trained to find the frozen wanderers on the lonely paths of the St. Gotthard. The regiment of lancers stationed at Hueiben possesses a dozen of these shaggy coated members of the ambulance corps, which have been taught to hunt up any soldier hidden in the woods and fields in the neighborhood of the garrison. On finding a soldier, they run back and bark till the ambulance wagon arrives, when they return with it to the very door of the hospital. —Pall Mall Gazette.

Pitt's Oratory.

The highest impression imparted to me by words spoken was by those which I heard from Mr. Pitt, whose form is even now distinctly before me. His powers were of a mighty order, for none heard him without an absorbing interest, which is proof conclusive. You felt you had been charmed in the listening. It was even to that which you had been thinking of within yourself. There was the secret in his elocution as it is in the antique. In debate caught on the moment he saw intuitively into the minds of his hearers. He identified himself with them and impersonated their prevailing thought, which they with rapture heard in his gorgeous language.

In his periods of majestic correctness and sometimes so elaborate as to take two minutes in the delivery, he never turned from or broke in upon one impression which he felt was pervading the assembly; all was subordinated to its development—and yet tantalizing in expressing it—protracting as though to be surer of it—after an interval of breathless suspense, he then unfurled its full display, like that of Cæsar's mantle, at the instant of intensest expectation. They voted in delirium. He was the consummate master of his art, and the greatest leader the commons ever had or ever will have.—Pemberton Milnes.

The Cashier Was Sharp Also.

A new version of the flim flam game was tried on the cashier in Dennett's restaurant on Park row on Saturday, but the cashier recognized the game in time to beat the players. There were three of them, all young men, flashily dressed. Each laid a silver dollar down on the desk, and each laid a fifteen cent check beside his coin. While the cashier was fishing out eighty-five cents change for No. 1 in the row of men the men changed places in the row.

The cashier laid the eighty-five cents beside the first dollar, and No. 1 in the row, who had been No. 3 when the cashier began to make change, but was now nearest the door, swept both the dollar and the eighty-five cents change toward him, and was about to gather them up, when the cashier gathered in the pile with his right hand, while with his left he raked in the other dollars which still lay on the desk. Then he distributed the proper change to the men at leisure. They smiled viciously at him, but departed without a word.

"He tumbled blame quick," said one of the men as he stepped out of the door.—New York Sun.

Infantile Reasoning.

The process of the youthful mind when it gets to logical deduction is apt to be fearful and wonderful, and the adult intellect is not always easily able to follow:

At a kindergarten class not long since the teacher asked her pupils to give an example of a cylinder from some object which they had at home.

"Asparagus," one small boy responded very promptly.

"My mother had rhubarb," another said briskly, thus catching at half the cylinder idea, and yet improving an opportunity to boast of something which his family enjoyed.

The third, overcome by the connection of ideas on the culinary side, lost sight of the original proposition altogether and cried out with the air of one who is not to be beaten:

"Well my mother's going to make some root beer anyway!"—Boston Courier.

Peculiarities of Lichens.

The lichen is remarkable for the great age to which it lives, there being good grounds for believing that they endure as long as a hundred years. Their growth is exceedingly slow, almost beyond belief, indicating that only a little nourishment is necessary to keep them alive. In a dry time they have the power to suspend growth altogether, renewing it again at the fall of rain. This peculiarity alone is enough to make the lichen a vegetable wonder, as it is a property possessed by no other species of plant.

Another interesting fact about lichens is that they grow only where the air is free from dust and smoke. They may be said to be a sure indication of the purity of the air, as they are never found growing in cities and towns, where the atmosphere is impregnated with dust, soot, smoke and other impurities.—St. Louis Republic.

Stolen Dogs in Paris.

Stolen dogs that are to be sold to dealers are first rendered unrecognizable. If the animal has long hair, he is clipped; if he is black and white, the stealer blackens him all over with a dye mixture that holds its color for several weeks. Short haired dogs have their ears and tails cut. The dealers who sell these dogs may be frequently seen in the Champs Elysees, the Bois de Boulogne or in the public gardens, leading five or six animals at a time. Other dealers make their trades at the dog markets, of which there are two—on Sunday afternoons at the horse market on the Boulevard Port Royal, and on Tuesdays at the bird market on the Quai aux Fleurs. The dealers pay a tax of three cents for each place occupied by a dog.—Paris Cor. New York Epoch.

Florida's Aquatic Scavengers.

The city of Jacksonville protects catfish in the river as scavengers. It is a five dollar fine to catch one of them, and the fish seem to know it. The river is full of them, and they vary in size from a baby to a 200 pound man. —Atlanta Constitution.

Man and Beauty.

[illegible]

"Her grace of motion, and of look, the smooth
And swimming majesty of step and tread,
The symmetry of form and feature, set
The soul afloat, even like delicious airs
Of flute and harp."

For her matchless look of grace and motion, this regal beauty was indebted to perfect health, restored by the use of that unequaled, invigorating tonic and nervine, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which set in healthy action every function and gave purity and richness to the blood.

"Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhea, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, prolapsus, or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded.

DO YOU FAVOR

Building up a Strong, Independent Paper for the People in Oregon?

A PAPER THAT WILL NOT SELL OUT—Printed at the Seat of Government

LOOK AT THE RECORD OF THE CAPITAL JOURNAL.

During the recent session of the legislature it was the only paper in the state that attacked successfully the Portland dictatorship in state politics. It successfully opposed all doctoring the Australian ballot law in the interests of political bosses. It advocated the law (that passed) giving the Oregon railroad commission power to fix just and reasonable rates of freight and power to enforce its decisions. It successfully advocated retention of the old railroad commission as best qualified to enforce the law. It labored for all measures to open rivers and thus secure to the people the right to free and unrestricted use of the waterways.

ITS PLATFORM.

THE CAPITAL JOURNAL favors a reform in national finances, to the end that the present expensive monopoly system of supplying an inadequate currency may be supplanted by the government issuing direct to the people an adequate supply of legal tender money, with a coin basis sufficient to conform to sound banking principles. It favors election of all officials who legislate for, or are directly responsible to the people, by direct vote of the people. It favors raising all state revenues by a tax on the gross earnings of corporations, both foreign and state. It favors opening of waterways to the sea and a control of all common carriers to the end that the producer shall secure for his labor the largest net returns.

It favors retaining all powers possible in the hands of the people and government in the interests of the people, circulate this paper. For terms, see elsewhere.
